DANE FARMERS WIN PROSPERITY BY 'CO-OP' PLAN

Cut Out Middleman; Add to Profits.

Farmers of Denmark have established an effective system of production and marketing of their crops They are getting good prices and have eliminated the middleman. This is the first of a series of three articles on the Danish methods, written after thorough investigation by a Tribune correspondent. Additional articles will appear tomorrow and Tuesday.

COPENHAGEN, April 28.—Coöperation to the nth power, that does away with middlemen and small exporters and importers, has been achieved by the Danish farmer.

A movement entirely outside politics, its years of patient effort have been rewarded by one of the most efficient producing and marketing organizations in Europe, and Danish farmers today are getting a better proportionate price for their products than those of any other European country, based either on actual gold value or relation to wages.

Steers Clear of Politics.

The secret of the organization's success is that it has tackled the problem of cash returns at its base. Instead of crying for subsidies, for state aid, for long term credits, instead of lobbying for favorable legislation, it has [illegible] by plain business methods to [illegible]wn the cost of marketing goods, [illegible]n the cities and abroad, and it [illegible] succeeded to an unusual extent. The farmer of Denmark is prosperous today when trade is stagnant and factories idle. He has steered clear of these political shoals on which the hopes of so many like enterprises have been wrecked. The Danish farmer belongs to what political party he likes, votes as he pleases, and "saws wood."

His one disastrous splurge in politics as a "farm bloc" was an attempt to do away with protective tariff two years ago at a time when Danish industries needed all the protection they could get. He failed, and learned his lesson.

Has Limited Monarchy.

Denmark has been fortunate in [illegible]isting a harmonious government, a kingdom whose ruler is always ready to step down, if his people decide they would be better without him. This harmony has reflected itself in the everyday life of the farmers. They boast the best telephone system, telegraph lines, postal service, rural package delivery, rural communications in Europe.

For centuries the Danish farmer has been trained in the fundamentals of coöperation. He has owned land in common with other villages. Individual holdings outgrew that system, but still the villages were governed by joint action— little states within a larger state. Sixty or seventy years ago the coöperation movement as it exists today was born in a system of rural credit societies—born to a stormy youth during which the farmers were unmercifully fleeced by professional money lenders into whose hands the credit organizations fell.

Given Help of Law.

Redeemed from these by stringent legislation, the farmer developed his community ideas further. He met with many difficulties and made many mistakes before the present day system, which seems to be the best existing, was evolved.

Denmark is a country of 3,250,000 persons. Forty-five per cent of these are engaged in agriculture. They import their farm machinery from America and England, and today they market almost exclusively in England.

The production, assembling and marketing of their products are in the hands of a large central committee in Copenhagen with branches throughout the country. Machinery and supplies are purchased by the coöperatives, and in many cases are used coöperatively by the villages. But if a farmer wishes to purchase his own machinery, he does so through the coöperative branch of his village.

Has London Branch.

In London a branch of the coöperative exists, more as a warehouse than anything else, but the society deals directly with the retailer, and handles little if any trade through middlemen. More often than not shipments are made from Denmark directly to the small English villages in which the purchasers have their stores. When THE TRIBUNE correspondent visited the headquarters of the organization in Copenhagen, he

FISHER BOY, 10, AND SOLDIER ARE DROWNED IN LAKE

John Cuci, 10 years old, of 5943 Justine street, drowned in the lake at 63d street yesterday when he fell from the pier while fishing. His chum's shouts for help were unheeded by several men and boys until it was too late. The body was recovered several hours later.

John Emory, a private enlisted at Fort Sheridan ten days ago from Chicago, dove from a pier at the fort, was stunned when his head struck the bottom, and drowned.

Fred W. Prestman, a student at Lake Forest university, who was paddling by in his canoe, made an attempt to rescue him. Attempts at resuscitation failed.

HILL HEIRS LEAVE IT TO KELLY POOL

Mother's Property Settled by Nine Contestants.

St. Paul, Minn., April 28.—[United Press.]—Pills from a Kelly pool box decided division of $3,000,000 worth of personal property of the late Mrs. James J. Hill, widow of the railroad magnate, Louis J. Hill disclosed today.

Louis, who is chairman of the board of the Great Northern, said that Walter J. Hill, Montana ranchman, suggested the "lottery" method of dividing the property.

As the numbered "pills" rolled out on the table, heirs took art treasures and jewels, some articles of which were valued at thousands, it was declared.

Nine heirs were asserted to have participated in the division, which ended a dispute over Mrs. Hill's $11,500,000 estate, part of which was settled in court.

Among the interesting stories that has leaked out regarding this alleged family gamble is one which states that on the first shake of the box Walter Hill, whose happy thought had solved a difficult problem, drew No. 1, giving him first choice, and that the little god of chance further favored him on successive appeals to the bottle

1,000 Year Old Dance Mark Still Stands; Read This

PARIS, April 28.—[Tribune Radio.]—The present American dance records were broken 1,000 years ago, according to manuscripts discovered in Mount St. Michel monastery. Brakeman, Arm Broken, Runs Mile to Avert Wreck

Worcester, Mass., April 29.—Leonard J. Jones, 24 years old, brakeman on the Boston and Albany railroad, ran a mile and a quarter along the tracks to the Union station to flag a Boston to New York express early this morning, preventing a probable serious collision. He made the run suffering from a broken arm following an accident.

YOUTH, 17, HELD FOR BAD CHECKS AND AUTO THEFT

Barry Henderson, 17 years old, of Kansas City, Mo., a nephew of Carl Henderson, 300 Linden avenue, Oak Park, vice president of the Meihle Printing Press and Machinery company, was arrested yesterday charged with having forged the name of his uncle to a number of checks and attempted theft of an automobile.

Among the stores and corporations which have accepted the alleged forged checks in payment of purchases are Mandel Brothers, Marshall Field & Co., Capper & Capper, Hartman Trunk company and the Standard Oil company.

On April 24 the youth appeared at the salesrooms of the Wills Sainte Claire company, 2330 South Michigan boulevard, and looked over the stock of automobiles. He asked that a demonstrator be sent to drive him in a new car he had picked out. Blair Oliver was demonstrating the car when the wind blew his hat off. While he went to retrieve his hat Henderson drove away in the car. Police found Henderson in Mount Zion, Ill., yesterday. He is being held for further investigation. He came to Chicago, it is said, to enroll in a university.

HERRIN FOUND BLIND, DEAF TO MOB KILLINGS

Massacre Is Laid to Springfield.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Further coils of the "Herrin conspiracy" were unfolded today in the testimony before the legislative committee.

In executive session tonight in the offices of the miners' union lawyers, Fox Hughes, vice president of the Herrin Mine District union, told the story of the "truce that failed."

This is the first time it has been put in the record just what Col. Sam Hunter was relying on when he told Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black in Springfield on June 21 that an agreement had been reached and peace was in sight.

Col. Hunter, it was shown, was leaning on a weak reed. Representative W. R. Pierce said tonight this was the most important testimony yet given showing real responsibility for the riot

Calls Police Co-conspirators.

Other testimony brought a terrific panning from committee members for Herrin's police force, showing the paralyzing grip of the "conspiracy." Representative Michael Igoe, at the close of this phase of testimony, declared that these police officers were "co-conspirators" and should be indicted. It all presented a rare spectacle in courtroom scenes. Apparently there was no effort to tell the truth.

Hughes, who has been ill and was given a private hearing, told this story:

"I was in the miners' headquarters at Herrin on June 21. About 6 o'clock that evening I received a telephone call from a man who said he was Col. Hunter. He asked for Hugh Willis or Senator Sneed. They were out. He then told me that Lester had agreed to hoist a white flag and said we ought to do what we could to stop the trouble.

Told of the White Flag.

"I agreed we should, if the trouble was as reported. He said for me to go to the mine and see what I could do to avert trouble. He said there would be a white flag on the west dump. I got a piece of white bunting and stuck it in my shirt and got Ernest Burkland to drive me to Crenshaw crossing.

"There I had a good view of the west dump. A great throng of people were going up and down the road. I heard shots from the south and could see smoke from the guns and hear bullets.

"I looked for the flag, and there was no flag. I waited ten or fifteen minutes and returned to town. I learned that Willis had gone to Marion to see Col. Hunter. I stayed around town until 10 o'clock and then went home."

Saw Armed Men on Road.

Q.—Did you tell men you met on the road your purpose? A.—No.

Q.—Did you post any notice? A.—No.

Q.—How many men did you see on the road? A.—About 100.

Q.—Any armed? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you recognize any one? A.—I saw several faces I knew and one whose name I knew, but he is dead.

Q.—Did you think it important enough to inform Col. Hunter that the truce was not carried out? A.—I had not met him. I did not know where to find him in Marion.

Q.—Did you not know that unless something was done at once there would be a riot? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Didn't you want to avert it? A.—I did all I could. I did not see the flag and thought they were deceiving Hunter.

Q.—Wasn't it your duty to tell Hunter? A.—It might have been.

"Black Should Have Acted."

Sessions of the legislative committee have established that Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black had sufficient information on threatening conditions here on June 21 to justify him in ordering troops to Williamson county.

Testimony is that he was informed of the attack on nonunion trucks, the firing at the Lester mine, killing three, and raids on hardware stores for guns.

Whether Col. Sam N. Hunter, his officer in the field, actually asked for troops, is still a question.

The main fact appears to be that Black knew the situation and had an opportunity to send troops, and did not do so. Springfield must bear this blame.

Judge A. D. Morgan, testified today that on Tuesday evening, June 20, Hunter made a speech at the Lions club in Herrin, in which he said that the local authorities had the situation in hand and that troops would not be needed. This is in utter conflict with

Knute Nelson of Minnesota Found Dead

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—United States Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota died on a Pennsylvania railroad train en route from Washington to Chicago after leaving Baltimore tonight.

According to the railroad company, Senator Nelson was found dead on the train which left Washington at 6:50 p. m. The company arranged to have the body taken from the train at Harrisburg, Pa.

The train crew said that as the train was passing through Timonium, Md., eleven miles from Baltimore, the aged senator had an attack of angina pectoris and died in a few minutes.

With the senator were his niece, Mrs. Edith Truscott of Jennings Lodge, Ore.; George A. Wells Jr., insurance commissioner of Minnesota, and Walker W. Belford, deputy insurance commissioner.

Known as "Grand Old Viking."

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—The sudden death of Senator Knute Nelson [Rep., Minn.] on a train at York, Pa., today removed from the senate one of its most picturesque and influential characters.

Popularly known as "the grand old Viking," Senator Nelson had been a conspicuous figure in congress for nearly thirty years by reason of his blunt and outspoken habits, inherited from his Norse ancestors.

In the face of the rising tide of radicalism fomented by the Non-Partisan league in the northwest, Senator Nelson remained steadfastly conservative, defying the new movement, although he saw his colleague, Senator Kellogg, go down to defeat before it last fall.

Third in Length of Service.

In point of continuance service in the senate Senator Nelson stood third, only Senator Lodge [Rep., Mass.] and Senator Warren [Rep., Wyo.] outranking him. He entered the senate in 1895. When the Republicans regained control of the senate in 1918 Senator Nelson became chairman of the powerful judiciary committee. He will be succeeded as chairman of the committee by Senator Dillingham [Rep., Vt.].

Senator Nelson was born in Norway on Feb. 2, 1843. He came to the United States in July, 1849, and resided for a time in Chicago before he moved to Wisconsin. He enlisted in the Fourth Wisconsin regiment at the outbreak of the civil war and was wounded and taken prisoner at Port Hudson, La., in 1863.

After the war he went to Minnesota where he soon became active in politics. He served in many offices and was elected governor in 1892 and reëlected in 1894. He was elected to the senate in 1895 and was reëlected four times since then. His last term would have expired on March 4, 1925.

Ruled State's Politics.

His passing will create an upheaval in the politics of Minnesota, where he had ruled as the boss supreme for more than a quarter of a century. His successor will be appointed by Gov. Preus to serve until an election is held.

President Harding was attending the dinner of the American Society of Newspaper Editors when he was informed of Senator Nelson's death. He said:

"He was a stalwart American, and performed a most useful public service with a record of great work accomplished. Senator Nelson was an inspiring example of American opportunity. He came to us in poverty from Norway, acquired a competence, served in the war for the Union, was governor of his state, and had a long and honored career in the senate. I held him in very high regard and deeply regret his passing."

BRITISH RIOT AS KING WATCHES GAME; 1,000 HURT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, April 28.—[Tribune Radio.]—About 1,000 persons were hurt when 200,000 football enthusiasts stormed the concrete walls of the world's largest sports stadium, Wembley Hill, today. They lifted the massive iron gates bodily off their sockets, repulsed the emergency squads of mounted and foot police, and were jammed to suffocation in the stands and along the field. Even the corridors and entrance halls of the arena were crowded. The stadium was designed to accommodate 127,000.

King George witnessed the contest the deciding game for the English soccer championship cup. The Bolton Wanderers and Westham United were the teams, and the fact that the former were from Lancashire and the latter from the outskirts of London assured a mixed crowd from every part of the country. The Boltons won, 2 to 1.

Official reports tonight state that there were 600 casualties, and hundreds more were less seriously hurt. Many of the victims were women, who were crushed and trampled. It is regarded as little short of miraculous that there was not a collapse of some part of the building.

BURIAL OF GIRL IN CULT GRAVE STIRS SHERIFF

Marks on Neck Hint of Murder.

BY DONALD EWING.
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

St. Joseph, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—A sand grave in the unmarked and lonely burial lot of the supposedly immortal House of David cult was turned to today by state investigators to produce evidence that is expected to add murder to the list of alleged crimes to come before Michigan's one man grand jury inquiry into the reported immoralities of its religious sects.

A swift preliminary inquiry by Sheriff George Bridgeman revealed a grave digger, who told of being given a frail, undecorated casket to bury, with the information that it contained a 68 year old woman follower of "King Benjamin" Purnell, and that her death was due to apoplexy.

As he pushed the box into the sand grave the top broke off, revealing the body of a girl about 16, naked except for old paper wrappings, and with three distinct marks on the throat, marks of the kind a strangling hand would make.

No Death Certificate.

The testimony of the grave digger and of others showing that the records of the burial contain no death certificate and are incomplete in many other ways are ready to go before Judge Harry Dingeman Monday, when he resumes the inquiry being conducted under Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty. There the state will try to find whose fingers made the marks and the story of the life and death of the girl.

The story of the grave digger in this case—Charles Pullen—is as weird and grewsome as any of Poe's narratives.

Pullen is a young fellow in his 20s, and during the summer of 1921 he and Charles Bishop Jr. were the grave diggers for Charles Bishop Sr., sexton at the Crystal Springs cemetery.

Cemetery Like Sand Dunes.

Over to one side of this cemetery is a stretch of gravelly sand, with an occasional sprig of stunted grass. The section might have been transplanted in full from Gary's sand dunes. Here about fifty of the House of David cult, the people who have been persuaded by Benjamin Purnell that they will be immortal if they believe that he is Christ's brother and if they obey his teachings, are buried. The sand graves are mute refutation of King Benjamin.

There are no mounds over the graves and no tombstones—not even a record of the name, date of birth, or date of death. No one but the grave digger attends the funerals. A four inch square concrete post is placed in the ground, with the top level with the sand.

Told It Was an Old Woman.

In the summer of 1921 Pullen and young Bishop—the latter now dead—were told by F. B. Martinie, an undertaker—according to Pullen's story to the investigators—that "another of those Israelites had died" and the body would be sent out. Further inquiry developed that it was supposed to be one of the old members of the colony, a 68 year old woman.

Martinie handles all of the House of David deaths. Although they claim immortality, the cult chiefs have a contract with him to attend to the funerals at so much a body.

The body, in a frail casket, which was nothing more than a boxwood box, was taken to the cemetery in an unescorted wagon and dumped unceremoniously on the ground, to be placed, without services, in the hole in the sand.

"Buried Like Dogs."

"The Israelites always were buried like dogs," Pullen said. "They just shoved them in a box and told us to throw the box in the ground. There was no reverence in the handling. As we tried to lower the box with a strap, one corner broke. Anything would break it, for it was thin enough to poke a finger through.

"Inside we could see the shoulders, neck and face of a girl. She was wrapped in old brown paper, like a mummy, and the paper had broken. There were three red spots on the side of her throat and some bluish marks. They appeared to be finger prints.

"We talked it over, but we were afraid to say anything to any one. We had heard many strange stories and didn't want to get in trouble. So we nailed the box back together with the spade as a hammer, heaped the sand on it, and kept quiet."

Why Grave Digger Talked.

The present investigations into the charges that Purnell's supposedly virgin House of Shiloh was really his harem of girls scarcely in their teens caused Pullen to reveal his story.

Further inquiry showed errors in the records. In Martinie's books there is listed the death of a 68 year old woman on Aug. 4, 1921. This entry contains only the name and date of death. The usual spaces for the name of the doctor, the death certificate, and the other customary data are blank. The entry is on page 39, but on page 38 is a death of Oct. 22. Thus the October death, occurring two and a half months after the Aug. 4 death, is entered in the book ahead of it, indicating that the death being investigated was not recorded until ten weeks after the burial.

Doesn't Bother with Certificate.

Mr. Martinie in explaining this said that he was out of town at the time of the burial and that when he came back and found it had not been entered he marked it in the book. Asked about the lack of a death certificate record, he said:

"O, Doc Estes, the House of David physician, always makes out their death certificates and I never bother with them much."

This statement led to the revelation that while Benjamin claims immortality his cult not only has a contract with an undertaker but also has its own physician—one of its members—and that a supply of printed death certificates is kept on hand for use when the immortality doesn't work.

"Doc Estes," the cult medic, is Dr. L. B. Estes, a bewhiskered physician in the seventies, and his appearance indicates that his "immortality" also is likely to be a failure soon.

Body May Be Exhumed.

When the witnesses are called before the inquiry next week it is expected that an exhumation of the body will be ordered. While decomposition undoubtedly has removed any bruise signs that might have been on it, physicians explain that strangulation still could be established, were it the cause of death. The hyboid bone and the pneumogastric nerve would show.

The House of David beliefs on death and their funerals are weird and unusual as the cult itself, with immortality as one of the tenets of their faith. The death of any member is explained by the chiefs with the statement that "life was taken from our brother because he sinned. Had he not sinned he would have been immortal like the rest of us."

While the ailing member is in his sickbed Dr. Estes and the other followers of the "seventh angel" attend him and try to retain life. The moment he breathes his last they all flee from the room, for none must look on death or on the dead.

One of the cult is placed on guard outside the door and the undertaker is notified that his contract is in effect. Originally there was not even the formality of a regular graveyard or coffin. The bodies were placed in a box and Berrien county residents tell of seeing them hauled by on sleds in the winter to a section of the House of David land called "Ben's Forty Acres," where a hole was dug and the box placed in it.

RULES "BEN'S" A FRAUD

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—The Israelite House of David has been found by United States District Judge John Sater of Columbus, O., to be the gigantic fraud alleged by John W. Hansel and his family of Nashville, Tenn., who spent eight years in the Benton Harbor colony. Based upon his finding, Judge Sater gives to the plaintiffs a verdict which will amount to upwards of $15,000 as compensation for their services during the period from May, 1912, until Dec. 20, 1920, when they allege they were expelled.

The court in his decision filed here Saturday declares Benjamin Purnell, head of the colony, "has deliberately and systematically taught utterance of falsehoods and the commission of perjury."

Scores Cult's Immorality.

Benjamin, also, he finds, so taught his religious creed as to cause some female members of the colony to submit to improper relations with him.

The colony, despite its "low moral tone, its improper conduct, attempted rape, if not rape itself," has gone unpunished and in almost all cases unrebuked, Judge Sater says.

The evidence, it is pointed out, discloses that on other occasions Benjamin avoided and sought to stifle investigations "concerning Benjamin and the girls."

The court ponders as to the reasons of "Queen" Mary, wife of Benjamin, for failure to take the witness stand at the Hansel trial, despite "evidence which cast a doubt, at least, on her virtue," in an attempt "to vindicate her honor or to shed light on transactions in which she was said actively to have participated."

Benjamin alone could refute many of the charges, and "his absence at this critical period in the life of himself and the colony, when he should have been so quick to defend, is significant," comments Judge Sater.

The court is unconvinced by the reasons given by the House of David for group marriages. The court declared the Hansel claim for $80,000 was excessive. The amounts allowed total about $11,000, with interest computed at 5 per cent, which will bring the total to about $15,000.

"King" Was Paramount.

The judge's decision says: "The control of the colony as to bath spiritual and temporal affairs is lodged in Benjamin. His authority in both respects is paramount.

"For his own protection and to prevent disclosures by investigation conducted by public officials as to evil practices attributed to him, his claimed divine character and certain of his teachings, Benjamin has deliberately and systematically taught utterance of falsehoods and the commission of perjury. Secrecy as to such teachings is enjoined.

"Hansel's contribution of himself, his family, and his property undoubtedly benefited the colony and increased the power and importance of Purnell's leadership, through the added wealth of the society.

"It afforded an increased number of girl victims on whom to practice the immorality of the colony.

"It is inconceivable that Hansel, or any other sane person, would have entered the colony for permanent residence, or surrendered property and submitted themselves to such employment as was assigned them had these disclosures of immorality and criminal conditions and teachings been made."

ALTER GOLDMAN BOOKS TO HIDE LAWYERS' "FEES"

Six Pages Torn Out and Others Substituted.

JACOB GOLDMAN.

Alleged efforts of the "bankruptcy trust" to conceal receipt of unearned fees by "doctoring" the receiver books were exposed in Judge Kickham Scanlan's court yesterday when the jurist continued the attempt to unravel the tangled affairs of Jacob Goldman, professional Circuit court receiver.

Dozens of pages, indicating payment of more than $50,000 in so-called advance fees to attorneys had been hastily torn from Goldman's ledgers when news of a subpoena duces tecum was received. Other pages, without reference to the irregular payments, had been inserted, Miss Cecil Page, Goldman's secretary, admitted.

Admits Altering of Records.

Rumors that Goldman, who has acted as custodian of properties valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars, had less than $2,500 at his disposal when suddenly called upon by the Circuit court judges for an accounting three weeks ago, remained unconfirmed by Miss Page, although she admitted to Judge Scanlan that she had acted for her employer in banking matters.

"Where are the pages that were in this book six weeks, but are missing now?" asked Judge Scanlan when Miss Page took the witness stand.

"I don't know. Some of the pages may have been taken out for correction," the girl answered.

"Now, Goldman told me last night that he would come clean, Miss Page," continued the judge. "You're not going to be the goat. Tell me, haven't there been pages made up recently?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

Seeks to Shield Lawyers.

"Mr. Goldman didn't want the names of attorneys to show."

"What are the names of attorneys whose accounts have been changed?"

"Benjamin Ehrlich and——" began Miss Page.

"A fine bird," interposed Judge Scanlan.

"E. A. Zimmerman——"

"The immaculate," interrupted the judge.

"Samuel Wodika, Harry J. Meyerson, Myer N. Rosengard, P. A. Queinstein, Teller, Levit, Silverstrust & Levi, Polikoff & Kohn, Ward & Meyers, and Gilbert Wagner."

Lawyers in Ursus Case.

"How many lawyers were drawing money from Goldman in the Ursus Motor case?" asked the judge.

"Weinstein, Zimmerman, Meyerson, Rosengard, and Andrews & Cohen," replied Miss Page.

Goldman, recalled to the stand by Judge Scanlan, declared he had not ordered his secretary to "doctor" the books, asserting that "she must have misunderstood me."

"Why is it that eight or ten lawyers have looted these estates and you've let them?" asked the judge, who, receiving no answer, continued: "How much money have you paid out to lawyers without court orders?"

"About $50,000," replied Goldman.

$30,000 Paid to Pennish.

Goldman admitted that he had paid Attorney Louis E. Pennish an authorized fee of $2,500 in connection with the defunct Curtis Miller estate and declared that he did not know how much the attorney had received in three years. Unofficially, it is said that records in the hands of Judge Scanlan indicate that Pennish was paid about $30,000 in that period.

Checks for a large total drawn from the receivership bank accounts and endorsed in the stub books as "S. L. M." were identified by Goldman as payments made to finance the Sausage Linking Machine company, a private venture, in which he was associated with Charles Jolasch, his partner in an ill fated enterprise, the American Typewriter company, which went into bankruptcy in 1909.

"The sausage business sure ate up a lot of money," said the judge. "I have seen countless checks to them." Recanting on his pledge to surrender $40,000 of diamonds to Judge Scanlan on the jurist's demand, Goldman flatly refused to turn them over until satisfactory arrangements had been made with the Lloyd's company, with whom they are insured.

"Why should I give them up?" Goldman asked Judge Scanlan. "I am heavily bonded in all these cases and the court will not lose a dime because the insurance company will pay. But if I am given time I will place $100,000 on this bench to settle all the irregularities you can find in my accounts."

"O, I've heard all that before, Jake," said Judge Scanlan. "Your attorney, Lewis F. Jacobson, told me Friday afternoon that you were willing to surrender those diamonds any time I asked for them. I have asked. You have refused. Mr. Clerk, on Monday I shall enter an order appointing an attorney to represent J. Goldman, receiver, and removing all attorneys who are now acting for him. This should have been done before."

Summons were issued by Judge Scanlan for the immediate appearance of Attorneys William Friedman, Gilbert Wagner, and E. A. Allen, whom Goldman asserted had repaid fees advanced to them, but had demanded that he surrender the cancelled check which indicated that Goldman had ever given them money.

IS CULT VICTIM BURIED HERE?

Left to right: Arthur Mollhagen, deputy to Sheriff George Bridgeman; Charles Bishop, sexton at Crystal Springs cemetery; and Clarence Pullen, grave digger, pointing out the unmarked sand grave where a 16 year old girl from the House of David, now believed to have met violent death, was buried under permits stating she was 68 years old and a victim of apoplexy. Pullen, who helped bury the body, learned of the deception when the casket slipped from his hand and broke, exposing the girl. She was naked and her throat showed marks like finger prints.

FIGHT ON SUGAR PRICES IN N. Y. IS SPREADING

New York, N. Y., April 28.—[Special.]—Bakers, ice cream manufacturers, and candy makers may join the drive against the increase in retail sugar prices that was started yesterday by delegates from more than 200 women's clubs representing at least 500,000 women.

Mayor Hyland and the department of markets already have joined in the campaign. A massmeeting will be held in the city hall next Friday afternoon to discuss the advisability of a sugar boycott. Before this meeting the women leaders in the drive will enlist additional aid and hope to make the campaign state-wide.

The women leaders also will conduct a daily checkup of all stores against which complaints of profiteering already have been made. The movement apparently has had no effect so far on the retail prices of sugar. Some retailers said they might be forced to go even higher today, while others believe the price will remain steady around 10¼ cents.

"I'm Nutty, That's All," Says Butterfly Dancer

New Orleans, La., April 28.—Charlee Awhie, who says he is a dancer at a local vaudeville house, was captured by a policeman tonight and sent to Charity hospital for observation after a chase down Canal street in the heart of the business district. Awhie appeared at midnight clad in only his underwear, yelling, "Chase me, girls, I'm a butterfly." When apprehended and asked what was wrong with him Awhie replied, "I'm nutty, that's all."

ALL BUNK WORLD SPINS ON AXIS, SCIENTIST SAYS

PARIS, April 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—A new theory of relativity is announced by Prof. Paul Painleve, former premier and noted mathematician, who declares his conception is based on mechanics of broader lines than those developed by Prof. Albert Einstein, the German scientist.

"My work is to attempt to reconcile the old school springing from Newton's theory of gravitation with the new school emerging from Einstein's theory," he said.

"I consider Einstein's theory a step in the right direction, certainly it was necessary to science to explain phenomena which could not be explained under the old theories.

"Under the old teachings it was explained that the world turned on its axis, and in space. Of course this is mere talk for children; no such thing occurs, but such explanation must be given so the ignorant can have a mental picture of what the universe is like. Neither the earth nor the stars whirl in space."

SPOUSE FAILS IN FIGHT TO WED HIS WIFE'S DAUGHTER

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—Judge O. F. Hunt today granted an injunction asked by Mrs. Marie Le Fevre Corbin restraining her common law husband, Louis Corbin, from marrying Suzanne Corbin, her 18 year old daughter by a former husband.

Just before the injunction was granted the clerk was preparing to issue the license when he was requested to refuse it by James M. Kane, Mrs. Corbin's counsel, who told him that Judge Hunt was about to pass on the application for the injunction.

Mrs Corbin represented that she and Corbin wen through the formalities of a common law marriage on March 13, 1913, and that they lived together as common law husband and wife until March last.

HARDING DENIES BANKERS BRING PLAN FOR COURT

Tells Editors Charges Are Not Truth.

Washington, D. C., April 28.—Speaking intimately as an editor to editors, President Harding in an address tonight before the American Society of Newspaper Editors declared to be without truth statements that the administration had proposed American membership in the permanent court of international justice at the behest of international bankers.

"I care nothing about editorial criticism directed against the individual," the President said, in leading up to his reference to the international court. "But I read within forty-eight hours a very earnest editorial, wherein it was stated that the recent proposal of the executive to the senate that we adhere to the international court of justice was imposed upon the executive by the influence and the cunning and design of the international bankers.

"Well, there isn't a word of truth in it, and I want to tell this to you, because it will enlarge your vision and enable you to comment a little more satisfactorily.

"Bankers Did Not Plot."

"I have been President something more than two years. I have yet to be asked for an audience or interview by a single international banker in America or elsewhere. And the only exchange of opinions between international bankers and the President of the United States have been at the request of the President and it is fair to say that, in the instances when they have been summoned, they have said, with just the same patriotic interest and devotion that you would say, 'Mr. President, we are at your service in any way you wish to command us.'

"It is fair to tell you that when publishers and editors say with seeming sincerity and great emphasis that the government is being led astray at the behest or design of the bankers, there isn't a grain of truth to justify the statement."

Praises "Code of Ethics."

Mr. Harding praised the code of ethics adopted by the editors today, saying "there never was a time when a fitting code of ethics was so essential to the press of America."

"If my observations as President of the United States have taught me any one thing," he said, "it is that there are too many men in the newspaper world who believe one thing and preach another. And that is not honest, and that is not a contribution to the coming journalism.

"How shall I say it? I sat recently in the executive offices and listened to an outstanding editor-publisher of the United States who took my time for two hours urging upon me the necessity of reduction in federal taxes, notably excess profits and income and surtaxes, particularly pressing it with every word of argument that he could form, and his newspapers at that very hour were clamoring that the minions of capital were proposing to reduce the taxes on the wealth of this country. I would not give a rap for the conscience of a man like that."

Urges Decency in Editing.

Decency in newspaper editing was urged with emphasis by the President who said he thought "the most unfortunate contribution to the disturbing tendencies of today is the excessive publication of sensational vice."

Newspaper ethics, the editors were told, consists sometimes as much in the omission of news as in the publication of it. In this connection the President said that while it was true that "civilization is in a very critical stage," it would be doing much more for the wellbeing of the world if the newspapers told "the simple comforting truth about things when there is a simple comforting truth," and omitted "the things which tend to destroy the faith in society."

"O, my countrymen, we have done so well in America," the President exclaimed in conclusion. "We have brought so much in the democracy of this new world. We have made such a record for ourselves and such a contribution to human progress that I want to go on. Here in America we have done more than elsewhere in the world for the development of a free press. And I want a free press in America to repay its debt in the preservation of this republic of ours."

Canons of Journalism Adopted

By Society of Newspaper Editors

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—The following statement was drawn up, debated and unanimously adopted today at the annual meeting of "The American Society of Newspaper Editors" in session in this city. The society consists of editors, managing editors and chief editorial writers on the principal daily papers of the large cities of the country:

The primary function of newspapers is to communicate to the human race what its members do, feel, and think. Journalism, therefore, demands of its practitioners the widest range of intelligence, of knowledge, and of experience, as well as natural and trained powers of observation and reasoning. To its opportunities as a chronicler indissolubly are linked its obligations as teacher and interpreter.

To the end of finding some means of codifying sound practice and just aspirations of American journalism these canons are set forth:

I.

RESPONSIBILITY—The right of a newspaper to attract and hold readers is restricted by nothing but considerations of public welfare. The use a newspaper makes of the share of public attention it gains serves to determine its sense of responsibility, which it shares with every member of its staff. A journalist who uses his power for any selfish or otherwise unworthy purpose is faithless to a high trust.

II.

FREEDOM OF THE PRESS—Freedom of the press is to be guarded as a vital right of mankind. It is the unquestionable right to discuss whatever is not explicitly forbidden by law, including the wisdom of any restrictive statute.

III.

INDEPENDENCE.—Freedom from all obligations except that of fidelity to the public interest is vital.

1. Promotion of any private interest contrary to the general welfare, for whatever reason, is not compatible with honest journalism. So-called news communications from private sources should not be published without public notice of their source or else substantiation of their claims to value as news both in form and substance.

2. Partisanship in editorial comment which knowingly departs from the truth does violence to the best spirit of American journalism; in the news columns it is subversive of a fundamental principle of the profession.

IV.

SINCERITY, TRUTHFULNESS, ACCURACY—Good faith with the reader is the foundation of all journalism worthy of the name.

1. By every consideration of good faith a newspaper is constrained to be truthful. It is not to be excused for lack of thoroughness or accuracy within its control or failure to obtain command of these essential qualities.

2. Headlines should be fully warranted by the contents of the articles which they surmount.

V.

IMPARTIALITY — Sound practice makes clear distinction between news reports and expressions of opinion. News reports should be free from opinion or bias of any kind.

1. This rule does not apply to so-called special articles unmistakably devoted to advocacy or characterized by a signature authorizing the writer's own conclusions and interpretations.

VI.

FAIR PLAY—A newspaper should not publish unofficial charges affecting reputation or moral character without opportunity given to the accused to be heard; right practice demands the giving of such opportunity in all cases of serious accusation outside judicial proceedings.

1. A newspaper should not invade private rights or feelings without sure warrant of public right as distinguished from public curiosity.

2. It is the privilege, as it is the duty, of a newspaper to make prompt and complete correction of its own serious mistakes of fact or opinion, whatever their origin.

VII.

DECENCY—A newspaper cannot escape conviction of insincerity if while professing high moral purpose it supplies incentives to base conduct, such as are to be found in details of crime and vice, publication of which is not demonstrably for the general good. Lacking authority to enforce its canons, the journalism here represented can but express the hope that deliberate pandering to vicious instincts will encounter effective public disapproval or yield to the influence of a preponderant professional condemnation.

WORLD COURT IS HIT HARD BY SENATOR LODGE

Sees No Chance for Protocol to Be Ratified.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—The controversy raging over the world court was intensified today by two developments of far reaching significance. They were:

First, the publication of a carefully worded letter written by Senator Lodge [Rep., Mass.], Republican leader in the senate and chairman of the foreign relations committee, indicating a distinctly unfriendly attitude toward the court in its present form.

Second, the sidetracking of a resolution indorsing the court by the American Society of International Law after one of the stormiest sessions in its history.

Reply to Missouri Telegram.

Senator Lodge's letter was written in reply to a telegram from Gov. Hyde of Missouri, who said:

"Five hundred thousand Missouri Republicans are looking hopefully to you to prevent the disaster to nation and party of any membership in the world court. May we not depend upon you to serve us in the present crisis?"

The senator, in his answer, left no doubt in the minds of those who are familiar with his cautious manner that he is opposed to the court as it stands. Although refusing to forecast the action of the senate, he very plainly indicated that if the protocal making the United States a member of the court is ratified at all, it will be only after much discussion and after the adoption of strong safeguarding reservations.

Takes Issue with Harding.

Senator Lodge took issue with the contention of President Harding, Secretary Hughes, Elihu Root, and others that the court is wholly independent of the league of nations. If it had been an entirely separate institution, he said, there would have been no question raised against immediate and unreserved adhesion to the court protocol, but he added:

"In the plan now before us, the permanent court of international justice is not to be formed by the nations independently, but is to be the court already elected by the council and assembly of the league of nations, and this fact, as it is already obvious, will lead to much discussion, and it will have to be decided whether the senate will assent to accepting the court as proposed and chosen by the league."

Must Enlarge Reservations.

While approving the reservations suggested by Secretary Hughes, Senator Lodge expressed the view that these would have to be broadened and enlarged to properly protect American interests, particularly in the matter of equalizing American and British voting power in the selection of the judges.

"It has always been the policy of the United States, and very emphatically the policy of the Republican party, to promote in every way possible the settlement of international differences by arbitration and through the medium of arbitral tribunals," said Senator Lodge. "We have advocated in the past the establishment of a permanent court of arbitration.

"If it had been proposed to establish a permanent international court for the settlement of international disputes, selected, as is proposed in the league court, from the panel created by groups under the terms of The Hague convention; if it had been proposed to make the judges thus selected permanent and to be appointed by the nations severally and independently, and not by a majority of the council and assembly of the league, and with long terms and sufficient salaries, in my judgment, such a court would have received practically universal approval not only in the senate of the United States but by the people of the United States.

Cites President on League.

"In his speech in New York on Tuesday, April 24, the President said, 'I have no unseemly comment to offer on the league. If it is serving the old world helpfuly more power to it. But it is not for us. The senate has so declared, the executive has so declared, the people have so declared. Nothing could be more decisively stamped with finality.'

"With this strong and complete statement, I believe that the great mass of the American people are in full accord. I certainly am.

"Nothing would ever have induced me to have voted for the covenant of the league of nations which Mr. Wilson laid before the senate on July 10, 1919. But I voted twice in favor of the treaty with the reservations adopted by the senate.

"As I have watched during the last three years the performances and futilities of the league of nations I have become convinced that it was fortunate that the senate rejected it and that it is best for the world, for the cause of world peace, and for the American people that the United States should not, under any circumstances, become a member of the league.

League Elects Court Officials.

"In the plan now before us the permanent court of international justice is not to be formed by the nations independently, but is to be the court already elected by the council and assembly of the league of nations, and this fact, as is already obvious, will lead to much discussion, and it will have to be decided whether the senate will assent to accepting the court as proposed and chosen by the league.

"The secretary of state, in his letter accompanying the President's message recommending our participation in the court, proposed certain conditions to be appended to the resolution to be passed by the senate in giving their advice and consent to the signature of the protocol or statute creating the international court.

"These conditions must include a declaration of the refusal of the United States to join the league of nations, and, second, a declaration that the United States shall have an equality of representation both in the council and in the assembly in voting for the election of the judge of the court. These two suggestions of the secretary of state are vitally important.

Duty of Senate Told.

"It will be the duty of the senate, therefore, to frame conditions under the first two suggestions of the secretary of state, and it also may be assumed that the senate may very possibly originate and propose other conditions.

"What the attitude of the senate will be upon the question of joining a court elected by the council and assembly of the league of nations or upon certain specified conditions or reservations, it at present necessarily unknown.

"It so happens that I am chairman of the committee of foreign relations; and, occupying that position, I do not feel willing, nor do I think it would be becoming or suitable for me, to attempt to anticipate or predict the action of the senate when it has an opportunity to discuss the President's recommendation and req est, which it has not yet had because the President's message only reached the senate four days before the adjournment of the last congress.

"As always, I most earnestly desire the success of the Republican party and am equally desirous that President Harding should be renominated and reelected, and when the subject of the league court has been fully discussed and considered, I hope and believe that a satisfactory adjustment will be reached."

Law Society Rejects Court.

The effort to put the American Society of International Law on record in favor of American entry into the court of justice was defeated after a stirring fight that threatened to sweep away the judicial decorum of the organization. The flareup came in the closing moments of the convention out of a clear sky.

In the midst of discussion of various questions the supporters of American entry engineered a skillful maneuver designed to follow up the lead given by Secretary of State Hughes and by Elihu Root and proposed a resolution asking that the society immediately go on record in favor of American entry at the earliest moment.

What threatened to become a row of major proportions was quieted only when the advocates of an immediate expression in favor of entry by the society receded from their position, withdrew their resolution to this effect, and accepted a substitute which merely authorizes that the council of the society take steps to ascertain the individual views of the members and make them public with the intent, however, that such expression of view shall not be construed as a formal vote by the society itself.

LOOK FOR BOYCE TO BRING 'EM GLANDS FROM DARK CONTINENT

When W. D. Boyce, explorer, author and publisher, returns to Chicago today from a six months' trip to the wilds of Africa, more than thirty business men are expected to be at the station waiting for the monkey glands they asked him to bring back as souvenirs. As to whether the glands are among his trophies no information has yet been received.

W. D. BOYCE.

During this latest trip, which makes his fourth journey to Africa, Mr. Boyce traveled down the west coast, up the Congo beyond Stanleyville and through the Zimbabwe country, where he raised the flag of the Adventurers' club of Chicago upon the ruins left by the gold hunters of King Solomon's day. He traveled in a private car especially fitted up for a dark room as far north and into the interior as possible on the Cape to Cairo railroad.

DOYLE DEFENDS SPIRIT PHOTOS AS REAL THING

Decries 'Expose' Made by Priest.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

And when the bad ones die, they go into a gloomy purgatorial waiting room, done in somber gray, and wait until their names are called for heaven. This is the comforting news which Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, distinguished for his recent investigations in the realm of spiritism, told an audience at Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon.

The waiting room won't be overcrowded, either, is the belief of Sir Arthur, who insists that people aren't as wicked as we like to suppose. "If men were really bad," he said, "they'd applaud the villain, instead of the hero, in a play.

Says Compensation Awaits.

"The normal man is born through no will of his own; he grows up and marries; he gets a job and raises a family. Then he dies. Does that man need punishment. Great scott, no! What that man needs is compensation."

And the normal citizen will get compensation, beginning with the moment of his death, declared the lecturer.

"At the instant of death, the ethetic body, a sort of envelope duplicate of the real body, floats off. There is a period of rest and sleep, varying from a few hours to several months, depending upon the spirituality of the person. In extreme cases, there is the heavenly waiting room. Some spend centuries there, he admitted. But they all finally get called.

The heaven into which the dead man goes is a regular world, on a higher plane. The colors are brighter; the sounds sweeter; the people nicer. Each man acquires his normal strength, about the age of 30; each woman receives again the beauty of 25.

Sympathy Group Keynote.

There are many circles or groups of persons liking the same things. The keynote of each community is sympathy.

Of marriage, the psychic investigator has this to say.

"If the marriaeg has been a real love match, the one who dies first will wait in the waiting room until the mate arrives. Together they will pass on into eternity.

"But if the marriage has been an unhappy mistake, it will end with death. Many couples, he conjectured, will wlcome this automatic, ethetic divorce.

Hard Road for Bigot.

"Religion, too, is variable, in heaven. If a Methodist gets real spiritual benefit from his religion, fine. If a Catholic is helped, sincerely, by his religion, splendid. But when the religion becomes mere form, it is dropped off."

Bigotry and prejudice, Sir Arthur declared, are the more worse sins, because they are sins of the soul and are carried on over to the next life. Some of the worst bigots, the lecturer stated, are spiritists who think they only hold the complete key to salvation.

"The man who thinks God is going to save his particular clique, and is going to send everybody else to damnation, is the very one who is in most danger."

Growing more intense, Sir Arthur, a sincere man giving a serious message to an audience of earnest people, many of them in mourning, began to show his spirit photographs.

Defends Spirit Photographs.

"Anybody can fake a photograph, but that doesn't prove that every photograph is faked?" he shouted, as he referred to the recent charges of the Rev. Father C. de Heredia, S. J., that ectoplasm is merely luminous paint.

He then showed on the screen a mold of a glove of paraffin which had been formed about the hand of a materialized spirit and left when the spirit had dematerialized. Among the group of scientific men who witnessed this demonstration, he said, was J. Malcolm Bird of the Scientific American magazine, who accompanies the lecturer on his American tour.

"Father de Heredia," he said, "claims that this is a glove. May I call your attention to the nails, to the closely clasped fingers, to the veins. This is an impression of a hand. And note, the wrist is much smaller than the hand. So a flesh and blood hand could not have been withdrawn without cracking the paraffin, which is intact. The hand must have dematerialized."

In conclusion, Sir Arthur showed what he declared was the greatest spirit photograph ever taken. Taken in London at the time of the two minute silence around the cenotaph to England's dead in the war; the first picture shows a crowd, their heads bowed, praying. In the foreground is a faint luminous patch. This, according to Sir Arthur, is ectoplasm, exuding from a group of mediums.

Calls It Remarkable Product.

The second picture, exposed during the two minute silence, shows a crowd of floating, bodyless heads, large, small, distinct, and blurred, all facing the camera.

"Next to seeing an angel walking down the street at midday," said Sir Arthur, as the crowd pushed forward to see, "I consider this the most remarkable evidence of spirits returning to earth that could possibly be."

GANNA WALSKA TIPS OFF COUSIN TO GUARD WORDS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—Mme. Ganna Walksa, songbird wife of Harold F. McCormick of Chicago, gave a box party in her Champs-Elysées theater last night which was followed by some interesting gossip today.

"Every time you open your mouth you will put your foot into it, Mr. McCormick," she said to a young member of the London branch of the Harold F. McCormick family, here to see his new cousin for the first time.

"In the first place, do not make remarks about the conductor because this is his daughter. Second, do not make any sassy remarks about the music, because some of the guests here are the composers. Third, do not think that you know anything about music because this gentleman is a critic for the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Fourth, do not make any critical remarks about the theater's beauties because it is mine."

Young Mr. McCormick did not say a single word.

CECIL GOES BACK WITHOUT TAKING UNCLE SAM ALONG

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Lord Robert Cecil, who came to America a little over a month ago to "popularize" the league of nations, sailed for England this morning on board the White Star liner Olympic. Lord Robert did not carry back with him any assurances that this country has heard his message and is ready to enter the league of nations, but there is no doubt that the Britisher, with his gentle ways and his unfailing good humored deference to other men's opinions, has won hosts of friends for himself, his country and his cause in the United States.

Just before the Olympic sailed Lord Robert gave a last minute interview in which he mentioned the deep interest of Americans in international affairs.

"I am immensely gratified," Lord Robert said, "at the reception your people gave me and at the deep attention which audiences everywhere listened to what I had to say."

CHICAGO BOOZE RUNNER ESCAPES WAUKEGAN COP

Waukegan, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Speeding at seventy miles an hour, George Brown, 3617 Indiana avenue, Chicago, a booze runner, was arrested at 4 o'clock this afternoon by Motorcycle Policeman Pat Smith. The officer was compelled to draw a gun. While waiting for the judge to arrive, Brown and a companion walked out of the station and escaped on a Chicago bound North Shore electric car, leaving the car behind.

A search of the machine by Chief Hotocky revealed 155 quarts of whisky and two loaded revolvers.

Chief Collins was asked to search for Brown.

DAWES DEALS OUT "HELL-MARIA" TO MINUTE MEN'S FOE

Claptrap and Gas-bag Hurled at Olander.

Brigadier general in the war, promoter of the peace-time minute men of the constitution, Charles G. Dawes demonstrated last night that he is still his characteristic self, ready with a broadside of "Hell and Maria" for those who encounter his wrath.

Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, had questioned the motives of the Minute Men, saying that some of the language of the organization's platform resembled that of advocates of the industrial "open shop."

Gen. Dawes' retaliatory barrage came in the following statement:

"Such statements as the one issued this morning by Victor Olander, reflecting upon the sincerity of the Minute Men of the Constitution, is a fair sample of the stuff and claptrap which has intimidated the cowardly politicians of this country and prevented the proper presentation of the issue of good government and law enforcement in the political platforms of both parties.

"The Minute Men of the Constitution challenge the right of labor demagogues to speak for the patriotic citizens composing labor organizations in this state.

"The Minute Men of the Constitution has now and will always have patriotic members of labor unions in its membership, and they, at least, do not propose to have their position on issues involving the interests of good government outlined to the public by gas bags like Olander.

"If labor demagogues and the more contemptible political demagogues are worrying about our sincerity, let them come up to Evanston on Tuesday night, when Company No. 1 of the Minute Men of the Constitution is formally organized, and judge of it."

Girl Takes Poison as Sweetheart Looks On

Harriet Malinauski, 17 years old, of 3400 Emerald avenue, took poison late yesterday following a quarrel with Anton Tunia, 3328 South Halsted street, in an ice cream parlor at 1916 South Halsted street. The police took her to the county hospital, where her condition is said to be serious. Tunia was not held.

GARY CITY HALL SWEPT INTO PEN BY U. S. JURIST

Dry Law Violators Hit by Heavy Terms.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 28.—Sentences ranging from one day to a year and six months in jail were given to fifty-nine persons convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws in Gary and Lake county, Indiana, by Federal Judge Ferdinand Geiger in United States District court here today.

Roswell O. Johnson, mayor of Gary was sentenced to serve one year and six months at the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., and fined $2,000.

Lewis Barnes, former sheriff of Lake county and now chairman of the board of public works at Gary, was given one year and one day in prison and fined $1,000.

William M. Dunn, judge of the Gary city court until his resignation after his conviction, was sentenced to one year and a day in prison and fined $1,000. Blas A. Luca[illegible] Gary attorney, was sentenced to serve one year in prison and fined $1,000.

Will Appeal to Chicago.

Motions for new trials were denied all but three defendants—William H. Olds, sheriff of Lake county; Charles L. Clemens, a justice of the peace, and Fred Seab[illegible]ight, an attorney.

Most of the other defendants announced that appeals would be made to the United States District Court of Appeals at Chicago.

Judge Geiger divided the defendants into groups for receiving sentences as follows: First, dealers who sold liquor; second, those whose soft drink establishments, poolrooms, and cabarets ran more openly in violation of the law; third, outsiders, including policemen and constables and attorneys; and fourth, public officers and former public officers.

Others Receive Sentences.

Other prominent Gary and Lake county persons among those sentenced follow:

Clyde Hunter, former prosecuting attorney, one year and a day in prison and a fine of $1,000.

Dwight M. Kinder, prosecuting attorney, one year and a day in prison and a fine of $1,000.

Five women were among those sentenced. One, May Russell, who had pleaded guilty, did not appear. Mary Allen and Velma Jones each received a sentence of thirty days in jail. Jennie Miller was given three months and a fine of $200, while Pauline Schultz was given three months and a fine of $300.

Mike Drukulich, one of the five persons who pleaded guilty, was dismissed without sentence.

These Get 60 Days in Jail.

The following received sentences of sixty days in jail: Martin Bennett, John Bilkovic, Harry Cooley, Bude Daich, John J. Ignac, John Kolodzinksi, Sol Phillips, Joseph Powvinski, Stagan Rapaich, Robert J. Simmons, Steve Stadjuhar, and Metre Verniger.

The following received sentences of six months in jail and fines of $500: Bryan S. Narcovich, an attorney; Pete Persons, a constable; Nathan Potts, a detective sergeant; Ralph Stagnaich and Andy Wytow.

Others were sentenced as follows: Charles F. Miller, ten days; John C. Mullen, a policeman at Gary, three months in jail and a fine of $100; Ike Alvarez and Sam Marchuk, who pleaded guilty, and Nick Navancich, each one day in jail.

The trial of the convicted men and women was one of the most sensational in years in Indiana. On the eve of the trial a prosecuting witness was killed, and during the course of the trial both the district attorney and Judge Geiger received threatening letters. Many of those convicted were foreigners.

Judge Geiger announced the defendants would have 120 days in which to arrange their affairs before beginning their sentences. Dunn, however, declared he wanted to begin his term immediately.

CHEESE MAGNATE JAILED TO SAVE HIM FROM FRAUD

So convinced was Ernest Regez Sr., head of Regez & Son, wholesale cheesemongers of Blanchardville, Wis., of the genuineness of a confidence game into which he had been inveigled that not even a candid friend could alter his opinion. In desperation, the friend telephoned the detective bureau, who promised to arrest Regez and hold him until he should realize his error.

So yesterday Regez sat in the bureau, pleading to be released and allowed to go to French Lick, where a share of $21,000 was awaiting him.

Regez went to the West Baden Springs hotel at French Lick about ten days ago. There he became friendly with a man who sat at the same table. A few days later another man spoke to him, telling him he knew the first man and that the latter had wonderful ideas for making money.

It was the old story of tapping wires and backing horses before the results reached the bookmakers, but it convinced Regez, and he was delighted with the scheme. Regez came to Chicago yesterday to draw out $15,000 to put into the deal, but a friend heard of it and notified the police.

100,000 FAMILIES READY FOR CITY'S BIGGEST MOVING

Costs Jump to $5 Hour, and "No Money in It."

This is Chicago's biggest moving season in years. Approximately 100,000 families will change homes. The storage and van company equipment of the city has been overtaxed for several days and on Tuesday, official moving day, the big trucks will start at dawn and work until dawn, then start all over again with slowly decreasing business until May 15.

According to an official of the People's Gas Light and Coke company, 50,800 requests for changes of address in service had been received up to yesterday noon. He said 10,000 requests will be added to these before tomorrow night and that 100,000 such requests will have been received by May 15.

"At this time last year we had only 36,000 such requests," he added. "It is the biggest season in years."

Van Expenses Jump.

And with more families moving the public is paying more for a change of address than it ever did before. Working conditions for drivers of vans and furniture handlers have changed; their pay has been increased $3 a week, and the public must bear the burden. The big storage and van companies say they already are making little or nothing out of the moving branch of their business and refuse to bear the brunt of added expense.

If a citizen is moving and doing business with one of the big van companies that are associated in a furniture movers' organization, he may have his choice: he may pay $5 an hour straight time for a van and two men, or $1 a mile for the ground covered and $5 an hour for the time consumed in loading and unloading.

"The price has been raised from $4.50 to $5 an hour," said Albert H. Hollander of the Hollander Express and Van company. "This is because we have had to give our men an increase of $3 a week and because they now get time and a half after 5 o'clock in the evening instead of after 7.

"A Sort of Necessary Evil."

"We consider the moving branch of our business a sort of necessary evil. There isn't any money in it, and we are losing, especially on the $1 a mile rate. We had to put that into effect, however, because people claimed our men were loafing on time they were paying for while moving from one flat to another.

"Yes; it is busier than it has been in years. We are overstraining our capacity and so are the other big companies. And the scores of little fellows are getting all they can do and charging whatever they please."

A dozen or more other concerns said they had been turning down demands for service by the score.

500 VIGILANTES TO WAGE WAR ON VAMP AUTOISTS

Will Car Index Violators at Central Office.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Automobile killings in Cook county increased to a rate of about three a day during the last week. Seven days, twenty deaths; a Saturday to Saturday toll. Before that, automobile fatalities had been occurring at the rate of two a day.

Aghast at the increase, the Chicago Safety council, with the backing of other civic bodies, is preparing for active coöperation with the police in finding out who are the reckless drivers who are making the strets unsafe.

A highway safety committee of 500 is being organized. Its members will report violations of traffic rules wherever found. A meting is to be held this week to get the machinery into working shape, and on May 15, the "vigilante" movement will start operating. At first the committee will have 250 members, but when it gets into full swing it is to be doubled in size.

No Stars or Badges.

The members are to serve simply as reporting agents. They will have no authority official or otherwise; they will have no stars or badge, and they will be equipped merely with blank forms on which to report various types o ftraffic law violations. The system has been tried in St. Louis and other large centers with reported success.

When a safety agent notes a violation of traffic rules, such as failing to halt when behind a street car that stops, he will take the number of the motor car, note the time and the rule violated, and will send a slip to the Safety Council headquarters. The name of the owner of the machine will then be looked up and a note will be quietly dispatched advising him of the violation and giving him a copy of the traffic regulations with an invitation to help make the streets safe. All reports will be card indexed.

Find Reckless Element.

If a second report is made on an offender, he will be warned that he is endangering human safety. If a third report comes in, the case will be turned over to the police, who will be able to put the offender under surveillance and perhaps collect evidence for a case in the courts. The chief value of the scheme, it is held, will be in getting information as to the reckless element among the driving public, on which the police can then concentrate.

Chief Collins' drive to enforce the parking ordinance in the loop in less than a week has increased the speed of traffic in the downtown district at least 60 per cent, according to partial checkups. By reducing congestion, it has made the loop streets much safer for pedestrians and riders, and it has increased materially the speed of the surface street cars.

he drive against speeders by both the city and the park police and the stern attitude taken by the automobile courts have had a perceptible effect in reducing reckless driving on the main automobile thoroughfares, particularly the boulevards. But deaths and accidents are increasing on the other streets—the great bulk of the trouble occurs off the protected boulevards and the safety council civilian patrol is expected to keep an eye on streets and districts where the police are comparatively sarce, noting recklessness right in the stream of moving traffic.

Nearly 300,000 Licenses.

It has always been estimated that less than 10 per cent of the automobile drivers make the streets unsafe for the rest of the walking and driving public. In 1921, 222,484 licenses to operate automobiles in Cook county were taken out at Springfield, and it is figured that this year there are about 275,000 drivers in the county. If 20,000 of the reckless and incompetent were brought up with a short turn the result would be a drop in the accident rate.

A movement to wake up the "jay walkers" too is to accompany the campaign against reckless drivers. Among the school children, also, instruction in personal safety and accident prevention is to start tomorrow. In every school, copies of the new safety manual of the board of education, written by three school principals in collaboration with the safety council, are to be used, and first emphasis will be placed upon tragedies coming from playing in the streets.

Speed Chief Hazard.

In Cleveland, an analysis of 4,116 cases turned over to the police by a citizens' safety committee showed that the most frequent offense was that of hazardous speed—over 770 cases of this among the 4,100. And speed itself is a matter of relativity—how much traffic conditions will bear. In an analysis of 520 automobile fatalities in 1922, Massachusetts found that in 169 cases, the speed of the automobile was less than twelve miles per hour. In 215 cases, the machine was traveling at medium speed, twelve to twenty-five miles per hour. In 128 cases the speed was over twenty-five miles per hour. Thus in about 75 per cent of the fatal accidents the speed was not more than twenty-five miles per hour.

The Cleveland report showed that other frequent types of violation were: Driving on wrong side of the street, reckless driving in front of a moving street car or other vehicle, passing street car while taking on passengers, cutting corners, lights out or glaring lights, and failure to slow up near pedestrian or vehicle at crossing.

Make Streets Safer.

The experience of some other states indicates that the safer the streets are made the more they will be used. In Massachusetts, for example, since the safety campaign began reducing the death and accident rate, some three years ago, more than 200,000 automobiles have been added to the registry. In 1919 with 247,000 automobiles, Massachusetts had 582 killings; in 1922, with 449,800 automobiles, the killings numbered 520.

Thus the deaths were reduced more than one a week, although the number of automobiles increased by 202,000, which is almost as many as are now registered in Chicago.

Germans Find Radio Wave to Force Down Airplanes

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—[Tribune Radio.]—French aviation investigators in Germany reported today that the Germans have discovered a radio process which forces airships, however powerful, to land. Serious alarm is felt in French airplane circles at this news, which vitiates every effort in the development of France's chief weapon, aviation. Radio waves of extraordinary potency and of special quality are used to stop the airplane motors.

REUNION AT ARDEN SHORE CAMP

Miss Anna Belle Ferrier greeting a group of "graduates" who attended homecoming yesterday.

At the Old Camp Fire

Nearly a hundred youthful graduates of Arden Shore camp, left their office work or their shops yesterday afternoon and returned to their former camp fires to swap stories of their business adventures, and incidentally to make an official report of their progress in health and wealth to Miss Anna Belle Ferrier, the superintendent.

It was the third annual home coming day party for the "old boys" of the camp, which is maintained each summer near Lake Bluff for under-nourished mothers and children.

North Shore society, which supports the camp, was there to greet the boys with a handshake and a good dinner.

They also saw the first presentation of a movie reel showing scenes of the activities of Arden Shore camp. This reel will be shown at various theaters this week, the proceeds to be applied on the drive which opens Tuesday for funds for the maintenance of the camp.

RUSSIA "AWFUL," SAYS PREACHER BACK FROM EAST

Dr. Joseph B. Hingeley, in charge of the Methodist Episcopal pension fund, has just returned to Chicago from Russia with somewhat of an appreciation of the soviet. "Making all allowances for hostile propoganda," he says, "It is evident that the situation in Russia, from any point of view, is awful. But out of it has come a government—a government differing from any hitherto known—which has established itself and is seeking recognition in the family of the governments of the world.

"Let us not bind our prejudices to words," said Dr. Hingeley. "There are many kinds of goverment. None of the many forms appeal to us as does that of the American republic, but we need to remember that the family of nations is a large one with many varieties of organization."

CHIEF SEEKS TO END LOOP CRUSH DUE TO TRUCKS

Would Bar Bulky Loads; Deaths Now 202.

Speeding up loop traffic and prevention of speeding elsewhere—two of Chief Collins' aims—were under consideration yesterday as Cook County's toll of automobile deaths reached 202.

Two small boys were the victims of the latest fatalities.

Edward Brion of 755 Greenwood avenue, 8 year old son of Edward A. Brion, controller of the Chicago Elevated company, fell in front of the automobile owned by L. A. Goddard of 1419 North State parkway, driven by C. O. Carlson, while it was being driven at six miles an hour at Park and Greenwood avenues, Glencoe. One of the wheels passed over his body, crushing out his life.

Loop Jam Less, Chief Says.

Raymond Brown, 5 years old, ran from his home at 6104 Prairie avenue just in time to be knocked down and killed by a taxicab driven by George Haggart of 403 West 63d street. Haggart was held pending an investigation.

The recent strict enforcement of the parking laws has done much to relieve loop congestion, Chief Collins said in commenting on traffic conditions, and he has decided not to request the council to pass an ordinance prohibiting parking during the day.

Instead, he announced, he would ask that deliveries of ice, coal, and other bulky commodities in the loop be prohibited between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. Police activities of the last week, in keeping an eagle eye on all automobiles left at curbings have accomplished much good, he said, and, with the elimination of the delays caused by the unloading of big trucks, loop driving will be greatly facilitated.

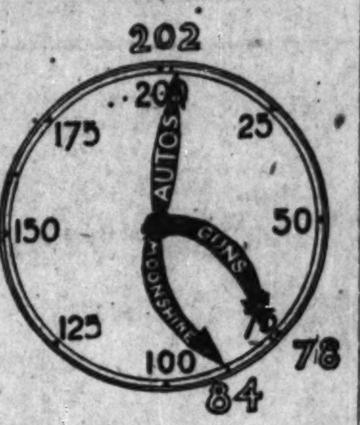
Lieut. John Martin, traffic commander, said the overtime parking crusade has enabled all automobiles to get through the loop in half the time it formerly took. The "chalk line" experiment at State and Madison streets also proved successful.

Police Placed at Chalk Lines.

Traffic Policemen Albin Johnson and Michael Daley, who bring order out of the chaos at the world's busiest corner, said that, while Saturdays are usually the worst days for congestion, there was none yesterday. Both were pleased at the use of the chalk lines.

"Half holidays and pay envelopes double the number of State street shoppers on Saturdays," said Policeman Johnson. "We did not have a bit of trouble today; the only difficulty is that the white chalk line got dirty too early; but all motorists obeyed it. We didn't have a single tieup or arrest. It's been the best day since before the Christmas rush."

HANDS OF DEATH



Today the hand of death showing the number of automobile killings in Cook county since Jan. 1 passes the 200 mark. The other hands show the record of deaths by guns and moonshine since Jan. 1.

U. S. BOARD GETS FOURTH APPEAL FOR PAY BOOST

Railway labor's drive for wage scales in effect prior to July 1, 1921, continued yesterday as the fourth pay petition of the week was filed with the United States railroad labor board. The latest came from the Brotherhood of Railway Station Employés for its members on the Boston and Albany railway, asking an increase of 15 cents an hour.

Applications previously filed—on behalf of about 300,000 employés and seeking an annual boost of approximately $100,000—are from the Order of Railroad Expressmen, Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employés and Railway Shop Laborers, and International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America.

No hearings in these cases will be held until President Harding appoints successors to the three labor board members whose terms expired April 15, it is said.

Gives Cheerful Greeting; Leaps to Death in Lake

After cheerfully greeting Harry J. Walls, bathing beach manager, a middle aged unidentified man yesterday walked nonchalantly to the end of the East 76th street pier and leaped into the lake. Walls shouted for aid and dived after the man, but did not succeed in getting him ashore before he had drowned.

A signet ring, bearing the initials "F. E. M.," was the only clue discovered to the man's identity when Grand Crossing police took the body to the Skeeles and Biddle's morgue, 2700 East 75th street. The victim was 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighed 200 pounds and had gray hair. He wore a gray coat, blue trousers, blue sweater and black fedora hat. In his pockets were found two pairs of eyeglasses. He was about 50 years old.

NEW BANKS IN ENGLEWOOD AND AUSTIN OPENED

A milestone in the business development of West Englewood was passed yesterday when the new West Englewood Trust and Savings bank building at 63d street and Marshfield avenue threw its doors open to the public. The West Englewood bank, out of which the present organization has grown, was founded in 1909 with a capital of $125,000. In 1912 it was merged with the Ashland State bank and in 1920, with the addition of a trust department, the name was changed to the present title.

The North Austin Trust and Savings bank was also opened yesterday in its new quarters at 5826 West division street. The bank, of which Joseph Wassel is president, is an affiliated member of the Chicago Clearing House association.

A massmeeting of Lawndale residents will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Herzl school.

SUCCESSOR TO ETTELSON FINDS FUNDS DEPLETED

"Investigator" Mania Is Held Responsible.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Corporation Counsel Busch is peeved.

It will be recalled that a day or so after he took office he said that Mayor Dever desired that the expense of the law department be curtailed so that the appropriation might be reduced next year. He added that he intended to make some saving this year.

Now he has obtained a report of what has been spent to April 25, which discloses that in some funds there is little left to be saved, because the major portion of the appropriation for the entire year already has been spent.

For part of the legal services of the board of local improvements there was appropriated $50,000 under a personal service account labeled 50-B. Of that allotment, $38,975 has been spent. To real estate and other experts went $27,475, to commissioners $10,550, to investigators $500, and to miscellaneous services $450.

Wonders How to Do It.

Mr. Busch is now wondering how he can operate for the remaining two-thirds of the year on $11,025 and make a saving, if it was necessary to spend $38,975 in less than the first third of the year.

For court reporting the city council allowed $15,000 for the entire calendar year of 1923 under account 16-L-1. The accountants' report to Mr. Busch shows that the law department did a large amount of talking on which they required a stenographic report. Of the $15,000, there has been spent $7,814, leaving Mr. Busch $7,185 with which to finish the year.

For printing and binding opinions of the corporation counsel from "1914 to 1924, inclusive," according to the report of the bookkeepers, the city appropriated $10,000, of which $5,009.93 has been spent. Of the expenses $3,[illegible]41 went to investigators. The investigators number thirteen and their salaries were on the basis of $1,200 to $2,400 a year. The accountants who prepared the report for Mr. Busch said they did not have the slightest idea what the investigators investigated.

Investigators at Every Turn.

The last administration apparently had a hobby of investigators. Mr. Busch had so many that he discharged a dozen and a half last week because of "lack of work."

Another fund of the corporation counsel designated as 16-B is for personal services, for which $65,000 was appropriated. A total of $38,391.39 of this sum has been spent. Of course, a large part went to investigators. The accountants' report shows that thirty-one investigators were on the payroll at salaries ranging from $1,200 to [illegible] a year each. They have already collected $11,607.17. Real estate and other experts have taken $21,650 and lawyers $3,012.90 additional, an engineer $650 and miscellaneous items total $1,471.32.

The accountants' report also says regarding another investigator for the committee, on high costs and high rents: "Statements have been made that there is an attorney filling the position of investigator at $1,800 per year, who acts in the capacity of an attorney."

$7,030 Paid to Crum.

The committee on gas, oil and electric light was given an appropriation of $25,000, and $11,342.66 of that amount has been spent. Of these expenditures $7,000 has been paid to W. E. Crum for engineering services at the rate of $100 per day.

The committee has already appointed a subcommittee to investigate the employment of Mr. Crum and make a report. The committee voted that no more of his bills be paid until this inquiry is completed.

Another item in this expenditure is $1,774.10 to D. A. Roberts, an attorney, at $50 per day.

Mr. Busch has ordered the special attorneys in charge of street improvements not to incur any liabilities without his personal sanction. There are three of these lawyers at $6,000 a year each, one at $60 a day, and five at $50 a day each. Of course, they have investigators. Three of them are on the pay roll at $125 a month. One is designated as an expert law investigator and has been receiving $250 a month, and still another "special investigator" has been getting $20 a day.

Sees Need of More Funds.

"When I went into the corporation counsel's office seven and a half years ago," commented Senator Ettelson, "the funds were actually depleted, and I then decided that when I went out it would be different. If any one will check up they will find that the funds in the corporation counsel's office when I left were in very good shape. I even prevailed upon the council to appropriate for two or three extra $6,000 a year jobs because I felt that the new head of the office would need them.

"Last year the council gave us a supplemental appropriation of more than $75,000, as I recall it; and it should be done again this year. The reason is that insufficient money was appropriated in the first budget."

BOOM HERE ADDS NEW HOMES FOR 36,169 FAMILIES

In the last fifteen months buildings enough to furnish homes for 36,169 families have been erected in Chicago, according to a report issued yesterday by Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom. Of this number, permits for the erection of buildings to house 11,224 have been issued since Jan. 1. Mr. Bostrom in his report figures that each family consists of five persons and estimates that homes for more than 180,000 persons have been added because of the building boom.

Fire in Producers Milk Garage Does $1,000 Damage

Fire which broke out in the garage of the Producers Milk company, Canalport avenue and South Jefferson street, for a time last night threatened to destroy the structure and the twenty-three milk trucks in the building. When the first fire apparatus arrived the flames were so threatening that a second call was sounded. The fire was soon under control. The loss was estimated at $1,000.

Machine Gun Practice on Municipal Pier Today

This morning the lake front contiguous to the Municipal pier will reverberate to the boom of one pounders and trench mortars and the staccato drumming of machine guns and automatic rifles, when forty organized reserve officers will witness a demonstration of auxiliary weapons given by the Second Regiment infantry. The exhibition will begin at 9:30, standard time, or 10:30 daylight saving time. The public will be permitted to view the performance.

Woman Threatens Jeweler in Letter; Fined $500

Peoria, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Mrs. Harriet M. Smith of Canton was fined $500 and costs today when she pleaded guilty in federal court to using the mails to defraud. Mrs. Smith was alleged to have mailed J. H. Carruthers, jeweler, letters threatening him with harmful publicity if he did not leave $400 in a window of the Congregational church. Federal authorities arrested the woman when she called for the money.

COLLINS TO PUT 200 SERGEANTS ON PATROL DUTY

Finds Old Checkup Work Fails of Results.

Chief of Police Morgan A. Collins yesterday effected his first important change in departmental organization by a general order, the immediate effect of which will be to add more than 200 experienced officers to the working force of the department. The order is a departure from usual procedure, inasmuch as it directs commanding officers to assign uniform sergeants to the more important posts in their districts. In other words, it puts 200 sergeants "traveling beat."

The chief made it plain in his order that it is not his intention to demote the sergeants, but he wants to put them in the places where they will do the most good. His idea is that the taxpayers of Chicago are entitled to a dollar's worth of protection for each of the $11,000,000 they pay annually for support of the police department and to this end he has other general orders in mind—orders which eliminate the "soft jobs" from the department. He believes that in every district from one to four patrolmen are holding jobs which can be eliminated and the men put on the streets.

Many Other Duties.

"You only read of the police department in connection with the suppression of vice and gambling, regulation of traffic, and solution of major crimes," he said, "but those are not the whole duty of the policemen. Primarily they are sworn to protect the lives and welfare of the citizens and this means protection from rowdyism on the street and petty thievery as well as other crimes."

His order of yesterday was his first step in this direction. At present there are 800 sergeants on the police force and only 4,700 patrolmen—one sergeant for each six men—and the chief thinks that is entirely too many. Under former Chief Fitzmorris three sergeants were assigned to check up on the work of the patrolmen on each shift in each district. This practice will cease May 1, when Chief Collins' order goes into effect.

Fails to Work Out.

"We found that that didn't work out successfully," the chief said yesterday. "The sergeant on one tier would meet the sergeant on the next and the first thing you knew you would find the three sergeants and possibly some favored policeman all traveling together. The idea was that some sergeant would check up on each patrolman during each shift, but it didn't work out."

Under Chief Collins' plan, as outlined in the order, only one sergeant will be assigned to roundsman's duty on each shift, and the commanding officers are directed to assign their additional sergeants to the most important posts in their districts.

"This will mean that about two additional posts will be added to each of the thirty-four police districts. On the important ones will be a sergeant who will really be doing the work of a patrolman.

Makes for Efficiency.

"This will mean," Chief Collins said, "that on the important posts—the posts where trouble is likely to occur—we will have an experienced man with authority. He will have authority to call upon the policemen on neighboring beats to assist him and he can phone to the station for additional men and when they arrive will be in a position and have the authority to direct them in their duties."

The matter of assignment of the sergeants is to be left entirely to the commanding officers in the districts, for the chief said yesterday "that he wasn't going to do their police work for them." If the sergeants on the beats don't do their duties, it is up to the captains to see that they do, as they have to explain to Chief Collins for the conduct of their district.

Printing Pressmen Vote to Rejoin Parent Union

Chicago Printing Pressmen's union No. 3 voted yesterday to rejoin the international organization, from which they had been separated four years. By a three to one vote they also decided to drop the court case against the international union—misappropriation of funds was the charge—in which they had won an initial verdict.

BUNDESEN MAKES EVERY CITIZEN A SMOKE INSPECTOR

Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen yesterday appealed to the citizens of Chicago to aid him in his drive to eliminate the smoke nuisance. To this end he has promised to give as much attention to the complaints of individuals as he would to the reports of his own inspectors. It is because his inspectors are not able to cover the entire city efficiently that he has appealed to the citizens.

In many instances, he said, reports of violations are received over the telephone and by the time the inspector arrives the chimney complained of has quit smoking. This often necessitates the inspector making two or three trips to the building.

The citizens can be of great assistance in the campaign, he said, if they will make written reports, giving the following information:

Address where chimney is smoking.
Owner of the building.
Dense smoke began. [Time.]
Dense smoked stopped. [Time.]
Total minutes of dense smoke.
Name and address of the observer and date of violation. Mail reports to department of health, city hall.

BOXING, BIBLES AND BALL BRING BOY BETTERMENT

"Boxing, bibles and baseball" are the best incentives for Sunday school classes, according to Clarence Jones, director of the Tabernacle Scouts, a boys' organization in the Gospel tabernacle, Clark and Halsted streets.

"The boys," Mr. Jones said, "play better baseball coming onto the field direct from Sunday school class, and they get more out of Sunday school classes if they've had some stiff boxing first."

Mr. Jones told a group of north side business men, who gave a camp supper for the boys last night, that the Scouts had grown from 30 to 250 boys in fifty days. "They will now have a gymnasium and a baseball field, and a padded ring before midsummer. Crime in the neighborhood," he said, "has gone down considerably since the three B's went into effect."

Residence Lot Prices

Business Lots
IN ROGERS PARK

MY opinion that this district will show more building activity and appreciation in value this year than any other North Side section—is substantiated by facts.

Witness This Instance:

"A" purchased two lots from me last July for $3,500—and after paying in only $1,000 in partial payments—sold his property for $4,250—a profit of $750 on the $1,000 cash he had actually paid in up to resale. This case is representative of many others that are recorded in our files—subject to investigation by prospective purchasers.

THE residence lot prices on my Pratt Boulevard lots that have recently been reserved as business frontage by the Zoning Commission—are still in effect. Here is a wonderful investment opportunity to buy official business frontage at residential prices.

It costs nothing to get the facts. Full information is YOURS FOR THE ASKING; no obligation, of course.

DE VALERA PEACE OFFER FAILS TO ENTHUSE IRISH

Envoy of Pope Urges Its Discussion.

DUBLIN, April 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—Eamon de Valera's proposals for peace stand no chance of acceptance until he explains his terms more clearly, according to the consensus of opinion expressed today by Dublin's political circles.

Inquiry at the government offices elicited the statement that the cabinet has not yet dealt with the matter and that it was not thought any official pronouncement of the government's attitude would be made.

Mgr. Luzio, the papal delegate who has been investigating conditions in Ireland, is understood to take the view that the Republican offer requirs consideration. The Irish newspapers are generally skeptical but expectations are entertained that once the rebels lay down their arms for any reason they will not resume them.

No New Basis in Offer.

The Free State supporters sum up the situation somewhat as follows: Beyond his offer for the immediate cessation of hostilities, De Valera's proposals ostensibly hold out no attraction. His basis for peace apparently does not differ from the contentions he has always maintained. His willingness to submit to a popular vote still depends upon the proviso that such vote be free, by which he is understood to mean that England should not interefere if the voters decide for a republic.

The proposals also appear to contemplate a refusal to take the oath provided by the treaty, and the provision that the republicans retain their arms while negotiations are pending is said to be unacceptable. This last point, however, may possibly be met by an offer to hand them over to a neutral nominated by Mgr. Luzio.

Insists De Valera Is Prisoner.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—[Tribune Radio.]—The collapse of the republican cause in Ireland was directly due to Eamon de Valera's capture last Saturday, according to confidential telegrams reaching Francis J. Lowe, who was sent by the Irish sympathizers in America to conciliate the two factions.

De Valera has not been imprisoned, but is being kept under strict surveillance by the Free State authorities. who are showing him the republican cause is doomed, Lowe says. The news of De Valera's capture was denied in Ireland in order that the effect of his appeal for a settlement would not be lessened, Lowe insists.

French Recognition of Mexico Waits on U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—Quai d'Orsay announced today that the French government intends to recognize the Obregon government as soon as the United States does, as the French investments in Mexico amount to six or seven billion gold francs (a gold franc is 20 cents), which the government has not been able to protect during the last ten years.

BUSCH TO FIGHT CABARET WRITS AGAINST POLICE

Judge Refuses Temporary Injunction to One.

Chicago's night life, which has been shining brightly until the wee hours of the morning through the aid of court injunctions prohibiting police from interfering with certain cabarets, got a severe blow yesterday when Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch made good his threat to fight the issuance of such orders.

Within twenty-four hours of the announcement by Chief of Police Collins that he was going to dim the bright lights by enforcing the 1 o'clock closing law for cabarets and his request to the corporation counsel for an opinion as to his powers in the matter, the Dreamland café, a black and tan cabaret at 3520 South State street, was in court with a request for an injunction. Apparently the action was filed for a test case.

Refuses Temporary Writ.

The matter came up before Judge Hugo Friend in the Circuit court, but at the request of Assistant Corporation Counsel Leonard Grossman the judge refused to grant a temporary injunction and continued the matter until Wednesday.

"The corporation counsel's office intends to fight every one of these cases," Mr. Grossman said, "ending for all time collusion between the corporation counsel's office and the appeal for protection against law enforcement through injunction. This café doesn't want an injunction so that it can stay open after 1 o'clock. It wants an injunction to prevent police interference."

Approve New Policy.

Attorney Grossman reported to Corporation Counsel Busch that Judge Friend expressed himself as much gratified with the policy of the new administration, and deplored the fact that in over 50 per cent of similar cases the former corporation counsel's office would file no answer and would say neither aye, nay or yea, leaving the court to hold the bag. Investigators from Mr. Grossman's office were at the cabaret last night and will attend again tonight to get first hand information.

Chief Collins said that he was glad that Attorney Busch had taken the stand that he had, and intimated that plans were under way to reopen the cases in which injunctions have already been granted. Yesterday he conferred with Samuel P. Thrasher, head of the Committee of Fifteen, who reported that in many of the places protected by injunctions liquor was being sold, suggestive dancing permitted, and soliciting by girls allowed. Nothing is to be done, however, until the chief gets his opinion from the corporation counsel on Monday or Tuesday.

GERMANS "GAS" VAST COKE PILES TO FOIL FRENCH

Render Fuel Useless by Chemicals.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUSSELDORF, April 28.—A Belgian cavalryman was killed and another wounded by German snipers last night. Well placed charges of dynamite wrecked the bridgehead near Dattingen, closing the French military railway for the next two weeks.

DUSSELDORF, April 28.—[Tribune Radio.]—Hundreds of thousands of tons of the highest grade coke in the Ruhr has been chemically treated by the Germans, rendering it useless for metallurgical purposes.

The stocks tampered with are at coke ovens as yet unoccupied by the French, but the Germans are boasting of this trick which deprives the French furnaces of a considerable amount of fuel.

As a counter measure, Gen. de Goutte, the French commander in chief, has issued an ordinance confiscating all coke and coal tar byproducts in occupied territory. Persons meddling with coal are subject to a heavy fine and not more than five years imprisonment.

Ruhr Peace Hopes Drop.

French headquarters here have learned that a recent intimation from Berlin to Paris announces Germany's intention to continue passive resistance until a final agreement is signed.

As the French have demanded that Berlin completely acknowledge defeat by abandoning passive resistance in the Ruhr valley and order its tens of thousands state employés to work before the start of the reparations negotiations, all hope for an early settlement has been given up here.

The struggle is breeding idleness and discontent, and if it continues as "peacefully" for another three months more than half of the 13,000,000 population of the Rhineland and Ruhr valley will become state charges.

Valley Now Desolate.

The Ruhr valley, with its 5,000,000 people, is already the scene of desolation. Fires in all the coke ovens have been drawn. The coal production has fallen to 15 per cent of the normal output, except in those mines which have factories at their pitheads. The tremendous slump in the steel tonnage has caused scores of factories to close, or else work two days each week.

This industrial deterioration is increasing much more rapidly as the coal supply within the occupied territory is being gradually stopped. The German trains and street cars, with the exception of the interurban lines, will cease running altogether.

ALDERMAN TAKES BRIDE

Ald. Edward J. Kaindl of the Thirty-fourth ward and Miss Hazel Berg, daughter of Mrs. Alex Moore, were married last night at Hotel Sherman. Only a few intimate friends of the couple were present. KILLER TRADES ROPE SENTENCE FOR LIFE TERMS

Thaddeus Johnson, colored laborer who killed his wife, Stella, by throwing her through an open window to a concrete sidewalk, was saved from the gallows yesterday when Judge Marcus Kavanagh in Criminal court sustained a motion for a new trial.

A few minutes after the motion was upheld, Johnson approached the bar and entered a motion for a plea of guilty to the charge. Judge Kavanagh then sentenced him to Joliet penitentiary for the rest of his life.

Johnson was convicted of the murder by a jury several weeks ago. His penalty was set at death. The attorney for the defense stated in his arguments yesterday that the man was given the death penalty because he was "poor, alone, and did not have the spectacular defense of other murderers had who are now walking the streets."

Force Wife to Look On as Texan Is Beaten to Death

Fort Worth, Tex., April 28.—While his wife looked on, L. N. Nichols, resident of the stove foundry road, was beaten to death in a fist fight in the rear of the Nichols home this morning. Mrs. Nichols, in a statement to District Attorney Hanger, said the assailants of her husband took turns about holding her and beating her husband with their fists. Two arrests have been made.

WHITES REFUSE TO MIX ON LINER WITH COLORED

New York, April 28.—An invisible color line was drawn across the dining room of the Cunard liner Albania before she sailed for England today. On one side of the line sat 141 white passengers, on the other thirty-four members of a troupe of colored plantation songsters bound for London to stage their musical revue.

The fog of discord descended on the Albania about the time set for departure, when the colored women laden with orchids, with their male escorts staggering under diamond ornaments, topped the gangway.

The 141 whites formed a line at the pursuer's window and 141 protests were filed, accompanied by threats to cancel passages. The color line was the captain's solution.

HOLDS MAN TO GRAND JURY ON STORY OF GIRL

Although five girls appeared to testify yesterday against Louis Freulgraff, 28 years old, 3128 West Harrison street, charged with taking liberties with young girls, the testimony of one of them was sufficient for Judge Peter Schwaba to make his decision.

Rosaline Springwater, 14 years old, 2855 West Harrison street, charged Freulgraff had taken her into an alley and mistreated her Judge Schwaba held Freulgraff to the grand jury in bonds of $3,500.

FRANCE RUSHES TROOPS TO SYRIA TO BALK TURKS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 28.—Two divisions are being sent to Syria by the French government to maintain its league of nations mandate. There are now 26,000 troops in Syria. Gen. Weygand, the new high commissioner, will arrive in Alexandretta on May 10, near where the Turkish government has concentrated 20,000 troops under Djavad Pasha.

It is the aim of the French government to play a strong hand at the Near East peace conference at Lausanne and be prepared to back up its stand.

A new agreement has been reached between France and Greece and the Greeks have offered 180,000 Greek troops to support the French in Asia Minor.

The real significance which the French government claims to see in the Chester concession is that the American interests are being forced to build a strategic railway system through which Turkey will be able to play a far greater role in the future destinies of the near east than former Kaiser Wilhelm ever dreamed of playing with his Berlin-Bagdad route.

With this railway system the French believe the Turks can exert great pressure against France in Syria and open a new route into India and Asia, in spite of British opposition.

Puts French Under Turk Guns.

Quai d'Orsay emphasizes the statement that the Sivas-Van line figured as the main line basic concession with a branch toward the Bay of Alexandretta.

The later concession shows that the line to Alexandretta is one of the principal lines and it includes the construction of a new harbor at Youmourtalik, a town situated on the west bank of the bay, while the town of Alexandretta is on the east bank. The concession allows the Turks to build fortifications at Youmourtalik in connection with the harbor works. The important French base at Alexandretta then would be under Turkish guns. Quai d'Orsay emphasizes the assertion that the Turks are planning a military and naval base which they hope will dominate Syria.

Delay Concession Discussion.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LAUSANNE, April 28.—The economic committee of the Turkish peace conference decided today to avoid dealing with concessions for the present. It was explained that the allies intend to wait the results of direct French negotiations with the Turks at Constantinople concerning clauses in the Chester concession, which it is claimed voilate a previous grant to France in 1914.

If the French are unable to obtain satisfaction in Constantinople, they will insist, with the British and Italian support, upon bringing up the matter.

Gen. Pelle went to Paris to interview Premier Poincare tomorrow regarding his attitude on the Chester grant. The conference was adjourned until Tuesday.

PAPER CUT CAUSES DEATH.

RUSSIA STUDIES JAP PROPOSALS FOR TRADE PACT

MOSCOW, April 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—The soviet foreign office announces that it is considering the proposal of Japan through her representative at Vladivostok for partial renewal of relations with Russia somewhat along the lines of the Russo-British trade agreement, which Moscow considers tantamount to de facto recognition.

The proposals include the stationing of Japanese commercial agents at Moscow, Vladivostok, Chita, and the principal Siberian commercial centers, and of soviet commercial agents at Yokohama, Nagasaki, and other centers, but not at Tokio.

Adolph Joffe, representing the soviet government, has been in the far east for several months carrying on negotiations first at Peking and later at Tokio. If the two governments agree to these proposals and a preliminary treaty is drafted, it would, according to the Moscow viewpoint, mark the end of the struggle in the far east.

Must sacrifice thousands of fine suits and overcoats

Doors of our old store closed forever last night. We had to move; had hoped to get into the new store we've been telling you about while we were making new friends by our great removal sale.

But the new store, in the Chicago Temple building, wasn't ready.

We had to do something; couldn't go out of business for a minute; see thousands of the newest and finest suits lying in packing cases.

So we leased temporarily the great second floor of the building at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Madison streets—the room where Stillson's restaurant used to be.

Many good things have been served in that famous room, but never has there been such a feast of value-giving as will start there tomorrow morning.

All that remains of the stock from our old store will be thrown on sale at a fraction of its real worth.

More important still, thousands of the new suits, in finest fabrics and latest patterns must be sacrificed. We can't sit and hold them indefinitely.

Quality is the highest—the quality we had intended for the opening of what we are determined shall be Chicago's best clothing store. Values are even better, if possible, than we've been giving at our great removal sale.

Doors open tomorrow at 8:30 A. M. Main entrance on Madison Street

POLITICS AND PRIVATE ENTERPRISE.

There are very few people in the United States who definitely favor abolition of private property and the complete reconstruction of our system according to the theories of Karl Marx. But there are a good many who favor various proposals that are socialistic, though under other names, and the tendencies of whose thought is in the direction of a gradual transformation of our system into that of socialism.

It is important that this drift should be realized by those who are in its current. We do not say that our present system is perfect or that no arguments can honestly be made on behalf of socialistic measures for the correction of the evils existing within this system. But we do say that we ought to see what we are headed for.

The tendency toward socialistic cures is the product of an assumption that to turn over capital or a capitalistic enterprise to the government is to turn it over to the people; that is, to ourselves. The phrase "peopleization" expresses this idea and it has a pleasant sound, for is it not pleasant to think that a valuable property which now, theoretically or legally, belongs to others shall be given to us? Of course, this assumption is moralized by another—namely: that the property has been withheld from us wrongfully, by force or deceit, and that consequently we are only taking what is ours.

We do not propose to discuss this theory of justification, but only what "peopleization" or government or public ownership in fact comes to. It means in fact the control of property and the management of enterprise by men we elect or by officials appointed by men whom we elect. In short, it means political in place of business management of enterprise.

Americans ought to think that over very carefully. They need not rely entirely upon theorizing. In Europe most of the nations have given over important industries, especially railroads, to government, that is, political management, and Russia since the bolshevik revolution has been trying the experiment of political control of all industry save farming, which it dared not attempt.

Human nature, being imperfect as to both morals and intellect, does not work perfectly in the private management of wealth. But why should we expect the same human nature working through politics to do any better? Our experience, and the experience of the old world, demonstrates, it seems to us, that it works less well, not better.

Politicians of a certain familiar variety, asserting special devotion to the people's welfare, naturally argue that wherever affairs are not satisfactory all that is needed is to turn them over to the government; that is, to their control. They do not say, "Give this to us," but "Take this yourselves." But that means in practice, "Turn this over to us to manage for you." That would be all very well if they could do better than the private individuals who now manage them. But the facts of experience do not support such a claim. America has prospered almost without precedent under the régime of private initiative and private property. Part of this prosperity has been the gift of nature, but it has been also the result of a system of liberty and personal reward which has stimulated the energies of our people and brought out leaders of genius whose service to the general prosperity has been far greater than any profit they have won for themselves. To exchange this system for one which refuses special reward to special ability, which gives management to bureau officials controlled by politicians or by the deadening hand of official routine, would be to reduce the common wealth and retard the common progress of us all. It has been tried often in history, and it has always proved a misfortune alike to the individuals and to the nation which adopted it, and to the poor more than to the powerful.

A DUTY UNPERFORMED.

The Herrin trials have resulted in an expected complete failure of justice. The atrocious murder of a score of human beings remains and will remain unpunished. Are we to let it go at that?

We know why the processes of justice were helpless in Williamson county. There is no mystery. Are we going to make an attempt to correct the weakness or accept it as inevitable?

Attorney General Brundage does well to remind us of this issue. Measures should be taken to provide for the application of law in such cases as Herrin. The right of a murderer to be tried in the county of the crime should not be superior to the right of the state to protection. Clear exception should be made in cases such as Herrin. No community should be permitted to wipe out the law within its borders as Williamson county has done. The defendant has a right to remove his prosecution when he alleges prejudice against him. In cases like Herrin the state should be granted a similar right.

We recognize that this is a delicate and difficult matter and we would not favor the least encroachment upon proper safeguards thrown about the individual accused of crime. But we think the legislature should give careful, impartial study to the evil exposed in the case of Williamson county and at least try to make provision for the effective defense of the public peace and of the safety of persons in such cases.

A Herrin atrocity does not often occur, happily, but once is once too often.

Prevention, blocked in this case by politics and the same influences which defeated prosecution, is better than punishment, but punishment is necessary when prevention fails. In this case both failed for the same reason, and the result is a disgrace and a danger to Illinois. It is the duty of the legislature to consider whether modifications of law cannot be made to forestall such defiance of law and civilized order by any community.

FUNDAMENTAL AMERICANISM.

Resistance to the drift away from fundamental American principles grows steadily stronger and more authoritative. It is the more significant and the more formidable because it is not "organized," but spontaneous and individual. Hardly a week passes that we do not read a protest from some citizen whose word carries weight against abuse of regulatory measures, multiplication of laws, centralization of power, or infringements of private right, and it is this leadership of opinion rather than the words of various patriotic societies or leagues, however useful and well intentioned the latter may be, which indicates a real movement for the preservation of Amricanism.

The latest conspicuous discussion of this character is that of Chief Justice Thompson of the Illinois Supreme court, who addressed the Sons of the American Revolution annual gathering on the topic, "A Recurrence to Fundamental Principles." If there is any truism the people of this country need to think over, it is that which the chief justice expressed when he said: "Whenever we thrust regulatory laws upon our neighbor we are only endangering our own liberty. We don't know when he will thrust regulatory laws upon us." And he reminded his hearers of a fundamental for which the zealous reformer of others seems to have very little respect—namely: that "the citizen is guaranteed all his rights, except those he surrendered for the good of government."

What is the essence, the fundamental principle of our American system of government? A generation seems to be in danger of forgetting it. Let us recall it and rededicate ourselves to it before we have lost it. The American republic was founded on the theory of ordered liberty, on the conception of a free individual who had freely confided to government a certain defined authority necessary to the regulation of public business, the maintenance of order and security and the protection of private rights. But it was never considered that the individual in setting up such a government had erected a state the function of which was to regulate his private life, endow him with virtue, impose upon him codes of conduct, or set over him a tribunal of conscience.

On the contrary, the American conception was founded on a profound faith in the individual, in his right to the greatest freedom consistent with orderly society, and our constitutional system especially sought to safeguard this freedom from encroachment by any collective power. It is the very core of Americanism that the individual reserves certain fundamental rights which no majority, however overwhelming, shall reach.

Many Americans, and ironically they are very largely natives, have forgotten or never seized this principle of Americanism. They are convinced of their own righteousness and they propose that their neighbor shall be governed by it. Added to this tendency is that which turns constantly to the political authority of government to correct all inequities or misfortunes arising in the free activities of business and social life. If anything seems wrong, pass a law and put a government official to set and keep it straight. Since state legislatures are numerous, go direct to Washington and save trouble. Hence we have a growing multitude of legal restrictions, a growing bureaucracy more and more centralized, multiplying regulations of private initiative and private judgment, growing aggrandizement of government and such a multiplicity of laws that their equal enforcement has become impossible.

No wonder men of foresight such as Mr. Chief Justice Thompson and many other eminent men are concerned with this drift away from American fundamentals. It presents the chief problem of the hour.

LET LABOR MEET CAPITAL ON ITS OWN LEVEL.

Robert Henderson, secretary of the shopmen's union of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, obtained the floor at the annual meeting of the stockholders of that company through a stockholder's proxy. He seized the opportunity to tell the meeting that the directors' policy was "rule or ruin," that they tried to wreck the union in the shopmen's strike, and that they were otherwise tyrannical and unfair to labor.

That is a common view of union labor. It would not even suggest comment but for the circumstances under which it was voiced. The union representative's right to speak was based upon the proxy which he held. In that fact is an important suggestion to union labor.

Proxies represent stock which is not represented in person by the owner. Whereas one union labor representative gained the right to speak and to vote in this meeting by holding a proxy from some stockholder, a thousand might have gained that right if they had owned even one share of stock each.

Some of the railroad labor unions are rich. The locomotive engineers own some highly successful banks and much property. Others have something, though perhaps less. If these unions, or the individuals comprising their membership, or both, would invest some of their reserve in railroad stocks they would have the privilege of a voice in the management of the railroads by which they are employed. If the various railroad unions would coöperate to that end they could easily buy not only a voice but absolute control of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Why do they not do so instead of slipping in to a meeting on a single proxy? It would give them knowledge of the problems of railroad management and financing which would be invaluable. It would bring them to the realization that labor and capital have equal responsibility and equal rights to reward in railroad operation. It would check the cries of "rule or ruin" on both sides.

Mr. Henderson had a good idea when he obtained the proxy and entered the meeting, though we doubt that he used it well. He would have a better idea if he bought a share of stock and induced his union associates to do likewise. The interests of capital and labor are interdependent and common. Capitalists labor. If labor would accept its opportunities to become capitalistic, peace would be inevitable.

OBSERVE, NOW, OUR BROWN BROTHER.

We have had some sympathy with the cause of Philippine independence as a good thing for the United States. There are islands near the American coast which we need for defense, but we cannot see any defense we have for the islands we have in Asiatic wars. It seems to us that our Uncle Sam in the Philippines is a long way from home in his night shirt.

There is a natural national egotism which gets sentimental gratification out of a map showing the Philippines marked "American possessions," but that gratification will not be worth much at the bankers if trouble comes. Probably if a great deal of oil were found in the islands and other resources were highly developed we'd kick ourselves for getting out. Probably also a nation ought to hold anything it has and can keep. Then it will not be as Great Britain looking at Helgoland and saying there was a fine mistake. These are probabilities, but they face the certainty that a nation should cut its military cloth to fit its foreign policies.

Consequently we have thought that Filipino independence might be a good thing for Americans, and the United States has more or less promised it with an effective reservation here and there which more or less indicates the Filipinos will not get it very soon.

There has been a real moral reluctance in sentimental America to turn the islands loose for fear they'd find a new boss who would treat the natives rough or for fear they would fall into the hands of their own unscrupulous leaders and in the end revert to race and tribal wars. Then the American conscience, the existence of which is doubted in many places abroad, would keep all the American pacifists awake nights and they would be insisting that we send an army to remedy the situation, whether it was to drive Japan out or to subdue the Moros.

The Filipino friends of freedom have announced that they not only regard liberty as a divine right not to be alienated but that they believe the Philippines have a right to British North Borneo. They probably mean all of Borneo. There would be no excuse for picking on Great Britain and allowing Dutch Borneo and the two Malay dependencies of the British to escape.

We do not know how the Filipinos intend to get these British and Dutch possessions, but when they start getting them we hope American responsibilities in the Pacific stop at Hawaii.

LEGISLATIVE SIDESTEPPING.

With the speeding up of Gov. Small's political propaganda in support of his proposed $100,000,000 road bond issue there are some indications in the assembly of a desire on the part of certain legislators to sidestep responsibility. The weak kneed among them argue that the proposition should be put up to the voters. They themselves are not willing to defy the administration's coercive threats and defeat the proposal in Springfield without the cost and danger of error of a state election.

Such political weaklings imperil fundamental principles of popular representative government. The members of the state assembly, presumably, are men selected for exceptional ability. They are put into office to represent their constituents and look out for the best interests of their constituents. They are honored in this respect and paid for their time on the theory that they have exceptional ability and will give the necessary time and study to public questions in order to reach intelligent decisions.

Small's political road bond proposal is a public question which demands such study. The members of the legislature have time and opportunity to study it. That is one of the things for which they are elected and paid. They should make up their minds on its merits and act accordingly.

Only if they are convinced that it is good are they justified in submitting it to popular approval. If they are convinced that it is bad, as many of them are convinced, they should kill it. They should not dodge responsibility by thrusting upon comparatively uninformed constituents the necessity of making a decision which the legislators themselves are better qualified to make.

THE LUCKY RUSSIANS.

A branch of the American relief administration in Russia has announced that 90 per cent of the children in the Volga valley have never seen a moving picture, and the organization proposes to see that they do. Old films—cheap for that reason—are to be used. Probably American children, and some adults, will pity the Russians. They might well spare their tears. This is the greatest bit of luck which has come to the Russians since the first stroke of whatever it was laid Lenin low.

We envy them. Imagine being dragged out of a life in an abandoned cowshed to be introduced to your first movie with a program made up of "Easy street," "A Night at the Show," "Shenandoah vs. Salome," "Uncle Tom Without a Cabin," and others of the famous works of Charlie Chaplin, Ben Turpin, Marie Prevost, and Phyllis Haver.

These people are rich and famous now and they don't work like they used to. But the little moujiks and the big moujiks won't know that. They are due for a thrill. They won't get anything like it again in this life, but the present will suffice.

A DEFENSELESS CANAL ZONE.

[The Outlook.]

The naval maneuvers off Panama have brought to public attention the important fact that the canal is practically without defenses against air attack. If there is any point under the American flag which should have complete defenses against aerial antagonists, it is the Panama canal. The destruction of the lock at Gatun might mean the annihilation of a divided battle fleet or it might mean the exclusion from the Pacific or the Atlantic at a crucial moment of our naval armament. It is reported that army officers estimate conservatively that the zone requires for its protection at least 100 fighting planes drilled to a high state of efficiency. At the present time there are no fighting planes in the zone, only sixteen observation planes and four bombers. Added to this the anti-aircraft defenses are in bad shape both from the point of personnel and materiel. The canal zone is the last place where military economy should be made.

FUNCTIONS OF THE SPLEEN.

J. L. writes: Please tell me something about the spleen.

REPLY.

It is either easy or difficult to answer, your question, dependent on whether one sticks to the positively known facts or whether he wanders into the realm of speculation.

The spleen is about five inches long, three inches wide, and one and one-half inches thick, and weighs about five ounces. It is located on the left side of the body behind the last four ribs and nearer the middle line behind than in front. When a person is lying down its long diameter runs parallel with the tenth rib. When a person is standing the long diameter of the spleen runs almost perpendicularly.

Being a very soft organ, in fact almost a bag of blood, it changes shape and even position within a slight range with change in position of body. It consists of a capsule or outer wall and a framework of connective tissue, on which there is some of the same kind of tissue which makes up the lymph glands.

Large arteries empty great quantities of blood into the spleen spaces and large veins gather up the blood from the spleen spaces and carry it away. So much for the more important points in its anatomy.

The spleen is a large blood sac. In it the blood slowly moves through large open spaces in close contact with the spleen cells. The presence of a large amount of iron and a good many remnants of red blood cells indicates that the spleen has something to do with breaking down used red cells or repairing them or making new red cells or all of this work combined, just what is not known.

The spleen beats somewhat like the heart beats, but the minor beats are only at the rate of about one a minute.

The spleen enlarges during the period of time when digestion is most active.

Certain diseases are characterized by enlargement of the spleen. The more important of these are malaria, leukemia, and such acute infections as typhoid fever, septicemia and pneumonia.

So much for the thoroughly well known and accepted facts.

When the spleen is removed, no great harm or disability results. There follows a period of a few months in which there is some anemia, but after that time there seems to be no effect, good or bad, from the removal of this large organ. This fact has led some people to think the spleen has no important work to do.

Again, it is one of the few organs of the body which is not made in duplicate. The rule is that when nature builds all important parts are made in duplicate at least. The fact that there are not two spleens leads many people to think the spleen is without function.

But close study shows that when the spleen is removed, the bone marrow and some other structures increase in volume and richness and take on some of the spleen work.

The fact that the spleen increases so enormously in volume in typhoid fever, septicemia and pneumonia shows that somehow this organ helps to fight these infections.

Its enlargement during digestion shows that in some way it helps out with that process.

The proof is good that it makes some of the white cells, and, in that way, it contributes indirectly to the work the white cells do.

It is claimed it has something to do with uric acid formation.

But all this is speculative.

WASHING OYSTERS.

P. W. C. writes: "Should oysters be washed before they are cooked or eaten raw? Do they not lose much of their value? Should you consider it a menace to good health not to do so?

"This was discussed the other day at a gathering of women and only a few ever washed them.

"We are very much interested as to what you think."

REPLY.

Oysters occasionally spread typhoid fever. There are a few proved epidemics of oyster borne typhoid fever on record.

It is safe to eat cooked oysters that have not been washed because the cooking destroys the bacteria. Raw oysters are somewhat liable to cause typhoid. Washing might decrease the danger somewhat. The bacilli may be inside the oyster.

Washing bulk oysters in boiled salt water in which the salt contains some iodine is feasible and should not hurt the flavor. I assume the salt solution is about as strong and bitter as sea brine is but not more so.

ARTHRITIS NOT INFECTIOUS.

Mrs. L. D. O. writes:

"1. Will you kindly tell me if a wife is liable to infection of any kind from her husband who is a sufferer from rheumatic arthritis?

"2. What is the cause of arthritis in a large joint?"

REPLY.

1. No.

2. As a rule an infection which has gotten into the blood stream at some distant part of the body.

Among the more frequent portals of infection are tonsils, teeth, nose, sinuses, gall bladder, appendix, intestinal tract, prostate and pelvic organs.

CITIZEN'S PARENTS MAY ENTER UNITED STATES.

Chicago, April 23.—[Friend of the People.]—I have my father and mother coming over from England in May.

Can their son, who is a citizen, claim entrance to the United States for them, whether the quota is full or not?

They are financially independent. Their passports have been viséd by the American consul at the port of embarkation.

F. M.

The parents of a citizen of the United States are not exempt from the quota requirements. The quota from the United Kingdom is not exhausted, and I see no reason why your parents should be rejected on account of the quota if they proceed immediately to the United States. HOWARD D. EBEY,

Conclusion of the Examination of Candidates for the Hon. John B. Rice's Appointment—Benjamin F. Murphy the Successful Man.

The examination of the candidates for appointment to West Point from the First Congressional District of Illinois was concluded yesterday, and the examiners, Dr. Gunn, J. L. Pickard, and J. O. Glover, made their report to the effect that Benjamin F. Murphy was the best qualified, and consequently Mr. Rice will send his name on to Washington.

The following were the names of the candidates: Frank D. Fitts, Frank L. Robinson, Frank B. Cone, Christian Rupert, Charles Wilcox, Marion Pickett, Jacob Cole, Benjamin F. Murphy, Wyham Meyers, J. J. O'Callaghan, J. H. Horton, N. E. T. Brennan, Douglass M. Stevens, Charles A. Caldwell, Thomas A. Dillon, and George P. Scriven. The last of these young men was very nearly on an equality with Murphy, and it was a hard matter to decide between them.

MOSBY AND THE ADMINISTRATION.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Col. John S. Mosby, of Confederate guerrilla fame, it appears is one of the most influential men in Virginia with the Administration. As a consequence, he finds himself overrun with applications for office, not only from Virginia, but from other Southern States. The Southern Reform office-seekers, and not a few of the office-holders, have an idea that Mosby is a man of power, and they therefore seek to cultivate him. He receives a large mail every day, from persons begging him to give them letters of introduction to President Grant. Mosby himself has declined half-a-dozen good offices.

Atty.-Gen. Edsall, in a letter to the Mayor of Sandwich, Ill., gives it as his opinion that there is nothing in the Constitution prohibiting cities levying and collecting a poll tax, or tax for making roads in cities, provided the city has such an authority in its charter.

No quorum was present yesterday, which was the one-hundred-and-eleventh day of the session, in either House or Senate at Springfield, and nothing was done by either body. Only three of the twenty-one representatives of Cook County were present in the House.

The Council have finally passed the ordinance requiring liquor-saloons to close at 11 o'clock. The vote stood 23 to 10. The Mayor's signature alone is needed to enable the ordinance to go into immediate effect, and will probably be given to-day.

APPROVING PARK BOARD'S ACTION ON FINE ARTS BUILDING.

Chicago, April 23.—As a citizen of Chicago, a tax payer, a resident of Hyde Park and one very familiar with the splendid work accomplished by the South Park commission in the past, and with the several gigantic tasks it now has under way, I want to take exception the unwarranted criticism in Monday's TRIBUNE headed "The South Park Board's Responsibility."

The writer was present at the board meeting last Friday when the ladies presented their plea for the restoration of the old Fine Arts building that was left temporarily in Jackson park after the world's fair for no other purpose than to house the Field museum. Now that the Field museum is permanently located in its own magnificent building in Grant park this old world's fair relic has outlived its usefulness and is occupying ten acres or more of valuable park ground that could be beautified and put to much better use than at present. There is only a mass of badly decaying common brick and cheap mortar that was thrown together hurriedly some thirty-one years ago to be used for one year, or during the life of the fair.

If this building is such an architectural wonder as THE TRIBUNE would have us believe, why not reproduce it on a much smaller scale, say a main building, 150x75, with two wings, 50x75, using as much of the old material as possible in the new work. Such a building would preserve architecturally the present structure, and be useful as well as ornamental, and would release for park purposes several acres of valuable land and would not cost one-fourth of what the restoration of the exterior, to say nothing of the interior, of the present "white elephant" that is now on the hands of our very capable board of South Park commissioners. I think they have shown excellent judgment in the handling of this whole matter.

AN ECHO OF THE CRONIN MURDER CASE.

Chicago, April 24.—The following information which came to me from a chance acquaintance in a hotel at Biloxi, Miss., during a vacation at that point in the month of March of this year. The gentleman is an American by birth, is the owner of a large banana plantation in Honduras, has lived there and in some of the adjoining republics for the last twenty years. As we talked about Chicago of some fifty years ago he inquired if I remembered who the leading characters were in the Dr. Cronin murder trial. I mentioned several. He then related the following facts:

"Dan Coughlan died some years ago in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, Central America, from tuberculosis. During his illness he had no personal means of support and some members of the American colony raised funds to assist him.

"Dr. Mitchell Jr., Fred Pennington and myself, all Americans, with the assistance of the gravedigger, buried him in a grave, now unmarked. He was known as Dan Davis. He impressed all by his mild manners and gentlemanly bearing."

Never having heard—or read—of what happened to Coughlin after his "get away" from America, thought perhaps this record of his final disposition would prove of interest to some of the W. G. N.'s million readers.

Understand you gave Smith a Rolls-Royce for his Andy Gump comic. If such is the case you give King not only a Rolls-Royce, but a solid gold 14x20 garage, for there never has been a comic in the history of newspaper "funnies" which has endeared itself to the public as has "Gasoline Alley," with such really lovable characters as King pictures. Clever, clean, absolutely true to life and the only comic ever printed which is consistent. The growth and development of Skeezix is the most clever bit of work ever penned by an artist. Our hats, twenty-six of them unanimously, are off to Mr. King; he is never tiresome.

THE AUTOMOBILE AS A KILLER.

Chicago, April 24.—The automobile hand on the clock of death is getting near the 200 mark and we are commencing to feel a bit scary. Some time ago I remember reading an "ad" in THE TRIBUNE in which the makers of a certain expensive auto guaranteed a speed of eighty miles an hour. Is there any great difference between putting the engine of an eighty mile an hour auto under the control of a crack brained fool and handing him a .45 with a plentiful supply of cartridges?

You have waged quite a considerable campaign against the manufacture of small arms, but the auto engine capable of flying dangerously high speed ought to be a far more potent killer than the pistol—almost 250 per cent more efficient, according to the "clock." If the preservation of human life be a [illegible] matter, let us go after the manufacturers of high powered engines (entirely unnecessary for the ostensible purpose of an auto) and lay off the pistol maker? At any rate, why not go after both? [illegible] fruitful instrument of death?

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TEARS, IDLE TEARS.

By Alfred Tennyson.

Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,
Tears from the depth of some divine despair
Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes,
In looking on the happy Autumn-fields,
And thinking of the days that are no more.

Fresh as the first beam glittering on a sail,
That brings our friends up from the underworld,
Sad as the last which reddens over one
That sinks with all we love below the verge;
So sad, so fresh, the days that are no more.

Ah, sad and strange as in dark summer dawns
The earliest pipe of half-awaken'd birds
To dying ears when unto dying eyes
The casement slowly grows a glimmering square;
So sad, so strange, the days that are no more.

Dear as remembered kisses after death,
And sweet as those by hopeless fancy feign'd
On lips that are for others; deep as love,
Deep as first love, and wild with all regret;
O, death in life, the days that are no more.

SCHRIVER, PRISON BOUND, IS OUSTED FROM 'VET' BOARD

Small Pay Roller Fired by State School Head.

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfiled, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—H. M. Schriver, sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of one to five years yesterday as a result of his dealings with the vice ring which held Rock Island in its grip while Schriver was mayor, has been ousted from his state job as field agent for the vocational rehabilitation board which paid him $250 a month.

The ouster order was issued by Francis G. Blair, state superintendent of public instruction, who received Schriver and eleven other field agents as gifts from the Small administration along with the job of establishing the rehabilitation agency.

Mr. Blair has only one of the five votes in the board, but no voice from the state house was courageous enough to protest the superintendent's action in cutting Schriver off the pay roll.

Waited for Resignation.

Most of the responsibilities of the board have been wished onto Mr. Blair, so the matter of removing Schriver added little to his worries. He waited for a time after Schriver's conviction for him to resign or for the board to meet and remove him, but when nothing was done Mr. Blair instructed Charles H. Saylor, acting supervisor of rehabilitation to stop Schriver's pay check.

The other eleven field agents are on the pay roll still. The whole dozen were placed under fire in the senate last Tuesday when they were accused of devoting their time to political activities for Gov. Small, instead of aiding in the rehabilitiation of cripples.

Here is a brief history of rehabilitation work in Illinois:

The legislature in 1921 appropriated $125,000 to match Illinois' share of a federal fund to aid deserving cripples in fitting themselves so they could earn their livelihood. The board for vocational education had been created several years previously under the Lowden administration.

Blair Is Made Chief.

When vocational education came along an ex-officio board was created to supervise the work. Mr. Blair, as superintendent of public instruction, was made "executive officer" of the board and one of its five members. The others were members of the governor's cabinet.

Then Gov. Small entered the picture, followed by the appropriation to rehabilitate cripples. New cabinet members replaced the Lowden men. The rehabilitation job was placed under the supervision of the existing vocational education board, of which Mr. Blair remained as the only member elected by the people as a public official.

William Henry Harrison Miller, notorious in the state license scandal, was director of registration and education and chairman of the vocational education board. With the new rehabilitation job on hand for somebody to do the board met to give it a start. It was decided that Mr. Blair should accept the responsibilities, but that decision was reached after the board had decided who Mr. Blair could have to work for him.

Miller Was Ousted.

The twelve field agents were delivered to him in a lot. The work was started. Miller was fired after the license graft exposé and replaced by A. M. Shelton, who was Mr. Blair's opponent for the Republican nomination as state superintendent in 1922.

Mr. Blair says he had no part in passing the first appropriation. He is opposed to federal aid and paternalism by the national government as a matter of principle.

Mr. Shelton, who recalls that the field agents were appointed before his régime, is none too sparing with criticism of the rehabilitation work. He says little has been done and about the only money spent has been for the upkeep of the field staff.

Seven Were Rehabilitated.

The December 1922 financial statement on rehabilitation shows that $21,-[illegible] was spent and that seven persons were reported as "totally rehabilitated."

These official figures correspond to the statements made on the floor of the senate last Tuesday by Senators Buck [Rep., Warren] and Barbour [Rep., Chicago], that the cost was approximately $3,000 for each case.

Besides Schriver, the field agents are: Herbert D. Battles, Chicago; C. N. Clark, Urbana; R. R. Clark, Springfield; Frank W. Harris, Macomb; E. Hoobler, Pontiac; Claude Lacy, Boaz; N. E. Matter, Wheaton; Peter G. Nix, Chicago; F. J. Simater, Minonk; William D. Walker, East St. Louis, and E. V. Yockey, Ottawa.

Nix is the right hand man of Ernest Withall, chairman of the Illinois industrial commission, and formerly was an aid to Dr. W. G. Reed, former Mayor Thompson's commissioner of public service. He is treasurer of the Thompson organization's Fifteenth ward subsidiary.

PRAYS FOR DEATH AS DOCTORS FIGHT TO DEFEAT POISON

Police yesterday failed to unravel the mystery surrounding an attempt made by a girl of 20 to kill herself with poison. The girl, unusually pretty and fairly well dressed, refused to reveal her name or address, but from her cot at the county hospital continually moaned. "Let me die. Oh, why did you bring me here?"

The newest "Miss Nobody from No-Where" was discovered at 4 o'clock yesterday morning leaning wearily against a lamppost in Indiana avenue near East 20th street. She was only half conscious, and reeled uncertainly when Policeman Frank O'Neill of the Cottage Grove avenue station approached.

No marks could be found upon her clothing that could aid in establishing her identity. She apparently had painstakingly erased even all laundry numbers. She wore a Harding blue hat, a black cape with fur collar black pumps and silk hose, and a black crepe de chine dress. She weighs 110 pounds, has dark brown bobbed hair, and is 5 feet 3 inches tall.

FOUR BURNED AS AMMONIA TANK VALVE BURSTS

Four men were badly burned, one of them it is feared fatally, when an ammonia tank valve burst yesterday afternoon in the plant of the Fulton Wholesale Market company at 310 North Green street. The cause of the blast is unknown.

The injured men are: James Wallace, 67 years old, 4419 Wallace street; Bismarck Neuert, 61 years old, 2126 Bradley place; R. C. Bressenberger, 30 years old, 3609 North Ashland avenue, and James Kennedy, 37 years old, 6420 South Hermitage avenue.

At the county hospital, to which they were all taken, it was said it was unlikely that Wallace would live.

VETO KILLS JURY COMMISSION BILL AT LAST MINUTE

Small's Act Regarded as "Political Sop."

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Springfield, Ill., April 28.—[Special.]—Gov. Small today vetoed the new Cook county jury commission bill which permitted veniremen to select the terms of court at which it would be most convenient for them to serve.

The veto was written by the governor in Chicago yesterday and delivered by special messenger today to Bert H. McCann, clerk of the house. Had the governor not acted today the bill automatically would have become law.

The new jury bill had the backing of Cook county judges and many other persons and organizations interested in a move to create a better jury system. They believed the bill would result in selection of a higher class of juries. The bill was introduced by Representative Thon [Rep., Chicago].

Regarded as Political Sop.

Gov. Small's trip to Chicago before passing finally on the jury bill was regarded with significance in the capitol. The veto also is regarded here as a sop to some leaders of organized labor who opposed the measure.

The program of the legislature for next week includes some of the most important legislation pending before the general assembly. The battle over the governor's $100,000,000 road bond bill is due to start on Tuesday, when the measure is called for consideration by the senate roads committee, headed by Senator Meents [Rep., Iroquois], administration spokesman in the senate and introducer of the bill.

The farm bloc in the house is expected to push the coöperative marketing bill, which received a favorable report from a majority of the agricultural committee last Wednesday.

The women's eight hour bill, passed this week by the house, will be up for consideration by the senate industrial affairs committee next week.

Will Act on Gateway.

Action on the gateway amendment resolutions probably will be taken by the house judiciary subcommittee on Tuesday, according to present indications.

Advocates of the measure to choose Chicago's next mayor by a nonpartisan election are pressing for passage of the bill introduced by Representative Dahlberg [Republican, Chicago], which extends the present nonpartisan aldermanic law to include mayor, city treasurer, and city clerk. The City club, by a vote of 6 to 1 in a recent referendum, indorsed the measure. George C. Sikes and Joseph Cummings, representing the club, are leading the lobby in Springfield. These men are working also in the interest of a gateway resolution.

All phases of Illinois transportation problems are to be taken up by the senate transportation survey committee on Wednesday, Senator Kessinger [Rep., Kane], chairman of the committee, announced. Attorney B. P. Alschuler of Aurora; E. Hill Leath of Chicago, and Frank L. Smith, chairman of the Illinois commerce commission, are on the program to appear before the committee to discuss the traction problems.

The committee has received no word from Henry Ford relative to the suggestion made to him more than a week ago that he purchase the Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis railroad, which is on the financial rocks.

100 Per Cent Service Is Pledged for Mayor Again

"The new administration has pledged itself to give the city of Chicago 100 per cent service," declared Martin J. O'Brien, city comptroller and acting mayor, at the weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club at the Morrison hotel yesterday. Several members of shows now playing in Chicago spoke after the luncheon.

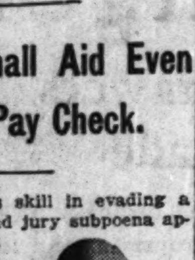
NEWMARK FIRED FROM STATE JOB, ALL SIGNS SHOW

Elusive Small Aid Even Eludes Pay Check.



BEN NEWMARK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ben Newmark's skill in evading a Lake county grand jury subpoena apparently has cost him his job as deputy state fire marshal. It was definitely learned yesterday that next month's pay roll for the state fire marshal's office will not bear his name.

His subpoena dodging also seems to have presented a situation which needs considerable more explaining than Springfield officials appear to have explanations for.

Newmark has been missing for a month—ever since the Lake county grand jury took up the investigation into the bribing of members of the jury which acquitted Gov. Small of pocketing interest on state funds. He disappeared as soon as it became known that a subpœna had been issued for him and that the jurors at Waukegan were anxious to have him explain why he was registered at the Salvation Army hotel, Waukegan, under the name of "John Smith" while the governor's trial was in progress. The Salvation Army hotel was the governor's headquarters during the trial.

There are other things the jurors want explained, such as the reason for meetings between Newmark and Michael F. Boyle, labor leader also dodging subpœna service, and the nature of reports which were turned over to Newmark by a corps of investigators who were "checking up on" veniremen drawn for the Small jury.

Seen on Streets Here.

State Fire Marshal Gambier, in whose office Newmark is supposed to be working, was summoned before the grand jury and admitted he had not seen his assistant for a month, although he had received communications from him which would indicate he was still in Chicago. Another witness said he had met Newmark on the street in Chicago within the last week.

Now comes the news from Springfield that Newmark has a state job no longer, although no one will admit officially that the deputy state fire marshal has been fired. A few days ago Director Murphy of trade and commerce, under whose jurisdiction the state fire marshal's office comes, ordered Newmark's pay check of $225 for the month of April held up.

Check Still There.

The fact that the check is still there and Mr. Newmark has made no effort to get it is taken to mean that he has been fired. Director Murphy would not say as much, however.

On the other hand daily reports from Chicago are being received at Gambier's office bearing Newmark's signature, which would indicate that officially Mr. Newmark is still working for the state.

The paper has been acquired by a group of Manchester Liberals, who objected to Massingham's feud with former Prime Minister Lloyd George and his prejudice againt the labor party.

The inspiring genius of the new administration will be J. M. Keynes, but the actual editor will be H. D. Henderson.

NATIONALIZATION LAW BACKS OIL TITLES IN MEXICO

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, April 28.—The Mexican congress has passed a bill regulating the petroleum law. The new law makes numerous changes regarding land holdings and settles disputed sections of the old law. It strengthens the nation's hold on the oil industry, prohibits oil pipe lines extending from shore to oil tankers, makes compulsory the continuous working of oil properties, and settles the validity of titles. It recognizes oil land titles and provides that titles be converted into terms in new concessions which will recognize nationalization of petroleum.

227 ARE SAVED IN SHIPWRECK OFF WEST AFRICA

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, April 28.—[By the Associated Press.]—A Portugese gunboat arrived at Mossamedes, Portugese West Africa, yesterday with 110 survivors of the steamship Mossamedes, wrecked several days ago at Cape Frio. Eighty-four survivors have been landed at Port Alexander, and a French gunboat is on its way to Mossamedes with thirty-three others.

The chief officer of the wrecked steamship says the vessel struck the rocks in a fog Tuesday morning and a rough sea swept the liner still further toward the shore. One of the lifeboats upset, seven of the occupants being drowned.

All but two of the lifeboats are now reported to have been picked up. The Mossamedes carried 258 passengers.

Bird Lovers Put Quietus on Forest Preserve Circus

They were to hold a community circus in Oak Park and had chosen "Cummings Square," a portion of the Forest Preserve at Harlem avenue and Lake street as the place. Every boy in the neighborhood had volunteered to take part. But the Garden club of Oak Park and River Forest heard of it and feared the circus would interfere with the birds who built their nests at this time of the year. So they protested and now the circus is "off."

MANY GROVES TO DECK PRESERVES BY END OF WEEK

Planting of Million Will Begin at Once.

When next Sunday morning comes and the flivver stands ready in the garage to take the city family into the country groves of trees are going to be waiting for them. County commissioners and forestry experts visited the county preserves yesterday in preparation for National Tree Planting Week, and to make plans for the placing of 1,000,000 young trees now growing in county nurseries.

The drive into the country shall not be spoiled by the hot glare of the sun, they declared, but it shall be along a road shaded by arching branches. The noonday lunch shall be spread in the woods, where father can take his nap without bringing along the Sunday paper for an eye shield, instead of in an open field, where a barbed wire fence is the only reminder of the country.

Formal Exercises Saturday.

Formal exercises, attended by school children, Boy Scouts, and county and civic organizations will be held next Saturday near Riverside, the commissioners decided, after their trip yesterday.

"Few persons realize how important the trees are to any community," said Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board. "At the rate the forests are being cut today this country will be denuded of timber in another fifty years. By systematic planting under direction of Chief Forester Ransom Kennicott we are going to prevent this in Cook county."

Over forty varieties of trees, all native to Illinois, are among the million waiting for planting. Special provision is being made for preservation of the birds by planting pines and spruce for winter shelter and mulberry trees and mountain ash for food.

These on Inspection Trip.

Among those who made the trip of inspection yesterday to plan next Saturday's program are: Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board; County Commissioners Charles N. Goodnow, William Busse, Daniel Ryan, Tom Murray, and Frank J. Wilson; David Shanahan, speaker of the Illinois house of representatives; Representatives Lewis B. Springer and John McCarthy; G. P. Stevenson, chairman of the Boy Scout committee; E. F. Dodge, secretary of the Illinois Forestry association; Prof. J. C. Blair, head of the horticultural department, University of Illinois; W. A. Peterson, treasurer national tree planting commission; Maj. William L. Hall, and Thomas Sullivan, assistant forester.

ESCAPED JOLIET CONVICT SEIZED IN WISCONSIN

Escape from Joliet penitentiary meant only six weeks of freedom for Thomas Pruett of Chicago, but it almost cost the life of Sheriff William McCormick of Madison, Wis., who captured his yesterday.

"I would have fired the first shot if I had the chance," Pruett said after he had been surprised. His penitentiary sentence was for complicity in the murder of Robert Swearingen of Aledo, Ill., who was shot when he interrupted a holdup of a poker game, two years ago.

Pruett and another prisoner were being moved from Joliet in an automobile, handcuffed, on March 19. The pair strangled the guard almost to death with the chain of their joint handcuff which they succeeded in getting around his neck.

Hursen Funerals Stand Out From the Rest

There is no extra charge for the use of Hursen's superb specially designed limousines over the usual auto hire.

Every funeral conducted by Hursen has a great many elegant marks of distinction. Hursen funeral-automobiles are one of these. Each of these noiseless limousines has been specially designed by Hursen himself, and cost a fortune to build.

Yet, the charge for these Hursen "palaces on wheels" is no greater than the usual auto hire. The size of the funeral makes no difference. Hursen chauffeurs are super-trained. They are men chosen for their higher qualities of head and heart. They are hard to get. They are "blue-ribbon" drivers. Most of them have been Hursen employes for from 10 to 20 years.

Hursen's invariable rule is that his prices are always far less than those exacted anywhere else, without a single exception. Hursen elegance and Hursen service are beyond competition. You may telephone the Hursen establishment nearest you, if you prefer. Call Hursen, of course!

DANISH FARMERS WIN PROSPERITY BY CO-OP SYSTEM

Cut Out Middleman; Get Higher Prices.

saw a huge pile of newly received cables, all of them orders for direct shipments to villages and town stores.

The increased efficiency of direct marketing from producer to consumer clearly has vindicated that department of the coöperative society's work. But from the standpoint of the purchaser abroad, far more important is the standardization of farm produce which has been brought about by fifty years of tireless effort on the part of the society.

Farmers who would market butter in England must produce a uniform article that conforms in every way to a fixed standard of the society. The same is true with their bacon, for which English housewives gladly pay 5 cents more a pound than they do for American bacon; with eggs, which must be on the English market within a certain time from their production, to insure freshness; with cheese and other dairy products, which must be up to specifications.

These standards of efficiency are maintained by coöperative dairy establishments, slaughter houses and store houses. All the milk for a coöperative district is brought into the central dairy plant. There the butter is manufactured under standard conditions with the latest dairying machinery. The farmers are credited with the amount of milk they bring in, and are paid according to the market price of the butter.

Their hogs and cattle go to the coöperative slaughter houses and are there prepared under uniform conditions for the market.

Plants All Inspected.

Inspectors from the central coöperative society visit these outlying plants and keep close check on their methods. Every shipment of butter, meat and eggs is tested, and if it is found to be below standard the whole shipment is thrown out and the coöperative affected is informed of its delinquency. So accurate and so well standardized have the methods become, however, that only one shipment of butter and none of meat and eggs has been thrown out in three years.

The overhead of the coöperative gradually has been reduced. Today it is less than the first charges on exportation through shipping agents, besides doing away with importation charges and other profit taking by middlemen. The result has been a much higher standard of farm products, with greater returns to the farmer.

There is no attempt to force the farmer to sell through the coöperatives or to buy through them. They are free agents, but they deal through the coöperative, because they get better prices and buy their machinery and necessities of life cheaper than they can in open market.

No attempt is made to regulate prices, for that, too, is unnecessary. Danish products bring a little better than the world market price wherever sold, not because of any trust activities, but because of their superior quality.

Coöperatice farming has placed modern machinery within reach of even the most modest land holder. If he hasn't enough money to purchase farm tools for himself, he can draw on the coöperative.

If money is tight he should worry, for he is paid cash for his products at an average market price and then receives a surplus, if they bring more when sold.

He hasn't commenced to bother his head about motor cars as yet, but motor transportation hauls his milk, butter, cheese and eggs to the coöperative dairies, slaughter houses and warehouses, and Denmark's excellent interurban street car and train services provide all necessary transport.

Boy's Position Better.

The farmer boy who looks toward the city for a future finds that it has little to offer him he cannot better by sticking to the land. His income is better than it could be in the factory. His housing conditions are better. His food is vastly superior to that he would buy in any of the larger towns.

Houses and barns are equipped with electric light and labor saving machinery abounds. The houses and outbuildings are still built around three sides of a court, and grouped closely together. Often the stables and dwellings are under the same roof, but they are separated by stout walls, and the stables are as spotlessly clean as the homes. Good sewage systems, sanitary storage places for manure, which will be used to fertilize the fields, piped running water at high pressure, have solved the problem of cleanliness on the Danish farm.

Stables Carefully Operated.

No unsightly manure pile or pond of offal-polluted water stands in the courtyard of a Danish farm. The sweet odor of the country fills the nostrils of the visitors. The cattle stables are carefully inspected and equipped with tiled drains flushed with constant streams of water. A hose is brought into play once and often twice daily to flush the stable floors. Clean straw is always at hand for bedding.

Is it any wonder that in such surroundings as these, where work is not galling, and where health and fresh air abound, the peasant lad should be happy and contented? Add to this the advantage of a superior education and plenty of opportunity for sport and distraction, and one understands why the peasant lad stays on the farm.

Denmark's system of education is the pride of Europe. There is practically no illiteracy—two per thousand at the last census—and that is confined chiefly to the towns. The coöperative has had a large hand in this development as well as in the economic prosperity of the country.

With shorter hours possible with the introduction of labor saving devices, men and women who had never dreamed of studying beyond their A B C's were left with time on their hands which the coöperative induced them to spend in self-improvement. High schools were established for adults as well as the youth of the nation, and now they are attended by men and women of the community in sixty-five centers. The courses include history, economics, and general cultural development.

The Danish farmer is an early riser, but his hours of work are not long, thanks to coöperative methods. He has time in the afternoon to give to his children, and in the evening either for his schools or some form of village entertainment. He finds that with the elimination of the middleman he can earn sufficiently in a seven or eight hour day to keep him and his family comfortably.

His children do not begin work on the farm until after they have attained the age of 14 years, and many not until a later age. School is compulsory until the age of 14 and most of the students continue another six years in scientific farming courses, during which they combine study with work on their parents' holdings. After that they can obtain their college education in evening courses at the district high schools or if they are specially fitted, there are twenty-two special scientific schools in the various coöperative districts, with a total attendance of about 10,000.

And that is how the coöperative has kept them down on the farm in Denmark—education, good living conditions, and work that shows a profit.

The Danish royal family is one family born to the purple that is not worrying much about the future, but is ready for anything that may develop.

Looks Toward the Sea.

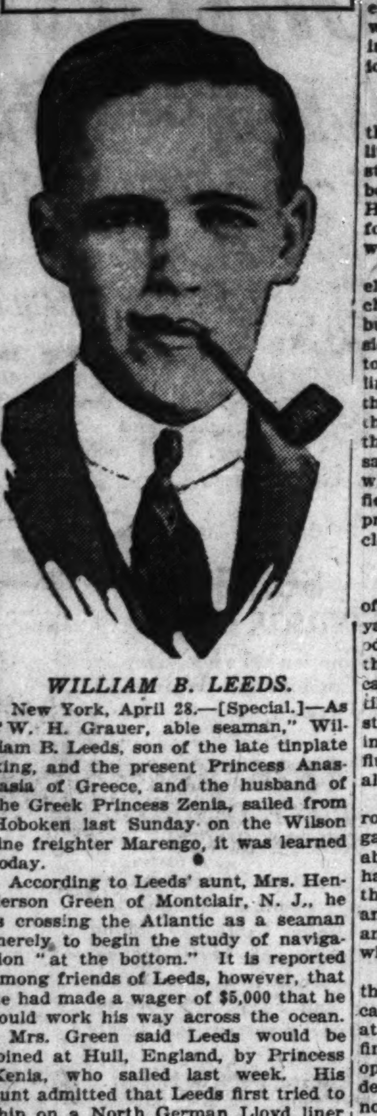
THE TRIBUNE talked with the crown prince, Frederick, about the effects of coöperation. Frederick is an officer in the Danish navy, but he has studied the economic and agricultural development of his land as befits one who may or may not come to the throne of the kingdom in the future. He was as proud as a "Main Street" booster of the world renown of Danish products.

"Coöperation has existed so long here in Denmark that I have no basis for comparison," Frederick said, when we asked him what he thought of the movement. "But coöperation has made our people prosperous and, what is much more important, made them contented and happy. Coöperation and education developed hand in hand, so that now we have a rural culture surpassed by no nation on earth."

The prince wants Danish products to be carried in Danish ships. The faith of Frederick and of his father in the future of the Danish marine cost them the larger part of their personal fortunes when the Landsman's bank, which speculated in a steamship venture among other things, crashed last autumn.

Frederick isn't worrying about his own future. He has only his pay as an officer in the Danish navy, and he says that personally he will be glad to remain an officer instead of mounting the throne, should his people so desire

Seaman on a Bet



WILLIAM B. LEEDS.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—As "W. H. Grauer, able seaman," William B. Leeds, son of the late tinplate king, and the present Princess Anastasia of Greece, and the husband of the Greek Princess Zenia, sailed from Hoboken last Sunday on the Wilson line freighter Marengo, it was learned today.

According to Leeds' aunt, Mrs. Henderson Green of Montclair, N. J., he is crossing the Atlantic as a seaman merely to begin the study of navigation "at the bottom." It is reported among friends of Leeds, however, that he had made a wager of $5,000 that he could work his way across the ocean.

Mrs. Green said Leeds would be joined at Hull, England, by Princess Xenia, who sailed last week. His aunt admitted that Leeds first tried to ship on a North German Lloyd liner but was told by Capt. Max Muller, superintendent of the line, that he was "too soft" to make good as a seaman.

French Forbid Colonies to Indulge in Cannibalism

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 28.—A decree was promulgated by France today forbidding cannibalism in French colonies under pain of ten years' imprisonment.

PLUMBERS UNDER LANDIS AWARD GET WAGE BOOST

Journeymen plumbers working under the terms of the Landis award will be granted a wage increase of 12½ cents an hour May 1, Henry O'Callaghan, president of the Citizens' Sanitary Engineers' Association of Chicago, announced last night at a meeting of Landis award plumbers in Garrick hall, 64 West Randolph street.

The increase will make the plumbers' wage rate $1.15 an hour.

"There are approximately 673 Landis award journeymen plumbers working in Chicago at present," O'Callaghan said. "The wage boost for the Landis award mechanics was decided upon after several conferences between representatives of the engineers' association and officials of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award."

Do Most of Work.

Mr. O'Callaghan explained that the Citizens' Sanitary Engineers' Association of Chicago is an organization formed several months ago, comprising thirty-three Landis award plumbing contractors. He said 80 per cent of plumbing work in Chicago and vicinity was done by members of the new assoication.

Other officials of the new engineers' association are: J. A. Corboy, treasurer; H. P. Reger, first vice president; G. Frank Winkler, second vice president, and H. A. Ellithorpe, secretary.

Carpet Men to Strike.

Employés in the upholstering, carpet and drapery departments of State street department stores will strike next Tuesday morning in an effort to force the employers to grant the union's demands for a weekly wage increase of 25 per cent, William J. Riordan, business agent of the Carpet and Linoleum Workers' union, No. 110, announced last night.

According to Riordan, 1,300 men and women employés are involved.

"Under the old agreement the men received $44 a week," he said. "With increased rents and costs of living, the employés aren't able to exist on this wage. The women employés have been getting $26 a week, and they are asking for a $4 raise."

About 80 per cent of the workers are organized.

LEGION NEWS

The following named posts will join in a banquet and entertainment next Friday night in the Cameo room of the Morrison hotel: La Salle Street, Hiram J. Slifer, First Tank Corps, Walter S. Poague, Peoples Gas Light & Coke, Byllesby, Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, Carson, Pirie Scott; Castle, Western Union, Chicago Loop, Verdun, Advertising Men's, Chicago Elevated, Western Union, Mid Nation, Commonwealth Edison, Federal, Historical, Sig-Yeo and Board of Trade.

This will be the largest social entertainment and gathering of the American Legion posts which has ever been held in the city.

Eaton-Priddy post No. 111, American Legion, will hold a meeting on Tuesday evening in the Administration building in Washington park, 57th street and Cottage Grove avenue. There will be movies, a prominent speaker, and refreshments, and all ex-service men and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

Oak Park post will have a "fathers' night" on Tuesday evening at the Elks club house. Thomas F. L. Henderson will be the speaker of the evening. May 5 is the date of the Legion dance. Cope Harvey will furnish the music and the ladies' auxiliary of the post the supper.

The American Legion has undertaken voluntarily to decorate on every Memorial day the graves of approximately 32,000 "buddies" who lie buried in France and England. Care and attention are given them by the government, but on Memorial day no decorations are provided. The American Legion, through the action of its national executive committee, has pledged itself to raise a fund of $100,000 which will create an income to insure that every grave of the 32,000 will be decorated on Memorial day—"for all time to come." American Legion posts all over the country have been asked to contribute and to secure contributions from patriotic American citizens in their community.

UNDERTAKERS WHO RIVAL SPIDERS IN CUNNING

The man or woman who gains a few years' experience in any other line of business is prepared to outwit an ordinary crook, but few are able to cope with the cunning of a dishonest undertaker.

Recently a prominent north side merchant visited one of our establishments to arrange for having a funeral shipped out of the city. After carefully examining our big stock of burial caskets he pointed to one, inquired the name of its manufacturer and asked its price. When his question had been answered and his attention called to its tag with the price ($125.00) plainly marked, he looked bewildered.

"Why," he exclaimed, "it is an exact duplicate of one I selected a few months ago at a wholesale house for which I paid the undertaker who took me there $275.00. When I read one of your advertisements the other day I suspected that I had been overcharged, now I know that I was actually robbed of $150.00.

"Please show me," he continued, "what I can buy from you for $275.00."

He was offered his choice of three designs, including a beautiful couch casket.

"It simply doesn't seem possible," he declared, "but that profiteer showed me nothing to compare with any of these for less than $600.00. I certainly owe you a debt of gratitude and will help you in any way I can in your crusade to exterminate that crook and others like him."

$25 Casket

$25 pays for a cloth covered Casket of excellent quality, lined with silk and mounted with six handles in old silver finish. Finer grades up to $1,000.

Shrewd as are these loathsome creatures, the way of escape from their meshes is easy. No home in Chicago or suburbs is too far from one of our offices to be reached by a Skeeles-Biddle representative in from 15 to 60 minutes from the time we receive a telephone call. For removals to either one of our establishments no charge is made.

We ask no one who is not familiar with our reputation, our 45 years' experience, our facilities and elaborate equipment (including two magnificent free memorial chapels) and our low prices for burial caskets and burial supplies, as well as our high class automobile service, to accept our statements without proving them. We cordially invite any one interested to ask us for references and to personally visit our big display rooms and compare our prices. It is such clients who afterwards go out of their way to recommend us to their friends.

PIANO FACTS that everyone should know

RARE among possessions the piano, before purchase, receives searching inquiry.

¶ This is proper. The purchase of a piano is an unusual event. It is a potential heirloom. Not one generation but several should enjoy its beauty and music.

¶ Case design, tone, construction, and durability—all are important factors in a judicious selection. You should make it a point to test and compare as many pianos as possible.

Hundreds of Fine Instruments from Which to Make Your Choice

OUR display is probably the most extensive in America. Here free reign is given to shoppers. You are under no obligation to buy. We are anxious to help you make the proper selection. Under one roof are exhibited products of leading manufacturers. A visit will be most interesting. Observations will give you information which will be of inestimable value.

¶ Prominent in our display is the celebrated Steinway, "The Instrument of the Immortal", it is the choice of the great masters of today as well as in the past. The new models, of which we have just received a shipment, emphasize its secure position.

¶ The Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand Piano illustrates the modern trend in home furnishings. It is exceedingly beautiful and occupies only a very small space, scarcely more than that needed by the upright piano. The cases are in Sheraton and Chippendale Period styles. The voice is notable for its richness and sustaining power.

¶ Other pianos which merit your inspection are the magnificent Duo-Art Reproducing Pianos. These replay in lifelike manner the original recordings of world famous pianists. They are shown in grand and upright models.

¶ Popular priced pianos are the Lyon & Healy Uprights and Players. These justify pleasantly the expectations of critical musicians.

¶ In reach of the moderate purse are the Washburn Players and Uprights. They enjoy a long standing reputation for sweet tone and durability of structure.

¶ We are also now featuring a number of player pianos which are for rental at moderate prices.

TERMS: There is an instrument here for every purse. Terms, too, are very moderate. You need pay only a small sum down—the balance in 28 monthly payments (Steinways, 18 mos.). Used instruments are taken in exchange at full valuation.

ITALY STUDIES BIDS TO RUN ITS RAIL SYSTEMS

Plans to Lease 10,000 Miles of Road.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, April 28.—The Italian government is now considering bids from private capital for leasing the 10,000 miles of state owned railways it has been operating.

A deficit of 1,258,000,000 lire in railway operation last year made Premier Mussolini decide to get rid of this white elephant and he offered long term leases on exceptionally easy terms. The state owned railway system comprises all the principal lines on the peninsula, the private lines being mostly narrow gauge.

The government is so desperately anxious to place the railways under private management that a prospective lessee, wishing the Rome-Genoa main line, for example, has only to prove that he is competent to operate it and has sufficient capital to guarantee operating expenses. If the lessee can make 7 per cent profit it is all his. If he makes between 7 and 10 per cent he splits the surplus with the government. If he makes above 10 per cent he must reduce fares and freight rates.

Many Bids Received.

A large number of bids have been received in spite of the bad financial record of the lines under government operation, all being from Italian capital, and a private company, the North Milan railway, operating some narrow gauge lines in the north, has already been given a lease on a number of branch lines north of Milan. The question of unified operation and control of the lines after they have been divided among various operating companies is still perplexing the government.

The chief trouble with the Italian railroads was that the number of employés rose from 150,000 to 228,000 under various governments in the last ten years, the surplus employés being largely political appointees.

A new eight hour law which will come into force on April 21, would have forced the government to retain all these unnecessary employés if it had not demanded eight hours of actual labor instead of merely being at a certain post for eight hours.

Discharges 30,000 Rail Workers.

Premier Mussolini has already discharged 30,000 railway employés in spite of considerable unemployment throughout the country, and he will discharge 10,000 more shortly.

The estimated deficit of 1,250,000,000 lire for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, has been reduced to about half that amount by these economies in personnel, supplies, and new construction. The capital invested in the state owned railroads is about $3,500,000,000, and even the Mussolini government, which is an exceptionally efficient government, has no hope of earning any interest on this investment in the future, even with much more drastic economies.

The state owned lines were taken over by the government from private owners in 1905 and since then have only earned very small profits in occasional years.

A Big Political Machine.

One effect of the state operation of the railways was that the entire operating personnel hustled out and worked politically against any government which refused its demands for more pay and less work.

These 200,000 odd employés not only fought the government at the polls but wasted coal and other supplies to bring governments to terms.

The personnel also went on strike when it pleased its fancy, but since Mussolini came to power there has not been a single strike. The railway expenditures amounted to 4,293,558,594 lire in 1921-1922 and the revenues to 3,035,612,285.

To Electrify Rail Lines.

The government announces that Italy will have 2,500 miles of electrified railway trunk lines, comprising 6,250 miles of track, within a few months.

The capacity of power stations in Italy, mostly fed by the water courses in the Alps and Apennines, has reached 1,500,000 kilowatts and at the present rate of power development the country will have a sufficient fuel supply in ten years. It has no black coal whatever and has been forced to pay high prices for English or German coal.

In connection with this general scheme to electrify all Italy the government and private companies have built fifty-nine mountain reservoirs.

GOLDEN WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. P. KEMPE.

[Arnold Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. P. Kempe, residents of Chicago and Oak Park for fifty-three years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Thursday at their home, 213 North Taylor street, Oak Park, where they have lived for more than thirty-six years. They have seven children and seventeen grandchildren. Mr. Kempe is 78 years old and his wife 72.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brooks Sr., 2214 Ogden avenue, have just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding by a prayer meeting at their home, led by Dr. J. Ames of the Madison street church. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks were married in Quebec, Canada, and came to Chicago in 1883. They have five children, all living. Mr. Brooks is 83 years old, and Mrs. Brooks 81.

PEACE, AND THEN WORLD COURTS, SAYS BAHAI SAGE

Word courts will end international discord and strife only after "durable peace shall have its foundations in the hearts of the people," Jenab Fazel, called "the wise man of Persia," told his audience at the fifteenth annual Bahai convention, which opened in Chicago yesterday. The convention will last four days, its sessions being held at the Brownleigh club, 153 North Michigan avenue, and at the Auditorium hotel.

"Clouds of national, religious, and racial prejudice have covered the horizon of human minds," the speaker declared. "Not until lip service gives way to heart sacrifice, and self-interest to common interest, will the angel of universal peace descend upon the hearts of mankind, which today are abodes of the demons of prejudice and the satans of intolerance."

WHICH IS CLARA? LATEST HAMMER SLAYING PUZZLE

Two Women in Honduras Prison Look Alike.

[Copyright: 1923: By United Press.]

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, April 28.—Great confusion has arisen over which, if either, of two women held here is Clara Phillips, Los Angeles hammer murderess.

The women give the names of Mrs. Jesse Carson and Mrs. R. M. Young. Police declare they traded names when they were arrested. The younger woman, who answers the description of Clara Phillips, registered at the hotel on her arrival as Mrs. Young, but she is now posing as Mrs. Carson.

Some sort of legal trick which will result in the escape of the real Clara Phillips is feared.

In an effort to straighten out the tangle, the authorities informed each woman that she would be released if she could prove the other was Clara. Each replied that she had never seen Mrs. Phillips. Los Angeles detectives are expected here within two weeks to make a positive identification.

Women Alike Physically.

The women are physically alike. The younger one, who now says she is Mrs. Carson, is slender, about 22 years old, and very stylish. Both have finally determined on a policy of silence.

Carson, however, is a free talker. He denies that he is a fugitive from Los Angeles, and declares that he came here to represent certain capitalists. He also says it is ridiculous to suppose that either Mrs. Carson or Mrs. Young is Clara Phillips.

The American minister frequently visits the prisoners. Carson also insists that a physician call on him often, as he fears heart failure. He desires to leave the national penitentiary on various errands, but the officials refuse this, as they think he might flee. He smokes incessantly to quiet his nerves, which appear to be in bad condition. The women are lodged at police headquarters.

Fear Plot to Escape.

Much interest has been aroused in the case throughout Central America, as suspects have frequently fooled the authorities of Mexico, Guatemala and Salvador, and some sort of coup in the present instance would not be unprecedented.

Positive of Identity.

Los Angeles, April 28. — [United Press.] — Telegrams and cablegrams found in the baggage of Mrs. R. M. Young, under arrest at Tegucigalpa, Honduras, practically identify her as Clara Phillips, fugitive hammer murderess, according to reports received by Sheriff Traeger.

Telegrams to and from "Jackson, Tampico," were found. Mrs. Phillips' sister, Mrs. Etta Mae Jackson, recently married here and moved to Tampico.

Austria and Italy Sign First Treaty Since War

ROME, April 28.—An Italian-Austrian treaty, the first of its kind since the war, was signed this afternoon by Premier Mussolini and the Austrian minister. Supplementary conventions were signed to facilitate the transport of Austrian goods through Trieste and regulate economic relations in the Austro-Italian frontier zones.

A Sixth Simple Truth About

THE LANDIS AWARD

Plan

This Committee has uniformly backed up those building trades' unions that have respected their word and have faithfully lived up to the Landis Award.

The Committee is working harmoniously with nineteen unions, but in the thirteen trades where the unions have either repudiated the Award, or have refused to eliminate the unfair, unjust and unreasonable practices condemned by Judge Landis, the Committee has made every effort to assist the contractors by furnishing and protecting workmen who are willing to work under the terms and conditions of the Landis Award.

All competent Landis Award workmen will have the backing of the Committee for permanent employment.

Tell us what work you want done and we will send appropriate lists of architects or contractors, or both. Insist that your building, repairing, painting and decorating be done under the terms of the Landis Award

JEWETT Coupe is breezy and cool on hot days. All side windows lower. You enjoy all the "openness" of a touring car. In the dusty stretch or sudden storm, raise the windows and you are just as snug and clean as at home. Lock the doors and luggage is safe.

When Jack Frost comes, this Jewett Coupe is doubly prized by all the family. With windows closed tight—they do close tight—you are comfortable on the bitterest days. You will go out oftener, keep in closer touch with your friends, really use your car.

But Jewett Coupe gives more than weather comfort. Women, however inexpert, discover that here is indeed a driving ease delightful to the frailest hand. With the longest springs of any car its size—and costly, deep seat cushions—it defies rough roads. Its rugged construction—Jewett is 200 pounds heavier than comparable cars—gives big car riding ease. It is finished, fitted and built to please and endure. Slam the doors. The sound bespeaks substantial worth.

Jewett Coupe is known as "the closed car with open car performance," due to the spirit of its 50-horsepower motor. Pass any car on any hill. Jewett Touring cars accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. The Coupe does nearly the same. Drive it from 2 to 60 miles an hour on high. You rarely change gears. When you do, it means a bare 3-inch movement of the lever. Do it fast or slowly—there's never a "miss" nor a "clash."

Jewett's mechanism in every particular, stays good. Jewett is the only Coupe around $1500 made by a builder of finest grade cars. Paige-Timken axles front and rear. Paige-type clutch and transmission. Paige-built motor. Sturdy 6-inch frame. It is a car to be proud of—an economical car for long, hard, satisfactory service. In the last 30 days we have sold 21 Jewetts for business use, to Chicago commercial houses buying for greatest efficiency and serviceability. Arrange with the near-by Jewett dealer for a family demonstration in this year-round Jewett Coupe. (04)

HERRIN FOUND BLIND, DEAF TO MOB KILLINGS

Massacre Blame Laid to Springfield.

Hunter's testimony before the committee.

Police Scathingly Rebuked.

Herrin's five police officers were given a most unmerciful panning when they testified concerning their actions on June 22 last, when the mobs dragged prisoners from the Lester mine through the streets of their city and murdered and mutilated the bodies near the cemetery.

Like the three little monkeys who "hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil," Herrin's law officers knew nothing of the tragedy, saw nothing of the march of death, did not hear the mob, made no effort to investigate or stop or punish.

"You should be indicted as conspirators in this crime," said Representative Michael Igoe, as one of the officers left the witness stand.

Robert Herrin, former chief of police of Herrin, washed his hands of the massacre, he testified. A husky young man, formerly a coal miner, Herrin gave testimony which aroused the indignation of the committee.

Only Heard of Mob, He Says.

More than matching former Sheriff Thaxton and his deputies, the Herrin officials refused to make any admissions which they did not care to make. Herrin was accused during the trials of having stood on the street and watched the mob go past without lifting a finger to aid the helpless men. He denied this today. One of his own policemen, however, testified that he and the chief heard the mob was in town, but did nothing.

Herrin said he heard on Wednesday of the shooting of two union men at the mine. He saw them brought to the Herrin hospital.

He had nothing more to tell of that day, when the mobs were forming, except to say there were unusual crowds on the street. He heard vaguely after the battle that hardware stores had been raided on Wednesday. He heard explosions. Everything was peaceable in town. He saw no armed men. He did not report anything to the sheriff.

Was "Around Town."

Mr. Igoe asked:

Q.—Where were you Thursday a. m.? A.—Around town.

Q.—Anything unusual reported at [illegible] that morning when you reported? A.—Only three men in jail.

Q.—Why were they in jail? A.—For protection.

Q.—Where were they from? A.—The Lester mine.

Q.—Did you question them? A.—Yes, they said they were hiding out.

Q.—Did they tell you any one had been killed? A.—No.

Q.—Where were you between 6 and 8 o'clock? A.—Around streets, near city hall and hospital.

Q.—Did you talk to injured men at hospital? A.—No.

Q.—Who was guarding them? A.—No one.

Q.—When was the killing at the cemetery? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—Did you see the march of the prisoners through Herrin streets? A.—No.

Didn't Deny Charges.

Q.—Did you hear any one testify here that you stood and saw this mob with their prisoners? A.—I read it.

Q.—Did you deny it? A.—No.

Q.—They marched the prisoners to the school house and made them get down on their hands and knees? A.—Yes.

Q.—Then took them to the cemetery and murdered them? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you had no intimation of what was going on in your city? A.—I had no idea they were in town.

Q.—Why did you not come into court and deny you watched this? A.—I was not summoned.

Q.—You understand you were really accused of participation in the murder? A.—[No answer].

Q.—If you had stopped the mob they would not have killed those men? A.—No.

Mr. Pierce asked:

Q.—You haven't been rewarded yet by this county have you? A.—No.

Q.—When did you go to the cemetery? A.—Between 9 and 11.

Saw One Wriggling in Road.

Q.—Anyone shot there? A.—Yes, six; one was wriggling on the road. They were bloody.

Q.—You have known for months that a man in your community testified you saw this march and you never attempted to correct it? A.—No.

Q.—Don't you treat an oath seriously in this county? A.—I am denying this now.

John Howell, Herrin policeman, was questioned about occurrences in that town on the 21st and 22d. He might have been blind and deaf for all he heard or saw in the way of growing trouble. He saw no crowds, heard nothing of gun raids or mine killings. When the bodies of the first men killed were brought into Herrin he was not alarmed. He thought that might end it.

The third officer, Jacob Jones, kept close to the city hall that morning, seven blocks from the line of march, hearing nothing, seeing nothing. He did not go to the cemetery. He made no effort to find out who committed the murders. He admitted that a woman phoned saying the mob was coming with prisoners, but he could not find them.

The fourth officer, Richard Saddler, did not hear about the riots until the trouble was all over. He was too busy taking care of traffic. He did not even inquire where the men were killed, and never tried to find out anything at all.

Slept During Killing.

The fifth officer, Monroe Smith, former union miner, proved of little more use. Nothing unusual went on that he saw. He made no arrests, no investigation, did nothing. He lives half a block from the schoolhouse where the prisoners crawled by on hands and knees, but slept through it all, he said. He heard nothing about the mob.

Oldham Paisley, Marion newspaper editor, testified.

On Monday, June 19, he said, Col. Hunter gave him a statement for publication, saying that troops were not needed and he was positive trouble would be averted. On Wednesday noon, he said, news of the firing on the mine truck came in. He told Col. Hunter of this. He aided Col. Hunter in getting information about robberies of hardware stores, where the miners got their guns and ammunition for the battle that night.

Col. Hunter, he said, called Gen. Black several times. Hunter gave Black the information gathered, particularly about the raids. He warned the guns were hidden.

BRITISH BANKING LEADER COMES TO SPEAK HERE

F. C. GOODENOUGH. [H. Walter Barnett Photo.]

Frederick Craufurd Goodenough, chairman of Barclay's bank, limited, of London, president of the British Bankers' association, and chairman of the London Bankers' Clearing house, is due to arrive in Chicago this morning on the Twentieth Century.

He will speak before the Industrial club of Chicago tomorrow evening at 6:30 o'clock at the Blackstone hotel.

Mr. Goodenough came to the United States to be the chief guest of the American Bankers' association at its spring meetg. He is regarded as one of the financial leaders of the British empire.

3 SCHOOLBOYS STAR WITNESSES IN MURDER TRIAL

Three little school boys, their hands twitching with apparent nervousness, took the witness stand in Judge Philip Sullivan's court yesterday and testified for the prosecution in the trial of John Meisner and James Hunter, teamsters, who are accused of the murder of Joseph Schlessinger, a Yellow cab driver, last January.

The boys, all of whom are still to reach their "teens," are John Molenda, 4818 South Racine avenue; Walter Garjegh, 4825 South Racine, and Julius Polarey, 1248 West 51st street.

Boy Identifies Revolver.

Little John told the jury that he found the revolver with which the state claims the taxi driver was shot during an attempted robbery by the two defendants. He was shown the two revolvers and identified one of the weapons.

"I was going to school the day of the shooting," John said, in answer to questions put by Assistant State's Attorneys William Smith and Joseph Savage. "When we passed by the place where the shooting took place we saw a lot of policemen. They were looking for something. One of them told me that he would give a dollar if I would find a big pistol they said they had lost.

"I got Walt and Julie and we started looking in the weeds. We played hookey from school and spent most of the day. In the afternoon we found the pistol and took it to the policeman. It is the same pistol which is right there [pointing to the gun on a table nearby]."

Boys Quizzed by Judge.

The other two boys testified to practically the same facts. They were questioned by Judge Sullivan before taking the stand as to whether they knew the difference between truth and falsehood. When one of them stated that a "boy who tells a story goes to a bad place and that the boy who tells the truth goes to heaven," they were allowed to take the witness stand.

The state expects to rest its case early Monday. The prosecution is demanding the death penalty for the two men. A third man, Harold Splitt, has entered a plea of guilty to the charge and will be tried later.

MORE MEMBERS! DRIVE SLOGAN OF COMMERCE BODY

"More members mean more money, more memorable meetings, more momentum."

With this as its slogan, chosen from among hundreds of others submitted, the Chicago Association of Commerce will start tomorrow on its drive for 1,000 new members. Headquarters for the campaign have been opened on the eighteenth floor of the Hotel La Salle.

More than 600 workers will set out to visit 10,000 prospects whose names have been listed. They are directed by fifty-four captains, led by John W. O'Leary.

"America's Finest Men's Wear Stores"

Can You Afford NOT to Wear
Capper & Capper
"FINER" CLOTHES?

If it were not for the "dreamer" the maker of maps would be out of luck. Progressive thought has created a demand for the engraver's tools. New maps must replace the old.

When La Salle weighed anchor at the mouth of the Chicago river a couple of hundred years ago or more, the great explorer scarcely visualized a metropolis of 3,000,000 souls. The map-maker has been busy since La Salle's day.

And so, we are going forward with the stride magnificent, discarding the pleasing thing of yesterday for the more pleasing thing of today. In raising the standard of the clothing industry—in order that we might sell even "finer" clothes—Capper & Capper negotiated a definite step forward.

In every human heart there is a keen sense of appreciation of the "fineness of things"—especially clothes. Capper & Capper clothes are "finer"—and you will enjoy them. Yet they are most reasonable in price—as you will agree—when you see the masterly suit creations we offer at $85. And there are others at $60, and even as low as $50.

Can you afford not to wear Capper & Capper "finer" clothes?

KRAUSER ALTERS PLEA IN MOVE TO ESCAPE GALLOWS

Grant, Pal, Faces Death Sentence Tuesday.

Bernard Grant, 20 year old "back o' the yards" gangster, who was recently sentenced to hang by a jury for the murder of Probationary Policeman Ralph Souders, took another step forward in his advance toward the gallows yesterday morning when Judge Oscar Hebel overruled a motion for a new trial and announced that sentence formally will be imposed next Tuesday morning.

A few minutes after Grant was led out of the courtroom, Walter Krauser, "pal" of Grant in the robbery, was led to the bar for further hearing on his plea of guilty. His attorney, Willard McEwen, is attempting to save the life of his client by proving he is mentally deficient and does not know the difference between right and wrong.

Changes His Plea.

A few minutes after Krauser had taken his place in a chair near the center of the courtroom, he was ordered to stand before the bar. His attorney then entered a motion that the plea of guilty be withdrawn and a plea of not guilty entered. The court permitted this, and the case was put on the calender for hearing before a jury on Monday.

Attorney McEwen's action in demanding a jury trial is taken to mean again witness one of the insanity battles that were so much in style two years ago. At that time every man who was found guilty of murder and sentenced to the gallows suddenly "turned" insane.

Carl Wanderer, Gene Geary, Harvey Church, Frank Companiona, Nicholas Viana were a few of the murderers who tried to prove they were insane. Geary was the only man who saved himself from the gallows, and is now serving life imprisonment in Chester prison for the criminally insane. All the others paid the penalty.

State Calls Him Sane.

Fighting against Krauser's insanity defense are Assistant State's Attorneys Edgar A. Jonas and William Scott Stewart.

"Krauser is no more insane than any one else you can find in that neighborhood where he lives," Mr. Jonas said. "He is resorting to the old sham. It's been tried before, and they didn't get away, and we will see that Krauser doesn't 'beat the rope.' The murder of Policeman Souders is going to be avenged by the hanging of both Grant and Krauser."

The decision of Judge Hebel in overruling the motion for a new trial by Grant was made after a lengthy argument by his counsel, Louis Haufchild. Certain points in the case were picked out, but from the opinion of the judge that were not of sufficient importance to warrant a new hearing.

STOLEN DIAMOND SWALLOWED BY WOMAN IS FOUND

A diamond ring which Mrs. Olive Clam, 28 years old, 7235 Cottage Grove avenue, swallowed on Thursday was recovered yesterday at the county hospital and returned to its owners.

Mrs. Clam swallowed the ring after she was alleged to have stolen it from the jewelry store of Hirsch & Elliott, 7505 Cottage Grove avenue, in an effort to avoid detection. The presence of the stone was disclosed by X-rays, and at one time it was thought that an operation would be necessary to recover the stone.

Mrs. Clam was taken into custody yesterday and booked on a larceny charge.

COSTA RICA SHIES AT TREATY FOR PROPOSED CANAL

Washington, D. C., April 28.—[Special.]—Strong opposition in Costa Rica is preventing approval by the national assembly of that country of the protocol with the United States providing that in event an interoceanic canal is built in central America the rights of Costa Rica in the San Juan river would be made the subject of special negotiations.

The opposition in Costa Rica is understood to be based on the claim that the United States, which previously had upheld the treaty of 1858 between Nicaragua and Costa Rica which provided that neither country should ever make a treaty with another country regarding the building of a canal without informing and consulting with the other, afterwards practically ignored the existence of the Nicaragua-Costa Rica pact and proceeded to negotiate with Nicaragua without the knowledge and consent of Costa Rica.

It is understood further that certain Costa Ricans feel that Nicaragua, which received $3,000,000 for her rights, should have been paid more generously.

These opponents of the protocal fear, it is said, that Costa Rica will have to sell her rights when the time comes for les sthan their actual value.

EIGHTY SEIZED IN I. W. W. RAIDS IN NEW ORLEANS

Foster Meeting Upset in Pittsburgh.

New Orleans, April 28.—Twenty-four striking I. W. W. seamen were arrested by the police late tonight as they were emerging from a hall where a meeting of about 150 strikers was held. The total arrests since the strike began reached eighty.

Raid a Foster Meeting.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 28. — Bail ranging from $1,000 to $50,000 each was fixed by county authorities today in the cases of twenty-four men, arrested during widespread radical raids in Allegheny county last night.

While prosecuting officers were going over the question of bond, hundreds of Pittsburgh residents received through the mails cards announcing that "William Z. Foster, first local appearance since the Michigan trial," would speak here on May 2, under the auspices of the "Labor Defense council."

Trouble-Makers Arrested.

Hoboken, N. J., April 28.—Walter V. Lyle of Boston and Louis H. Beattie of Macon, Ga., each were held in $5,000 bail by Commissioner Stanton today on charges of spreading seditious literature and attempting to foment strikes among seamen here. The prisoners were arrested last night on government owned piers by department of justice agents.

The men also are charged with attempt to intimidate and cajole United States citizens and prevent the sailing of the United States steamship President Arthur, engaged in carrying mail.

Strike Spreads in West.

San Francisco, Cal., April 28.—The general I. W. W. strike resulted in additional men walking out today in Pacific coast states. Estimates as to the number of men on strike in Washington as reported by employers were that 10,000 had responded to the strike call, but the I. W. W. headquarters said the number was between 20,000 and 30,000.

CHICAGO I. W. W. TO DANCE.

A twelve hour "international May day celebration and dance" is to be held by the I. W. W. next Tuesday afternoon and night in Chicago, but no May day demonstrations of a general nature have been planned, Jack Gillis, secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, declared yesterday.

Gillis denied a statement by Garland W. Powell, national director of the Americanism commission of the American Legion, that the I. W. W. had called a general strike. He said the only I. W. W. strikes are the marine transport workers and the lumber workers in the northwest.

Kelley, one of two American members of the international committee, said he had received no definite word.

FRENCH CROSS BRITISH WIRES IN CENTRAL ASIA

Wean Afghanistan from London Influence.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 28.—French government credits now being spent in courting Afghanistan throw a further light on the battle for commercial supremacy in central Asia which has just started.

The amount of the credits is supposed to be less than 1,000,000 francs (about $70,000), and it is thought that Great Britain had paid the bellicose Emir Khan a subsidy of £1,250,000 (about $5,750,000) up to 1920. The chamber has not yet actually approved these credits, but the urgency of the situation is forcing the government to spend money nevertheless.

Ambassador in Paris.

Following the sending of a French diplomatic mission Kabul Emir has sent an ambassador to Paris who is being maintained with these credits. He is the only Afghan ambassador abroad, with the exception of one in Russia. A French envoy will be sent to Kabul in a few days.

Forty young Afghans, including the Emir's son, have arrived at the Lycée Michelet in Paris to study. Four French professors have just started for Kabul to open a French school there.

Albert Foucher, a professor at the Sorbonne, has just been given exclusive privileges by the Emir to make archæological researches to gain information on the Persian, Median, and Greek epochs.

Hopes to Check British.

To be specific, France is counting on Afghanistan, which is a country of 10,000,000 people, with an army of 100,000, to be a sufficient thorn in the northwest Indian frontier to relieve the British pressure in Indo-China.

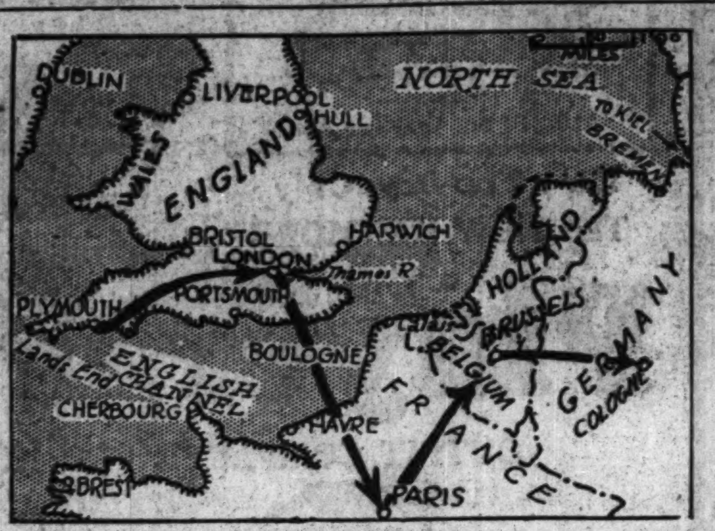
"Also, France sees Great Britain as seizing the commercial supremacy of central Asia, which it formerly divided with Russia. France also wishes to interrupt the continuous route from the Mediterranean to India, which the British now control. The French charge that Great Britain has strengthened its control on the ocean by lowering steamship rates.

It is impossible to learn if any money is being spent on direct subsidies.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

Fred Rickman, 40 years old, of Monee, Ill., employed by the Illinois Central railroad, was struck and killed by a Chicago bound Big Four train at Homewood, Ill., yesterday.

SPEEDING UP U. S.-EUROPE MAIL



[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, April 28.—An important air mail experiment was carried out today by the Western Morning News and the Plymouth chamber of commerce for the expedition of American mails to London and the continent.

At 6 a. m. dummy mail bags which had been dropped from an incoming American liner were picked up by a launch in Plymouth sound. The launch rushed to the docks, from where the bags were taken by motor to Chelson Meadows, a distance of four miles, where an airplane was waiting. The plane got off immediately, delivering the mail to Croydon, near London, at 9 a. m.

The bags were there transferred to the Instone air line, the letters reaching Paris at 3 p. m., Brussels at 1 p. m., and Cologne at 2 p. m. Replies can catch the morning air mail tomorrow, reaching the return American boat from Southampton in the afternoon. This saves at least four days in the receipt of and reply to American mails to Europe.

POLICEMAN WINS KNOCK DOWN AND DRAG OUT BATTLE

Four to One Against Him at Friars'.

Immaculate Lieut. Elbert Bullard of the detective bureau, commonly known as "Beau Brummel," walked into the bureau early yesterday, his hat gone, his clothes torn, and with the general appearance of having been in a good rough and tumble. He had just arrested, single handed, John Sheehey, 29 years old, 347 North Dearborn street, after a hand to hand fight in the Friars Inn, Van Buren street and Wabash avenue.

Lieut. Bullard learned late on Saturday night that Sheehey, who was wanted for shooting a Yellow cab driver last December, was at the Inn with another man and a couple of girls. Without delay, he went over to the Inn, sought Sheehey out and announced himself.

Four Pitch on One.

Then it began. Over went the table as Sheehey and his companion jumped for the lieutenant while the girls helped as best they could with salt cellars, pepper pots and other table ornaments. For a few minutes there was a lively little fight. As the air cleared it was found that Sheehey's companion was gone with the girls but that Lieut. Bullard still had Sheehey in his grasp. A minute or two later Sheehey was on his way to the bureau.

Sheehey was later released on a $2,000 cash bond. His companion is said to have been "Buster Brown," who has a police record as a robber and is wanted for forfeiting his bonds on a robbery charge for which Sheehey was tried three years ago and freed.

Hangout for Thieves.

Discussing the arrest, Chief of Police Collins said that the Friars inn was a notorious rendezvous for thieves, pickpockets, and other criminals after 1 o'clock, and that he intended to take steps to have the place closed. In the meantime men would be detailed to watch the place and arrest any doubtful characters found there.

Whisky valued at several hundred dollars, cocaine, and morphine valued at $200, a quantity of cigars, cigarets, and cosmetics, and a 500 pound safe, containing $175 in cash and a $100 gold bond of the Commonwealth Edison company, were taken by burglars early yesterday morning from the drug store of Charles J. Stein, 1659 Polk street.

CONTINUE SCHOOL EXHIBIT.

Exhibits of manual training work from Chicago elementary schools, now on show at the school offices, 460 South State street, are to be continued for another week. The time has been extended, according to Supt. Peter A. Mortenson, on account of the interest in the exhibits, which deal with landscape and gardening problems.

JEWS TO LAUNCH $2,500,000 DRIVE NEXT THURSDAY

Large Corps of Workers Ready for Task.

Thursday next will see the opening of the campaign of the Chicago Jewish community to obtain two and a half million dollars for the benefit of Jewish charities. Between two and three thousand men and women have promised their active support and it is hoped to realize the sum within two weeks.

Formal launching of the drive, which is said to be the biggest effort ever attempted by the community, will take place next Sunday evening at a mass-meeting at the Auditorium theater, at which Julius Rosenwald, honorary chairman of the campaign, will be present. The purposes of the drive will then be explained to the public and the methods of carrying it out divulged.

Plan Many Improvements.

Funds raised are to be expended wholly for physical improvement of property and enlargements of the Michael Reese and Sinai hospitals and the Jewish People's institute. A nurses' home and training school is to be built at Michael Reese hospital, a large addition made to Mount Sinai hospital, doubling its capacity, and a branch of the institute opened in the Lawndale district.

"While $2,000,000 seems a rather big order, it should be remembered that the pledges for this drive will continue over three years and that subscriptions are not to be collected all at once," said Max Epstein, head of the General American Tank Car corporation, and a vice president of the campaign, yesterday.

Need of Funds Great.

"Necessity for the funds is obvious. Nothing has been done towards the enlarging and expansion of the physical properties of the three institutions for three years. The Jewish community has grown in tremendous numbers during that time—the Lawndale district increasing from a few thousand to about 100,000 Jewish people.

"The community has been so busy for the last decade answering the calls for war relief that it has had no time nor means to devote to its local problems."

DIES VISITING FRIEND.

Charles Saunders, 58 years old, 2644 Indiana avenue, a glass packer, died suddenly on Friday night at the home of John O'Hagan, 2354 Normal avenue, where he was visiting.

Most Hudson owners remain Hudson owners. They find nothing to tempt them elsewhere. Some have owned five, ten, sixteen successive Hudsons.

They have found each succeeding Hudson a better, smoother, finer car.

Those who drive today's Super-Six call it the greatest Hudson ever built. Its price makes it conspicuous not only among cars of comparable fineness, but even among those that you never classify with Hudson in quality.

The New APPERSON

THE APPERSON EIGHT
Five-Passenger Phaeton

No Other Car Has These Features

—a mechanical gear-shift which makes it impossible to "clash" the gears;

—a driver's compartment that is free from all levers;

—an emergency brake that operates from the instrument board.

These advantages are exclusive with the new Apperson. Nothing introduced in motor car development within the last ten years is comparable to this new gear-shift. It is a safety, comfort and convenience factor of immeasurable importance.

This new Apperson is the finest of a fine line. Its driving feel, its effortless control, the feeling of confidence and dependability which it inspires are resultant of the thirty years of fine engineering behind it. It is just the kind of a car which invites the rider to drive on and on—oblivious to all things mechanical.

Apperson has eliminated the most objectionable feature of driving—shifting gears. In this new Apperson, even the most inexperienced driver feels confident and unafraid, whether on the busiest streets or the roughest country roads.

When you sit behind the wheel of this car you will know why old Apperson owners invariably buy another Apperson.

FAIRIES IN ERIN? SHURE MR. DOYLE, WE LONG KNEW IT

Jawn McKenna's Father Saw 'Em Himself.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

Fairies really do exist in Ireland!

This was the message Sir Arthur Conan Doyle brought to Chicago yesterday. He never saw the fairies himself, but he knows people who did see them, and their veracity is not to be questioned.

"Children I know," said Sir Arthur, "have seen and played with fairies. Have seen their 'nests,' and some of the best scientists in England have investigated the matter and found them to be a reality."

What Say, Scoffers?

Now ye scoffers, who have laughed at the Irish because they believed in fairies, what have ye to say now? What further proof do you need that fairies do inhabit Ireland, and that children see them and play with them?

"To be shure there are fairies in Ireland," said Jawn McKenna, of Archey road when told of Sir Arthur's statement. "No thruer word was iver spoke. Many's the time I heard me father, and me mother, too, say they seen th' fairies at home whin they were childher.

"Yes, indeed, my good man, there's no doubt in th' wurruld about fairies bein' in Ireland. Some av th' counthry born will laugh at ye whin ye spake about fairies an' thry to make out ye are superstitious. They like to make use av that word—superstitious.

Called Them Leprechauns.

"Me father (God be good to him) seen manny a wan av thim whin he was a boy in th' ould counthry. At home they called thim 'leprechauns,' or 'th' little men with th' red caps.' It was lucky to meet wan av thim.

"Wan day me father (I'll not belie him) was dhrivin' home th' cow whin all av a suddint wan av th' little min with a red cap on his head, jumped up out av th' ground ahead av him.

"'Good evenin' to yer lordship,' said me father, takin' th' caubeen off his head in respect to th' fairy. 'An' it's glad,' sez he, 'I am to see ye lookin' so well. Is there annything I can do for y?' sez me father. 'I'll do annything ye say.'"

"Well, sir, th' fairy took a pipe out av his pocket an' filled it with tibacky. He then blew his breath on the pipe an' th' tibacky began to burn.

Brings On Fiddlers.

"Th' little man wint on smokin' for about five minutes without sayin' a word, whin all av a suddint up comes half a dozen more little min with red caps. Two av thim had little fiddles an' they began to play th' most beautiful music me father iver heard. It was wan av Moore's melodies.

"Well, sir, th' little man who was smokin' knocked th' ashes out av his pipe an' he waved his hand. With that th' fiddlers an' th' others all vanished.

"'Now follow me,' said th' little man to me father, 'an' I'll take ye where there's gold an' silver. It was gettin' late an' me grandmother was waitin' for to milk th' cow, but me father wint along afther th' fairy.

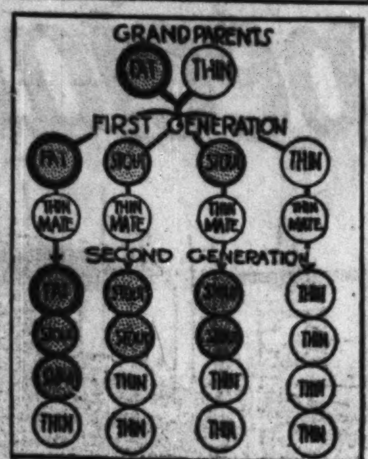
Follows Over Hill and Dale.

"Well, sir, he followed the little man all over the County Limerick—over hill an' dale, through glen an' woods, until he dhrapped down from exhaustion.

"Whin he failed to fetch th' cow home at th' usual time they wint searchin' for him, fearin' that he had been led away be th' fairies. They didn't find him till daylight th' next mornin'. Th' fairies had covered him over with hay from a field near by to keep the night dew off av him, an' he was sound asleep whin they came upon him.

"Now, that's a thrue story av th' fairies in Ireland."

FAT—ALITY!



BY SELBY MAXWELL.

Fat persons are born, not made, says Dr. C. B. Davenport, director of the station for experimental evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y. In an address delivered before the National Academy of Sciences he states that the only way to be sure of a slim figure is to have slim parents.

Fatness and slimness follow the usual laws of heredity, according to the director. No amount of dieting will add much flesh to an adult naturally thin, and exercise has no permanent value in taking the flesh off from one who was born to be fat. As soon as special treatments stop, an individual goes back to his hereditary status.

The accompanying diagram illustrates the law or heredity as it concerns thinness and fatness. If you are unduly thin or fat, it is certain at least one of your grandparents was that way before you. In the first generation of a union of two dissimilar persons, one-fourth of the children will be fat, one-fourth thin, and one-half inclined to stoutness. Two thins will never have fat children, while the offspring of two fats will always be fat.

When two stout people marry, half of their children will be stout, one-fourth fat and one-fourth thin. Should a stout person marry a fat one, three-fourths of the first generation will be fat and the other fourth stout.

There is at present no known method for controlling heredity.

BOSTON STORE MARKS FOUNDING FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago the Boston store opened its doors for the first time on State street, an unpretentious, one story, one room building just south of the alley between Madison and Washington streets. Its policy was "Buy for cash, sell for cash, and give bargains." Its annual business was about $50,000.

Today, still adhering to the same policy, the store has twenty-three acres of floor space, seventeen stories and three basements, while the annual business done is more than $28,000,000. Mrs. Mollie Netcher Newbury, widow of the original founder, is still manager. The anniversary will be celebrated throughout this week, the store being specially decorated for the occasion.

MILITARY BURIAL FOR N. U. STUDENT KILLED IN CRASH

Funeral of Louis Aubere, freshman student at Northwestern university, who was killed Thursday night when an automobile in which he was riding with friends crashed into another car, will be held Monday morning at St. Ignatius' church in Evanston.

Maj. Louis Byrne, head of the R. O. T. C. at the university, has assigned a firing squad of students to take charge of the military end of the funeral. It will be the first time in history of the university that a boy has been given a military funeral by students.

Reports from Evanston hospital were that Ralph Williams, also a freshman, who was injured in the accident, probably would recover. Other persons hurt in the accident also are recovering.

DRIVE AN OVERLAND AND REALIZE THE DIFFERENCE

On the Edge of Tomorrow

Where will you live in 1930?

That is only seven years hence, a brief span in the life of this generation.

Chicago, city of marvelous growth, is bursting its bounds to house a constantly increasing population.

In this vast and rapid expansion, city dwellers must be concerned about their homes, insuring to their children the advantages of healthful air and proper surroundings, where educational facilities are adequate and the church extends a welcome.

Chicago is encircled by towns and cities of rare residential attractiveness and industrial opportunity, forming north, south, and west, the edge of tomorrow. Boundary lines of great cities are changed by the march of men and the demand for homes and a place to work.

The farms of yesterday are divided into the homesites of tomorrow. Home-makers and business men, look out beyond the edge—out where the country beckons and opportunity is new.

And in the making of your plans it is important for you to know that the same full measure of Electric or Gas Service which you now enjoy will be available to you in the widespread territory of this company.

If we can assist you to select a location for a home or an industrial site, we shall be glad to have you call at any of our district offices.

Food Prices and Food Protection

Housewives scan the food price lists with the same eagle eye that husbands reserve for the stock market.

The grocer whose prices are lowest is never overlooked.

But price is not all that the Housewife watches. She gives intelligent preference to the store that is neat and spotless, where she knows the foodstuffs are always kept fresh and clean.

She expects, too, that her food purchases will be delivered clean—clean from counter to kitchen.

The thoughtful Grocer recognizes this. He pays special attention to deliveries. He entrusts them to Victory Food Containers, the newer and better form of food protection.

He knows, just as well as the Housewife does, that Victory Food Containers give the best possible protection—that they are strong and absolutely clean and sanitary—that they come to him packed in sealed cartons—yet cost no more than ordinary paper bags.

Madam, your Grocer wants to please you. His idea of service is to protect your interests in every way he can. He will thank you for reminding him that

You are entitled to have ALL your groceries protected in clean, sanitary Victory Food Containers.

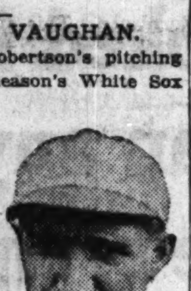
BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

With Charles Robertson's pitching to lead 'em on, Gleason's White Sox leaped back into the league yesterday and annexed their second win of the season by bumping the Cleveland Indians, 6 to 3, in the third of the series. They accomplished this by the simple but effective process of bunching hits with passes.



ROY ELSH.

Robertson's pitching was easily the high light of the pastime. For seven rounds he was good to look upon, but in the eighth weakened sufficiently to let the Indians count twice. Meanwhile, the venerable Tris Speaker was having all sorts of trouble with his slabbers, and before finishing for the day he gave four of them opportunity to display their stuff to the multitude, which numbered 18,000.

Gleason Shakes Lineup.

Gleason endeavored to rout the jinx by going into the game with a revised lineup. Johnson was given a rest and McClellan sent to the shortstop post. Kamm was moved up to Johnson's second place in the batting order, and although the $100,000 kid didn't pad the hit column, he scored twice, stole one base, and gave the fans a thrill by giving one ball a terrific ride to left field. Jamieson caught it after considerable sprint.

The Sox started on their way to victory right in the first round. They hopped on Dan Boone for a lone tally, but the Indians came back with one off Robertson in the second. The Gleasons jumped out in front again in the third with three more that drove Boone off the slab and completed their toil in the fifth with two counters off Jim [Lefty] Edwards. After this they didn't get as much as a single.

Sox Start Scoring.

The first inning run was brewed by Elsh with a single. Kamm forced him out and then stole second. A hit by Sheely sent the $100,000 star across. The Idians evened it in the second on a double by Summa and single by Myatt.

Boone started to bury himself by handing a pass to Kamm in the third. Collins singled and Hooper sacrificed. Sheely followed with a bounder to Lutze, who threw to the plate and inadvertently hit Kamm in the back, the ball rolling to the stand, and Collins followed Kamm over the plate. Sheely went to second on the error and scored when Mostil singled to right. Boone resigned at this stage in favor of Edwards.

Hooper Gets Triple.

The two Sox runs in the fifth were due mainly to a long clout by Hooper. He bumped the right field fence for three bases after Collins had walked, and scored himself when Speaker dropped Sheely's long fly. After this the only excitement was Cleveland's eighth when Robertson gave up three passes, which, with hits by Wamby and Gardner, netted two runs.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MOURNS DEATH OF UMPIRE SENTELLE

NEW YORK, April 28.—Flags in National league baseball parks were half masted today for Paul Sentelle, the umpire who died last night in Cincinnati. Games in the league will be halted several minutes Monday while players and fans pay silent tribute to the popular arbiter.

John G. Heydler, president of the league, said that Sentelle, who came to the National last year from the Texas league, was one of the most capable and best liked umpires in the game. "He had been a credit to baseball and will be remembered as one of its finest characters," he added.

Robert Emslie, dean of National league umpires, will attend the funeral in New Orleans Monday as Mr. Heydler's representative.

PROBES CHARGE THAT RUTH SUIT WAS CONSPIRACY

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—Ferdinand Pecora, assistant district attorney, today began investigation of the allegation that the filing of a $50,000 damage suit against "Babe" Ruth, the ball player, which was withdrawn on Friday in the Supreme court by attorneys for Dolores Dixon, was due to a conspiracy. Hyman Bushell, counsel for the Yankee's home run king, appeared at the prosecutor's office in the afternoon. He admitted later that he had laid bare certain data connected with the suit of 19 year old Dolores Dixon against Ruth.

KEARNS HINTS AT BIG FIGHT NEWS

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—According to Jack Kearns, who arrived from Chicago today, there will be something doing in real fight talk within a day or two. He says the Shelby affair is still hanging fire and that negotiations for the row with Tom Gibbons in the west are no further advanced. Kearns called on Tex Rickard at the Garden, but his visit was merely social. He will remain here until after the milk fund show, May 12.

FIGHTING SPIRIT OF U. S. GOLFERS WINS EVEN BREAK

RYE, England, April 28.—[Associated Press.]—Fine competitive spirit saved the American amateur golfers from defeat today in their first battle on the English fairways.

In the morning they met a reverse but in the afternoon they made a fighting comeback and ended the day all square with the stars of the Oxford and Cambridge Golfing society, with whom they played a dozen foursomes.

Six four-ball foursomes were played in the forenoon, of which the natives won four. The Yankees returned to the windy, sandy links in the afternoon and won four straight, or sufficient to square matters with their hosts. The afternoon matches were two-ball foursomes.

Draw Big Crowd.

One thousand spectators or thereabouts motored to this ancient town by the English channel to see the debut of the Americans and most of them walked in the wake of Jess Sweetser, the American champion who, paired with Francis Ouimet, was triumphant in both his morning and afternoon matches.

They were the only Americans to win both before and after lunch.

Tomorrow the Americans will play a series of informal matches with various Britishers, after which they will go to Sandwich to practice in preparation for the St. George's challenge cup tournament on Wednesday and Thursday.

Sweetzer and Ouimet Win.

RYE, England, April 28—[United Press.]—Jess Sweetser and Francis Ouimet, the American stars, won today from Cyril Tolley and R. H. De Montmorency, 3 up and 1 to play.

Maxwell R. Marston, Philadelphia, and Robert A. Gardner won their match from the English pair, Roger Wethered and Bernard Darwin, 2 up. Dr. O. P Williams, Portland, and F. J. Wright, Los Angeles, also won from E. F. Storey and D. E. Lansdale, 7 and 5. S. Davidson Herron, Chicago, and Harrison R. Johnston, St. Paul, defeated E. W. E. Holderness, British amateur champion, and A. J. Evans, 1 up.

Lose Two in Afternoon.

The two matches that the Americans lost in the afternoon were:

M. A. Powell and G. L. Mellin beat George V. Rotan, Houston, and Reginald Lewis, Connecticut state champion, 2 and 1. E. H. Gillies and C. M. Croome beat John F. Neville, San Francisco, and J. F. Byers, Pittsburgh, 3 and 2.

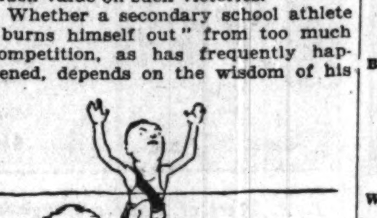
IN the WAKE of the NEWS

PREP ATHLETICS.

OBJECTION frequently is made to prep school athletes competing in various sports at big tournaments like those held at Chicago, Northwestern, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, and other colleges. The arguments advanced are danger of overexertion, and the placing of too much value on such victories.

Whether a secondary school athlete "burns himself out" from too much competition, as has frequently happened, depends on the wisdom of his coach. The conscientious mentor will not sacrifice a boy for the sake of additional points.



So far as this factor concerns big meets, we think there is less danger than in dual or smaller meets. In the intersectional affair, the competition is keener and a boy hardly can hope to excel in more than one or two events. In dual meets, one athlete sometimes is called upon to capture enough points to determine the result.

Overstressing athletics is an old argument—on the same basis as the discussion between the relative advantage of intercollegiate competition and intramural sport.

The Wake always has believed in outside competition, both for college and prep athletes. We think there is keener effort to make teams which go away on trips. We think the experience gained in big meets raises the caliber of sport.

When I'm a grownup daddy man
And have some little boys,
I'll buy the largest house I can
And fill it full of toys.
There'll be no bathtub in this home,
No towels, nor any soap;
And there shall be no toothbrush, comb,
Nor castor oil, I hope.

I'll always stay at home and play,
I'll never go to town;
We'll have a circus every day
And I shall be the clown.
We'll use the living room for games,
Play marbles in the hall,
Box in the den, and when it rains
We'll play indoor baseball.

We'll see a movie every night,
And there shall be a rule
That when the weather's warm and bright,
There'll be no pesky school.
We'll live on cakes and candy, and
We'll not object to noise—
When I'm a grownup daddy man
And have some little boys. A. E. F.

And the dancing pumps—I'd rather feel the snap of a twig under a pair of packs any time. While for tobacco smoke, who can build a dream in perfumed cigaret smoke? Gej.

ILLINI MAKE CLEANUP IN DES MOINES MEET; PENN STATE OUTSPEEDS OXFORD IN 2-MILE RACE

Nittany Forced to New World's Mark at Philadelphia.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—[Special.]—Penn State college, with Allen Helfrich anchoring a great quartet, today climaxed the greatest athletic carnival by tearing to pieces the world's record for the two mile relay and by defeating, in a duel which tried the souls of men and set the 30,000 spectators mad with enthusiasm, the greatest relay team Britain ever sent into competition.

In that two mile battle, after Penn State, Georgetown and Oxford had struggled for a mile and a half in record time, three of the greatest half milers in the world picked up the burden. Helfrich, wearing the blue and white of State college; W. R. Milligan, in the dark blue of Oxford, and Connolly, in the blue and gray of Georgetown, were sent away for that last half mile, with Helfrich twenty yards in the lead, and Connolly striving desperately to overtake the flying Briton.

Helfrich Holds Lead.

The pace was terrific, and in the back stretch the Britisher attempted to overcome the handicap. Foot by foot he pulled up until, at the turn on the back stretch, the warning screams and shouts of the mad crowd of fans stirred Helfrich and, lifting his stride, he held level, then commenced gradually to draw away. In vain the Britisher raised his stroke, while Connolly fought to gain. Helfrich sprinted across the line, with a frenzied crowd waiting, thirty yards ahead of the Britisher, while Connolly dropped back and was beaten fifteen yards.

The time was 7 minutes 48 4-5 seconds, as against 49 4-5 made by the team that Meredith led in 1922.

Run Through Rain.

The final day of the carnival started with heavy clouds, a threatening rain which delayed and then helped the army of runners soon after the spectacular victory of the Americans over the invaders from Oxford, grew harder and harder until it was driving in sheets across the field, and the final event, the four mile relay, turned into a dismal procession, the runners battling heavy sheets of rain and wind until but four finished.

In that final event of the greatest carnival Penn ever staged, the Navy team, with Newhall running at anchor, floated to victory, while Columbia which at the three miles seemed to have the race at its mercy, fell back and Connolly, making another despairing effort to lift the colors of Georgetown, finished third.

Brickman Gets Second.

The west, which did not have a chance to cheer much during the carnical, had its rounds of applause today in the field events and on the hurdles. Brickman, running for Chicago, captured second place in the 120 yard hurdles, against perhaps the greatest field ever assembled. The Chicago team took second place in the half mile college relay. Leib of Notre Dame took the discus with a throw of 136 feet, 4 inches, and Hubbard of Michigan ran true to form and added the broad jump to his other triumphs.

The west grabbed some more honors when Norton of Kansas came through in the high jump in which he tied Brown, Dartmouth's great leaper, and won the toss and when Welch of Friends' college, Wichita (Kas.) landed in third place in the discus throw.

Two mile college relay championship—Won by Penn State [Carter, Edgerton, Enck, and Helfrich]; Oxford, second; Georgetown, third. Time, 7:48 4-5. [New korld's record.]

2 WORLD'S RECORDS, MANY OTHER MARKS, GO IN RELAY CLASSICS

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—Associated Press.]—One world's record was smashed; one, possibly two, American records were shattered, and ten Drake records were broken today in the annual Drake relay carnival which attracted more than 1,300 track and field stars. The world's and national records set were:

WORLD'S RECORD.

440 yard four man relay—University of Illinois, :42 3-10, which is one-tenth of a second faster than the best previous mark.

WORLD'S INTERCOLLEGIATE RECORD.

One mile four man relay—University of Iowa team, 3:16 9-10, one-tenth of a second slower than the world's record made by C. B. Rogers, Earl Eby, Lawrence Brown and Robert Maxam competing as an American Legion team in 1921.

AMERICAN RECORDS.

Javelin throw—Milton Angier, Illinois, 203 feet 9½ inches, bettering his record established in the Drake game a year ago by an even foot.

880 yard four man relay—Illinois, 1:27 5-10. This performance is one-tenth slower than the world's record created by B. J. Wefers Jr., H. Ray, F. K. Lovejoy and Edward Farrell, in 1921. No other college team, the coaches claim has covered the distance as fast as Illinois.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 28.—One world's record was set in the University of Pennsylvania's relays here today when the two mile college relay was won by the Penn State team of Carter, Edgerton, Enck and Helfrich, in 7:48 4-5.

TWO YOUTHS IN AUTO ACCIDENT ON WAY TO DRAKE GAMES MAY DIE

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—Four youths from Guthrie Center, who came to Des Moines to attend the Drake relays, were injured this afternoon when their automobile crashed into a truck. Leo Chase, 15, and Walter France, 21, both are believed to have suffered fractured skulls. Physicians say they probably will die from their injuries. The other boys were only slightly injured.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., April 28.—Wendall Bragonier, 12, a spectator, who was struck on the head by a twelve pound weight at a high school track and field meet here yesterday, has a good chance for recovery, his physicians said this morning. An operation was performed last evening to relieve pressure on the brain.

Crews Battle Sinking as Middies Win

Annapolis, Md., April 28.—Oarsmen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology were completely outclassed in a regatta on the Severn river this afternoon. Navy's varsity eight pulled across the finish line of the Henley course of a mile and five-sixteenths eight lengths to the good. The Navy second crew defeated Tech's 150 pounders by the same big margin, and the Navy "plebes" won by five lengths. The times were:

Navy varsity....	8:09	Navy seconds.	9:54 2-5
Tech	8:43	Navy plebes .	8:05

The varsity brush was rowed under miserable conditions of water. A heavy sea was rolling, and a downpour of rain set in several minutes before the senior crews paddled to the starting pount. As a result both shells shipped considerable water, and at times it appeared that both of the crews would be swamped. Navy's second crew barely escaped fate when caught in the trough of a sea.

Columbia Takes Childs Cup.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 28.—[United Press.]—Columbia university won the seventeenth annual Childs' cup race over the American Henley course on the Schuylkill river this afternoon. The University of Pennsylvania crew finished second and Princeton third. Ten thousand lined the banks of the course.

Columbia finished two full lengths ahead of Pennsylvania and Princeton was more than two lengths behind the Quakers. Columbia covered the mile and 550 yards in 7 minutes 44 seconds, considered slow time.

In the junior varsity races just before the Childs' cup event, Columbia won, Pennsylvania was second and Princeton third. The Columbia shell nosed over the line a quarter of a length ahead. The time was 8:18.

ONE MAN TEAM STARS AT MEET

Springfield, Mo., April 28.—[Special.]—Carl Junction, a little mining town in the Ozark region, sent a one man track team to the annual southwest track and field meet here today, and that one man team, consisting of William [Chub] Allan, came near winning the meet. Allan placed first in the 100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, and in the 440 yard and 880 yard runs. He broke the record in the 100 yard dash and was high point man of the tournament.

University High Carries Off Honors of Prep Schools in West.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Des Moines, Ia., April 28.—[Special.]—In one of the greatest sets of relay games ever held in the middle west, if not in the country, an event in which one world's record was broken, an American mark smashed, and a long list of other carnival records shattered, Illinois and University High school of Chicago carried off the honors in the fourteenth annual set of relay games held in the Drake stadium today in the presence of 8,000 enthusiastic track and field fans.

In addition to this wholesale shattering of marks, college coaches here tonight are unanimous in their assertions that Illinois and Iowa should be credited with world's and American intercollegiate records in the 880 yard and one mile relays, respectively. In the former event, the Orange and Blue quartet covered the distance in 1:27 5-10. This performance is one-tenth of a second slower than the world's record created by B. J. Wefers Jr., H. Ray, F. K. Lovejoy, and Ed Farrell in 1921. The coaches claim no college quartet has traveled the distance any faster than Illinois did this afternoon.

Hawks Claim Record.

Iowa, which wound up the great meet by taking the one mile relay, will lay claim to a world's intercollegiate record in the event. The Hawkeyes stepped the distance in 3:16 9-10, which is one tenth of a second slower than the world's record made by C. R. Rogers, Earl Eby, Lawrence Brown and Robert Maxam in 1921. The record almanac does not show any faster time than that made by the above mentioned teams, and efforts will be made to claim world's intercollegiate records for both Illinois and Iowa. Their performances were strictly within the rules and the races timed by men who have acted in these capacities for years at this set of games.

To Illinois' quarter mile team went the honor of establishing an undisputed world's 440 yard relay record. Coach Harry Gill's lads stepped the distance in :42 3-10. The old world's record was :42 4-10 and was made by a team composed of B. D. Wefers Jr., H. Ray, E. K. Lovejoy, and Ed Farrell in 1921. The Orange and Blue quartet was composed of Sweet, Hughes, Evans, and Ayres.

Angier Sets Mark.

The American record to go by the boards was in the javelin throw. Milton Angier of the University of Illinois, who held the previous national mark at 202 feet 9¼ inches, hurled the shaft 203 feet 9½ inches this afternoon. He was favored by a slight wind which blew from the north, and this will be taken into consideration when the Illinois athlete applies for a new American record. Angier was easily the class of the spear throwers and it was a foregone conclusion he would win.

In addition to the many records broken and tied today, four were shattered yesterday and three established. From this recapitulation it will be readily seen that America will not want for talent to compete in the Olympic games in Paris next year. The regularity with which records were shattered became so common that the crowd was disappointed whenever the officials did not announce a new record after conveying the results of various events.

Illini Three Times Winner.

Of the five university relays held, Illinois was victorious in three, Michigan took one, and Iowa one. The Urbana team won quarter and half mile relays and the four mile. Michigan was victorious in the two mile after Reinke had run a great race on the last lap, while Iowa was easily the class of the field in the one mile. In the college relays Butler, Wabash, and Monmouth divided honors by winning one relay each.

In the high school section University High carried off the honors by winning three relays and establishing new records in two. The Midway boys of Chicago took the half mile in 1:33 1-5 for a new record and the 400 yard shuttle in :41 9-10 for another record. In both events Goodwillie was an important factor, and the team's success today was entirely due to his efforts.

Individual Honors Divided.

In the individual events, honors were fairly well distributed. Illinois and Kansas were the only two time winners. Milton Angier and Dean Brownell of Harry Gill's team took the javelin throw and pole vault, respectively. Merwin Graham of Kansas won the running broad jump, and Poor of the same school took the high jump. Towler of Minnesota was victor in the high hurdles after an interesting finish with Crawford of Iowa. L. A. Platt of Denver university was an easy winner of the discus, and Hartman of Nebraska sprung a surprise by beating Van Orden of Michigan out of first place in the shotput.

With weather conditions ideal for the great meet, it did not take the athletes long to settle down to record smashing performances. In the half mile class A high school relay, University High won in the record breaking time of 1:33 1-5. The old mark was 1:34 3-5, made by Cedar Rapids in 1921.

Cedar Rapids High took the two mile class A high school relay in 8:25, which lowered the old record of 8:27 4-5, made by a Cedar Rapids team last year. L. A. Platt of Denver then came along and bettered the Drake relay record made by himself yesterday. He tossed the saucer 138 feet 6¼ inches today.

Illini Given Ovation.

Illinois then received a great ovation when the time of its quarter mile relay team was announced at :42 3-10 for a new world's record. University High kept in its record breaking stride and lowered the 400 yard shuttle mark from :42⅕ to :41 9-10, the old record established by Sioux City last year.

Monmouth was the next institution to break into the record breaking class. The team from the small Illinois institution won the two mile college relay in 8:10 5-10. This was beter than the old mark of 8:11 4-5 made by Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Ia., in 1921.

Illinois came back in favor by taking the 880 yard relay in the fast time of 1:27 5-10, which is said to be a world's intercollegiate record. The mark at least broke the Drake relay record of 1:28 4-5, made by Wisconsin in 1916. Angier followed with his record breaking performance in the javelin.

Brownell Springs Surprise.

In the pole vault, Dean Brownell of Illinois sprung a surprise by taking the event with an effort of 12 feet 10 inches. This bettered the Drake relay mark of 11 feet 9½ inches, made by Rogers of Kansas last year. Iowa then wound up the record breaking performance by taking the one mile relay in 3:16 9-10, one-tenth of a second slower than the world's record, but faster than the Drake relay mark of 3:20 2-5, made by the Illinois team of last year.

In the special events, Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C., defeated Ray Buker, former eastern intercollegiate two mile champion who is now competing for the Tri-color club of Chicago, in a special match race of one mile. Ray, who benefited by the pace given by Egil Krogh of Chicago for the first half mile, turned the mile in 4:15 5-10, which is the fastest time ever made in the state of Iowa over the distance. Tom Eck, coach of the long distance runners at the University of Chicago, claims it is the fastest mile run in America this year.

Wolters Noses Out Spink.

Deak Wolters, the former Ames star, just nosed out Phil Spink, former University of Illinois athlete who is competing for the Chicago A. A., in a special 440 yard run. Spink went into the lead at the report of the pistol and led until ten yards of the tape when Wolters drew up on even terms and won by inches. The time was :49 7-10. Phil Donohoe, another University of Illinois runner who is competing under Cherry Circle colors, was third.

The event was by far the most successful in its history. In fact, the games are growing to such proportions that some sort of arrangement must be made to keep the fields down. There was quality and quantity at this year's meet but there were many contestants who should have been left at home. Like events of yesterday, today's contests were well conducted and the officials and K. L. Wilson, director of athletics at Drake university, are deserving of commendation for putting on such an impressive event which will go a long way toward the successful development of an American Olympic team next year.

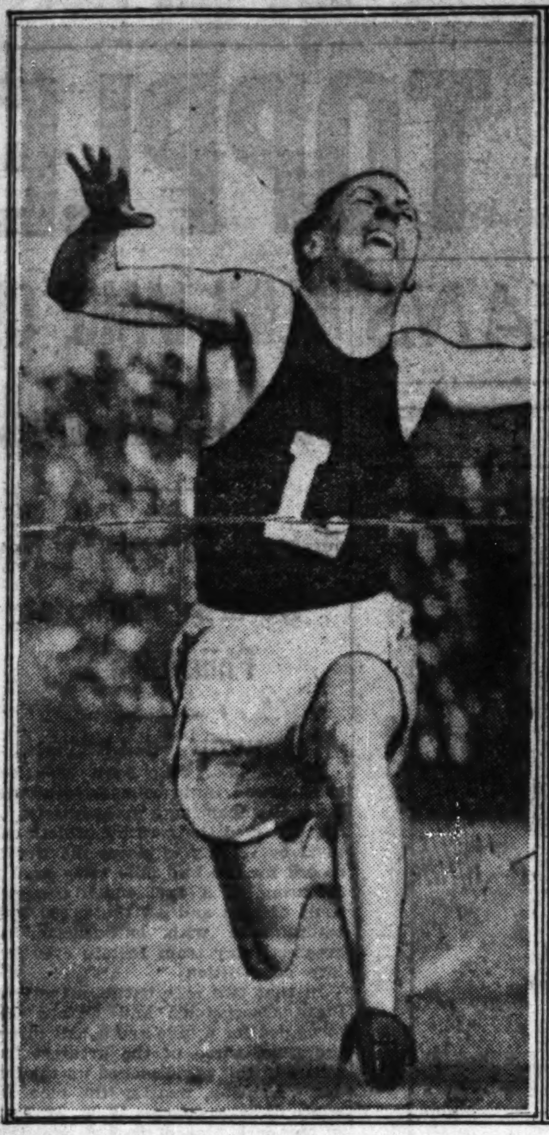
PENN AND DRAKE RELAY STARS



Al Leconey of Lafayette showed his heels to a great field in the century dash at the Penn games. The Lafayette runner, who is rated one of the fastest in the United States, broke the tape in :10 flat. [Pacific and Atlantic Photo.]

Tom Lieb, the husky Notre Dame star, transferring his activities from Drake to Penn this season, hurled the discus 136 feet 4 inches for first place honors. Lieb also won the same event at Drake last year. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Poor of Kansas was anything but that in his specialty. His leap of 6 feet 4 inches carried his university colors to first place in the high jump at Des Moines and was two inches better than his nearest competitors could do. [G. H. Swartz Photo.]

L. A. Platt of Denver university, the "dark horse" of the Drake meet, crashed into prominence with a heave of 138 feet 6 1-2 inches in the discus event. The performance shattered the record of 133 feet 4 inches made by Tom Lieb in 1922. [G. H. Swartz Photo.]

Morton Wins 2 to 1; Defense of Oak Park Cracks in 7th

BY GEORGE BUCKLEY.

A slashing triple by J. Fvec in the last inning and a subsequent cracking in the Oak Park defense that converted the blow into the winning marker broke up a great Suburban league battle between Morton and Oak Park at Cicero yesterday. Fvec, the first batter up in the seventh, cracked the initial pitch for three bases and cantered home on Bernard's error with the tally that gave Morton a 2 to 1 victory.

Dahlquist held Oak Park helpless and was robbed of a no hit performance when Bernard singled off the umpire's shins. Dahlquist struck out eight and only the surprisingly weak defense of his mates, who bobbled five times, made the losers dangerous.

Ferrette and Cromwall split the Oak Park slab assignment and were touched for only three bingles, Ferrette going the first six innings and holding Morton to two hits and one run. Score:

TONEY HOLDS RED SLUGGERS SAFE AND CARDS WIN

St. Louis, Mo., April 28. — Fred Toney allowed Cincinnati but four hits, and St. Louis took the odd game of the series today, 4 to 3. Blades hit over the left field fence in the third inning for his third homer of the season. The four bagger came off Luque with the bags empty. Jake Daubert, who suffered an attack of pneumonia early this year, was back on first base for the Reds. Score:

PILLETTE HURLS DETROIT 4 TO 1 WIN OVER BROWNS

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—Herman Pillette beat St. Louis for the first time in his major league career today, Detroit winning, 4 to 1. Elam Vangilder was hit freely and hard when hits meant runs, also allowing Veach's home run, doubles by Cobb, Haney, Heilmann, and Woodall. It was the eleventh consecutive game in which Heilmann has hit safely. Pillette wobbled only in the seventh, when singles by McManus and Severeid and a double by Gerber resulted in one run. DAILY EVENTS IN WILLIE KAMM'S LIFE

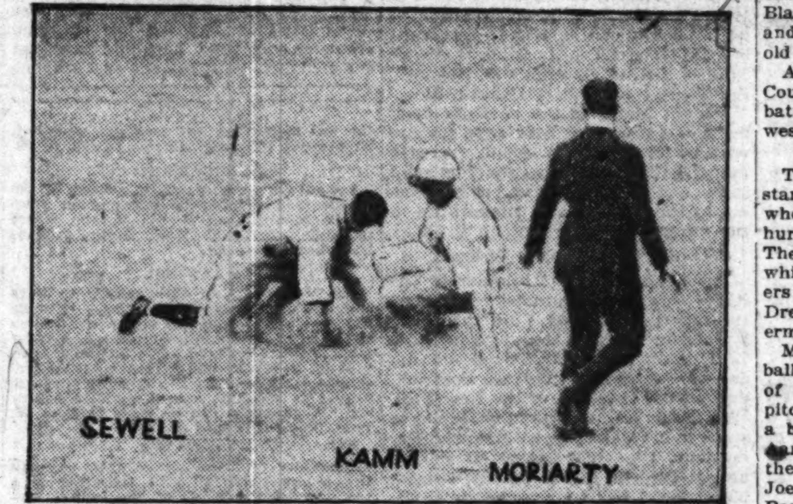
Willie Kamm, the $100,000 beauty, sliding back to first in the opening inning of yesterday's game with Cleveland, when the Indians endeavored to work a double play on him. Collins popped to Wamby who shot the ball to Guisto but not soon enough to catch Kamm, who had taken a big lead off the bag. Eddie Collins is at the left, Pitcher Boone is backing up the throw, and the gent at the right usurping the prerogative of the umpire is Coach Ed Walsh.

Kamm scoring in the third inning when Lutzke's throw to the plate hit him in the back and rolled to the stand. The photo shows Catcher Myatt turning in pursuit of the elusive pill.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]



Kamm shown on his arrival at second in a steal in the first inning. Sewell muffed Myatt's throw and it rolled to left field, but Kamm was so long in getting untangled at the bag that he lost a chance to go to third. Umpire George Moriarty at right.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Frank P. Jaszka, 2956 Haynes court, Chicago, was awarded $5.

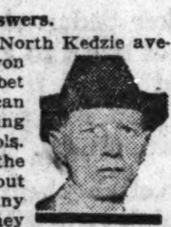
The Question.

What do you think of Commissioner Landis' endeavor to stop baseball pools?

Where Asked.

Clark at Washington street.

The Answers.



Harry Burton, 16 North Kedzie avenue, salesman.—I won $500 on a 60 cent bet last year, so I can hardly hold anything against baseball pools. Any infraction of the law is wrong, but there are so many larger things that they could turn their attention to that would do more good. It is a question whether baseball betting can be stopped.

George R. Moore, 3309 West Jackson boulevard, electrician. — Let Commissioner Landis take care of his baseball job; let the police take care of the baseball pools, and things will get along farther. There are too many heads butting in on that stuff. If Landis wants to stop baseball pools let him get back on the bench.

E. Verne Barnes, 209 North Lockwood avenue, office manager.—My experience in baseball pools has been that the fellow who sells the tickets is the bird that makes the money. Baseball pools are supported by fellows who need the money for something better. I think it would be a wonderful thing if Landis can stop these pools.

Andrew Carlsen, 1742 North Central Park avenue, machine shop foreman.—I am in favor of stopping these various pools. They take away the spirit of the other fellows who are trying to earn a living in a factory, or in any other commercial enterprise. A man can't work for his employer and think of baseball pools and gambling at the same time.

W. T. Jarrett, 549 West Washington street, production manager.—I am not personally interested, because I don't play the pools myself, and I wouldn't allow one to be operated in my factory. I don't believe employés can afford it.

CUBS TRY REDS TODAY; RAIN GIVES A DAY OFF

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 28.—[Special.]—The Cubs departed tonight for Cincinnati, where they open a four game series with Pat Moran's Redlegs tomorrow. Rain, that drenched this city all day, forced postponement of today's contest, and the Cubs left without having won a game here, the Pirates taking three straight.

Secretary Johnny Seys announced that the contest will be played on Aug. 29. This is the first posponed game on the Cub list. Today's rain dropped the mercury to below the 45 mark here, but President Barney Dreyfuss of the Pirates was unwilling to call the contest until the last minute, for the advance sale was far over the 12,000 mark, and it was evident that the attendance would have exceeded 25,000.

Pitcher George Stueland, who was called home to Sioux Falls, S. D., from Chicago last week by the death of his father, is slated to rejoin the Bears in Cincinnati tomorrow. The return of Stueland will give the Bears another hurler, who is seasoned and capable of starting a comeback.

Capt. Charley Hollocher, who has been more or less ill all spring, and who was forced to return to his home in St. Louis from the Catalina Island training camp, will join the Bears when they reach St. Louis Thursday, according to Manager Bill. Holly, however, is not expected to be of much service for about three weeks.

INDIANS SCALP RED SOX.

Justin Indians won a close one from the Red Sox yesterday at Justin park, 9 to 8. A tally in the last of the ninth gave the home team the victory. The Indians gathered eighteen hits off Kunz and Hines, but Ruzicka and Muzzy were touched freely in the pinches. Score:

Red Sox ....311 100 020—8 8 3
Indians ....201 302 001—9 18 1

Batteries—Kunz, Hines and Townsend; Ruzicka, Muzzy and Proverb.

SEMI-PRO TEAMS BLAST LID TODAY ON BALL SEASON

The third grand opening of the baseball season for Chicago will be staged this afternoon, when the semi-pros and amateurs formally launch their season. All the big parks will have regular opening day ceremonies with music and prominent citizens present.

The reorganized Normals will be back at their old stand, 67th and Racine, where they won a championship a few years ago. They will have the Romeos, one of the fastest traveling teams in Chicago, as visitors. The combination of Charles Giesman and Chris O'Brien have gathered a strong aggregation to wear the Normal uniform.

Johnny Overlock and Gob Buckeye are the hurlers, with Otto Jacobs catching. Joe Weiss, Sammy Maullin, Dutch Winkler, and Tommy Flynn are the infielders, while the outer gardens will be taken care of by Johnny Mohardt, Bill Harley, and "Beaut" Lebeau. The Romeos' battery will be Dick Cantwell and Jack Walsh.

Fairies Play Pyotts.

The Fairbanks-Morse of Beloit, last season's semi-pro champions of the middle west, will be the big attraction at Pyott field. The Fairies, with their big league staff of hurlers, would be able to hold their own in any league. Manager Chubb has Hippo Vaughn, Dave Davenport, and Win Noyes to choose from, with either Leo Murphy or Jack Hruska behind the bat.

Several new faces will appear on the Pyott team. George Pahlman, leading hitter last year in the Three Eyes, will be on first and Art Schwind on third. In the outfield, Ray Demmitt will be in Hank Butcher's old position in left and Tom McGuire will attempt to fill the shoes of Johnny Conlan in center. Paddy Driscoll, "Blankety" Blank, Adam Debus, Jimmy Baxter, and "Noisy" Murphy will be in their old places.

Acting Mayor Marty O'Brien and County Clerk Bob Sweitzer will be the battery on the first pitched ball. Other west side notables will be on hand.

Kenosha Helps Squares Open.

The Nash Motors of Kenosha, will start the ball rolling at Logan Square, where "Mayor" Charles Luck will hurl the ball that will start the season. The visitors have an all star lineup which includes such well known players as Al Wickland, Ollie O'Mara, Leo Dressler, Tom McGuire and Rip Hagerman.

Manager Callahan has almost a new ball club. Mike Cantwell, formerly of the Yankees, has been signed to pitch. He will have Ernie Dennis as a battery mate. Conroy, Meinke and Aaron will be in the infield, while the outfield will be taken care of by Joe Burke, George Halas and Hank Baude.

Tony Cermak will be on hand at Cermak park to see that his team gets away to a good start against the crack Joliet nine. Edward Ruzicka, formerly of Michigan, will do the pitching, with Manager Rudy Rehor catching. Art Ginners will play short. The business men of the southwest side, with a band of music, will parade to the park, which is located at 26th and Kostner.

On the far north side, Jack Campion will open his new park at Clark and Ridge, where the Blues will play the Gunthers. Long Tom Hughes or Phil Stremmel, with Muggins catching, will do the heavy work for the Blues. Black or Pape and Bud Cronin will be in the points for the Gunthers.

While the American Giants are in Kansas City playing the opening schedule in the Negro National league, Joe Green's Chicago Giants and Toledo will play league games at Schorling's. "Dicta" Johnson and Water Ball will be the opposing slabsters.

The Atkins & Freund team will open its new park at 50th and Oakley with the Chicago Firemen as the visiting attraction. Leverette and Dave Wallace will be the battery for the home team and the Fires will use Maager and Goggin.

McGuire Speeds Nash Motors Past Logan Squares, 1 to 0

Tom McGuire, with the all star Nash Motor team backing him, defeated the Logan Squares, 1 to 0, at the latter's park yesterday. McGuire held the losers to five blows that were too far apart to coin a tally. McGuire also was responsible for the only run of the game by hitting a double which scored Hayden in the seventh. Al Wickland, who got his start at the Square about fifteen years ago, was in left field for the visitors. Score:

Pyotts yesterday handed the Toledo club of the Negro National league an 11 to 0 trimming in a weird game at Pyott field. George (Legs) Pape went the route for the Pyotts and let the visitors down with four widely scattered hits, while his support was perfect and at times brilliant. In the sixth Collins of the colored team blew up completely when he walked three men in a row, after two were out, and hit Demmitt, forcing in a run. Pahlman's single scored two more and Murphy's circuit smash cleaned the bases, and seven runs were over. Score:

SARAZEN, HAGEN TRAIL BARNES AND HUTCHISON

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

JOHN F. KELLY was the spring robin in the golfing line at Jackson park yesterday, when he scored an ace at the eleventh hole. Normally this hole measures 294 yards, but was reduced to about 200 yards by the use of a temporary green and tee. His partners were W. A. Schultz, J. E. Schiller, and T. W. Farley.

The first ace in the first competitive event of the season at a private club was negotiated yesterday at Edgewater, W. J. Lawlor sinking his tee shot at the tenth hole, 120 yards.

Rye, N. Y., April 28.—[Special.]—The foreign bred school of golf represented by Jock Hutchison and Jim Barnes took all the honors today from the home bred team, Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen, in the first installment of the two day match for the special purse offered by Sir Stanley Cochrane at the Westchester Biltmore club.

WALTER HAGEN.

The victory gave the two foreign bred stars a margin of three points on the day's play and they require only one tomorrow to clinch the victory. The match today was decided on match play by teams; tomorrow the same combinations will meet in medal play, the point to go as follows: Two to the winner, one to the runner-up and one on the team aggregate. The short game of the home breds was 'way below par.

Barnes and Hutchison finished 6 up and 5 to play on the thirty-first hole, after winning the morning round. Hutchison and Sarazen were the outstanding figures in the morning with cards of 76 each, while both Barnes and Hagen were away off form and failed to break 80.

Barnes made an astonishing comeback in the afternoon session by winning three of the first five holes with birdies, while his partner dropped in another bird for a lead of 6 up on the twenty-third hole.

TWO SEMI-FINAL SOCCER MATCHES ON TODAY'S CARD

Semifinal soccer matches in the annual competition for the Peter J. Peel trophy are carded this afternoon, Swedish Americans meeting the Pullman Car works at Sparta-Union park, 27th street and Kostner avenue, and Harvey playing Young Men's Hebrew association at Lauterback's park, Cicero avenue and Roosevelt road. Both games at 3 o'clock.

At the outset of the competition no one would have had the temerity to predict that only one major league team would be left in the final four, but the luck of the draw brought several of the favorite teams together in the earlier rounds, and the only survivor was Swedish-American. The other three teams are from the Chicago District league, which rates second to the major league.

The Swedes are slight favorites over Pullman today, but the carbuilders have a number of veterans in their lineup who have played in previous cup finals. Among these are Christ Cartwright, Johnny Patterson, Pollitt and Black.

The only match outside of the cup games is an exhibition between the Olympias and Bricklayers at 47th avenue and 19th street, at 3 o'clock.

Woods and Waters

by BOB. BECKER

SPRING HAS CAME.

THE spring song of the robin is in the air, down the street about a half a block a flicker is broadcasting his clattering call, there is a towhee about twenty feet from me scratching away in the brush like a barnyard hen, and the spring flowers are poking their heads above the ground. Yes, sir, spring, [bless her] seems to be with us again, and maybe we aren't glad to see her!

But we don't have to look around for evidences of spring. Can tell that the welcome season is at hand by the way we're feeling. We've a hankerin' to loaf in some wooded spot—just to stretch out somewhere under the trees and watch the birds drift through the forest. And we have the desire to see the spring beauty, the bloodroots and some other early flowers that turn a spring woodland into a paradise. Last, but not least, we're wishin' to go fishin', and this is the most serious symptom of them all.

April is a tough month for the outdoorsman, especially for the fisherman. Gosh! what a stretch it is until May 1, when the trout season opens! However, it's only a few days until the boys will be wading the streams, wielding a rod and otherwise performing fitting rites in celebrating the opening day. Even though the opening day of the trout season brings relief to the fishing hungry outdoorsman, the tackle buying fever gets him and all the rest of us at this time of the year. When you want to go fishing and you can't—buy fishing tackle, seems to be the motto of the dyed in the wool angler, and so now the spending orgy is on.

And this stunt of buying more tackle does help when spring is in the air and a fellow has a hankerin' to go fishing. But it's funny, when you come to think about it, how we do behave when we hit a sporting goods store.

Although the wild eyed angler, his fever high, his conversation an incoherent mixture of such words as "Yes, sir, it's a beauty," "Got some big ones there last year," and "Honest, it weighed fully that much," may own a half dozen excellent rods, proven favorites on many a stream and lake, at this time of the year it makes no difference. He must have another. Such is the way this tackle fever works on him. Although his tackle box is filled with all kinds of lures and his fly book replete with beautiful, tempting products of the fly tier's art, he must have more. Yes, even though every bit of the storage and closet space at the house is occupied with fishing tackle [much to the wife's distress], the fishing fan must have more tackle. And, man, O man, how the money rolls away!

But who cares? It's a grand and glorious feelin' when the spring fever germ sinks its fever dealing harpoon into a fellow and there is nothing like buying tackle to alleviate the pain. And, after all is said and done, is there any sport that has more compensations than the fishing game? It's one that takes you out of doors, it's one that brings you close to Nature, it's one that requires skill, perseverance, patience, quick thinking, and stamina. However, I feel sorry for the angler who fishes for fish only. You know the kind. He never talks about anything except how many pounds he took in in one day from some lake. Or about the size of his killing on some stream. That's not all there is to the fishin' game. Cheery camp fires, good fellowship, placid waters, rushing brooks, gamey, fighting fish that are "given a chance," sporty tackle, getting next to Nature and learning "forgotten pieces"—that's fishing, which after all is just symbolical with good fun.

Badger Eight May Go East to Race This Year

Madison, Wis., April 28.—There is a possibility that the Wisconsin crew of oarsmen, if they're good enough, may be sent to the big national regatta at Poughkeepsie in June.

The athletic department in an announcement today, said that "should Washington be defeated in the meet on Lake Mendota," such a step might be taken.

"GOLD MASHIE" NEW CLASSIC OF GOLF AMATEURS

BY JOE DAVIS.

For many years the "gold racket" event at Tuxedo has been a classic, and now T. Suffern Tailer, the eastern sportsman who has played golf for twenty-five years, has given the golfers a similar tournament to be known as the "gold mashie" event. It will be played at the Ocean links, Newport, Sept. 1 and 2.

Mr. Tailer will invite twenty of the leading amateurs of the country to compete. They will play eighteen holes each day and the low scorer will receive a good mashie; the runner up will receive a silver one.

On Labor day the contestants will play in informal matches at the Ocean links, the Newport Golf club, and the new Bay links, and most of them will then go direct to Chicago for the national amateur championships.

To select the players Mr. Tailer will have the assistance of Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford, both former amateur champions.

Interscholastic Meet May 28-31.

The Interscholastic Golf association of the United States will hold its annual tournament May 28 to 31 at the Westchester-Biltmore Country club, Rye, N. Y. It is open to all students in private or public schools throughout the United States.

Play for the individual title will start with a qualifying round at thirty-six holes. The match play rounds will be at eighteen holes, with the exception of the thirty-six hole finals. In connection with the qualifying round, there will be the annual team championship for the St. Lukes trophy. Each school can enter as many players as it desires, the scores of the four lowest to count. The entry fee is $5 per man and can be sent to President S. L. Watson Jr. at the Milford school, Milford, Pa., or Secretary D. Bomann, the Tome school, Port Deposit, Md.

Dwight Meigs of the advisory committe has presented four cups for the winners of the team event. A gold medal will be given to the low man in the qualifying round and silver medals to the winners and runners up in the various flights.

Confirms Hutchison Release.

President Edward A. Engler of the Glen View club yesterday confirmed the report from New York that Jock Hutchison would go to the Coldstream, L. I., club next year. Jock did not ask for a release from his contract, but showed the offer of the New York club to Mr. Engler, and in order not to stand in the way of Jock's financial betterment, the club agreed to release him at the end of the present season. No thought has been given to Jock's successor, but there will be many applications for the position.

BEVERLY.

Beverly is the first of the private local clubs to issue its schedule, arranged by Chairman Arthur H. Haigh, Leonard Hicks and W. J. Corbett. Play will start next Saturday with a no alibi contest. Play for the club championship will start Sept. 8. The regular tees and greens were used yesterday and more than 100 members were out. W. Gibbons Uffendell had two rounds of 79.

MICHICAGO.

A week from next Saturday, officers of the Michicago Field club are planning an automobile excursion to Benton Harbor, where the club is located. Work on the grounds will start next week.

MAYWOOD.

The Maywood Golf club expects to have nine holes of its new course ready by June 15. The greens from the old course are being installed at the new course, which is located between Madison and Harrison streets, west of Manheim road. The clubhouse will be completed by June 15. Memberships are $100 plus war tax, and dues $65 plus war tax. Applications can be made to John W. True, phone Maywood 860-M.

EDGEWATER.

Edgewater members started their competitive season yesterday with fully 150 in a ball sweepstakes event. C. W. Jordan, 80—8—72, won the first prize, and had the best gross score thus far this year. H. T. Dillon, 83—10—72, was second in both gross and net figures. Other prize winners were F. H. Johnson, 92—14—78; J. R. Murphy, 87—8—79, and John P. Harding, 89—9—80.

GLEN VIEW.

Capt. Ernest F. Carter, Irish champion, paired with H. Russell Platt, former president of the club, defeated President Engler and Bill Hutchinson, 3 and 2, in a best ball foursome at 18 holes. Carter led with 78, Hutchinson had 81, while Platt and Engler each had 87. The course is in fine shape, the regular tees and greens being used. Several members also indulged in informal play.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Jack Patterson, the new professional, paired with George Hackl Jr., played in a foursome against C. W. Booth and E. Hoover Bankard. Scores were not obtainable, but Bankard wore a winning smile as he pulled up at the home green. Capt. Carter will be the guest of Bankard today in a foursome event.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

I'LL TAKE A CHANCE.

DID any one ever hear that expression used except as a prelude to something stupid?

During the last week one man played four successive deals, losing each by four or more tricks, but always using the fatal formula before his absurd bid. The statement in question is really an excuse which is used in advance of a bid which a player's judgment tells him is foolish.

A pretty duel between the west and south players occurred in the deal which follows:

West secured ten tricks.

The double by south was bad. Having strained his credit on his original bid of two clubs, he should have subsided for the remainder of the deal. The play, however, was clever throughout. North refused to cover the knave of hearts, although holding but one other besides the queen, as he knew the declarer must have both ace and ten.

But the declarer had no intention of finessing, as he could not afford to lose the lead except through the ace of diamonds. If, at trick six, the declarer had drawn the remaining trump in the south hand or had led the diamond from his own hand, he would have lost his contract. But the ace of diamonds was almost certain to be a singleton in the south hand and the declarer tried to coax south to use his losing trump on the diamond lead from dummy.

Had south trumped either at trick seven or trick nine, the declarer would have scored eleven tricks. It made no difference at trick ten whether south over-ruffed or again discarded, as it it was then impossible to save the game.

The next deal shows a remarkable instance of getting out of a pit which a player had digged for himself.

West secured ten tricks.

The east and west players were both over bidding their hands on account of the score, but when east doubled the bid of four hearts west knew that the opponents were almost certain to win and made a desperate bid on his five measly spades.

The outcome was surprising and the deal was not badly played by north and south, although the contract might have been defeated had south gone to clubs at trick three. He knew that even if west lost his contract the result would have been much better than at four hearts doubled.

BACHELOR OF SCIENCE DEGREE TO 33 ILLINI COACHING GRADUATES

URBANA, Ill., April 28.—Thirteen states are represented in the first class of the four year coaching course of the University of Illinois which will be graduated this year. Lads from 28 states are among the 250 registered in the course. That one of the leading state universities will award the degree of bachelor of science to thirty-three students for completing a course in coaching is a significant sign of the times. When the course was established four years ago it was an innovation, but Director George Huff believed that students in four years' time, taking not only athletic but scientific cultural subjects, could fit themselves for real service in the field of physical education.

As the first class prepares to graduate, some of the men already are under contract. The department of athletics has been asked for recommendations by more than 100 institutions.

The roster of the graduating class is almost evenly divided between Illinois and other states. Illinois has seventeen of the thirty-three seniors.

LEWAN MAKING GOOD.

Stanley Lewan, who played in the outfield for the Romeos, local semipro club, is going along in great shape with the St. Joseph, Mo., club, where he was farmed out by the Minneapolis club of the American association. In a game recently against Des Moines, the Chicagoan, hit safely five times, two of his hits being triples, both terrific drives.

In another game against Sioux City he landed two doubles.

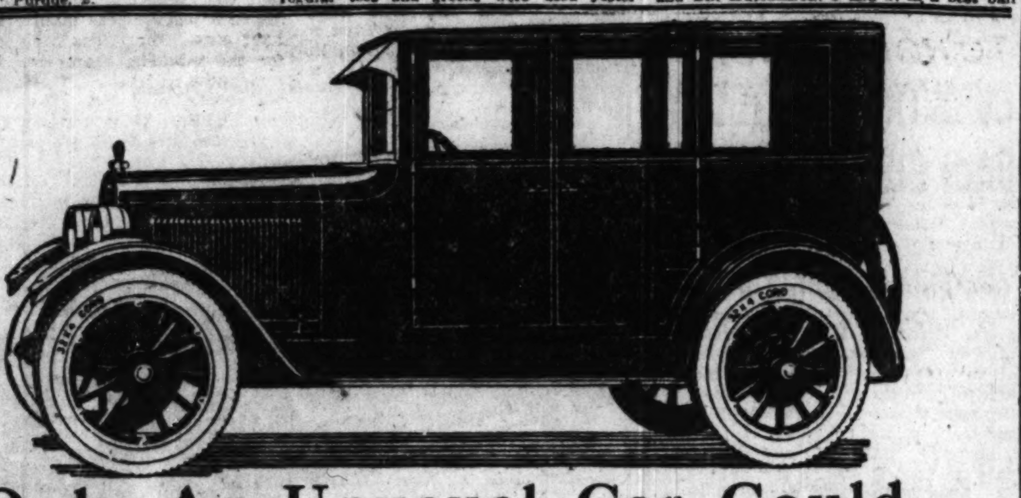
ONE YEAR WRITTEN GUARANTEE



Only An Unusual Car Could Carry This 1 Year Guarantee

The Gardner Four is truly the guaranteed car, for so far as a very thorough investigation can show it is the only automobile today that is guaranteed in writing by its manufacturer for one year.

The Gardner 5 Bearing Crankshaft

A feature found in no other make of four cylinder motor at any price.

On the road and in the hands of owners, the Gardner has proved its right to this title by showing how lightly time and distance touch an automobile so soundly built.

This one year guarantee expresses as nothing else could the strength and fitness of Gardner construction—the quality that forty years of fine vehicle building experience have put into this motor car.

Only because the Gardner Four is a really unusual automobile—unusual in the type of performance it delivers and unusual in the balanced value evident throughout—is it possible to pledge so definitely its ability to stand up under the pitiless test of year-round use.

As every motorist knows, an automobile that is sound in every part at the end of twelve months' driving has proved its lasting qualities. In guaranteeing the critical first year, therefore, Gardner is forecasting the long life of usefulness that can confidently be expected by every Gardner owner.

It is a further fact of decided interest to every intending car buyer that a car so well made and one capable of performance so remarkable as that of the improved Gardner can still be priced under $1000 at the factory.

Studebaker

THE well-built car and the poorly constructed car look very much alike on the salesroom floor. Paint and varnish can cover a multitude of weaknesses in closed car construction.

But you can't ride on the paint.

The superior product begins to prove itself on the first day of use and strengthens its proof every day thereafter. At the end of a year the one car is ready to be traded in at a big depreciation. The Studebaker may not even need a fresh coat of paint.

In a Studebaker Sedan the quality is built into the job. The body will not begin to rattle or squeak after thousands of miles of hard usage. It will continue to be comfortable and easy riding and will present a fine appearance month after month as when new.

The mohair velvet plush upholstery will not be worn "shiny," the windows will still fit tightly and operate smoothly and the fittings will still be firmly in place even after thousands of miles of use.

Studebaker's quantity production of cars of quality is responsible for the low price of this Sedan.

Four wide-opening doors. Eight-day clock. Quick-action cowl ventilator. Attractive coach lamps. Heater. Mohair velvet plush upholstery. Glare-proof visor and windshield cleaner. Thief-proof transmission lock. Dome light.

ONE WASHINGTON PARK RACE CLUB CHANGES NAME

BY FRENCH LANE.

Out of the mysterious silence of the Illinois and Chicago racing situation, came the announcement yesterday that one of the numerous Washington park organizations formed here within the last six months has incorporated under a new name. It plans to break ground immediately for a new racing plant.

The Chicago Business Men's Racing association is the name of the new club. It supplants the new Washington Park Breeders' association. The latter organization came into existence late last fall, soon after the revival meeting conducted at Hawthorne, and was sponsored by a group of citizens led by Judge Joseph E. Murphy, who had been presiding steward at Hawthorne.

To Carry Out Quiet Plans.

The original plans of the club to build a new racing plant at Riverdale park at 135th street on the south side and to have it ready for racing as early as next September, will be carried out, according to the announcement. It is the plan to start the organization and building work immediately regardless of any action on a racing bill in the general assembly.

Judge Murphy continues as one of the leaders and incorporators and has been voted the general managership; Attorney Albert Sabath has been made chairman of the organization and legal departments, with C. T. Essig as secretary. The finance committee has been announced as composed of the following members: Harry Cassady, William E. Dee, James I. Naghten, John Irwin, James Channon, John F. Barrett, and D. G. Rudy.

"Our organization has been marking time while all the proposed racing legislation was before the public and the state lawmakers," Judge Murphy announced. "But we believe the time has come for action if the efforts to revive the sport here are to succeed.

Fear Bill Will Be Buried.

"My experience in legislation makes me believe that even with a friendly legislature not many weeks away from adjournment, a bill introduced at this time might be buried in the calendar and could not be brought to final passage. I hope I am wrong in this.

"Our Washington Park Breeders' association charter will not be in active operation, for we do not wish to cross wires with the Chicago Washington Park club, which has been so active in the field to get favorable racing legislation. Our big Derby will not be called the American Derby.

"We have deferred in every way possible to the Chicago Washington Park club, and I feel that we have earned at least the moral if not the active support of its members."

Explain Springfield Delay.

The Chicago Washington Park club bill drawn up several weeks ago, and framed by many prominent breeders and racing people as the most ideal bill ever framed in this country, has not been introduced in either of the houses at Springfield, but will go before the state lawmakers shortly, according to the latest plans.

So much interest has been shown here in the Kentucky derby that the local racing situation has for a time at least slipped into the background. Latest estimates by railroad officials are that 15,000 Chicagoans will see the forty-ninth running of the rich classic in Louisville on May 19, if enough trains are available to handle such traffic. The Monon alone reported more than 3,000 reservations, up to and including yesterday.

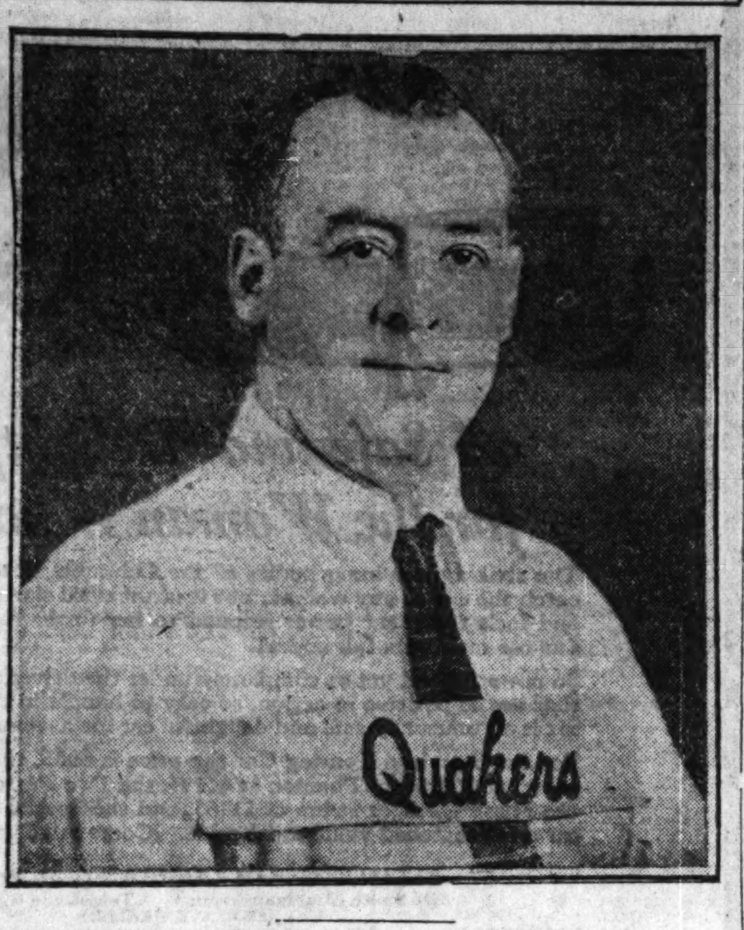
Derby Train Reservations.

Oscar Kuffer, president of the Logan Square A. C., has chartered a car on Sammy Wolff's special, which will be run over the Pennsylvania to the Kentucky Derby on May 19. Wolff has already filled five coaches with reservations. Reservations can be made at Oakes' cigar store, 153 North Clark street.

Willie Jackson Hurts Leg, Richie Mitchell Bout Off

Milwaukee, Wis., April 28.—The boxing bout between Richie Mitchell and Willie Jackson, planned for next Monday night, has been called off because of an injury sustained by Jackson today during his windup of training activities on the road. Jackson is said to have injured a leg.

BOWLING CHAMPION



Bill Knox Hangs Up Record Bowling Mark at A. B. C. Meet

Bill knocks 'em dead. The Philadelphia bowler who spread eagled the A. B. C. tournament at Milwaukee and established a world's record in all events, set a mark for the boys to shoot at for the next score of years.

Knox, in nine games knocked over 2,019 out of a possible 3,000 pins and, but for tough breaks in three games, probably would have set the record so high that it would have stood until some one double grooved an alley for a rival.

In the team event tough breaks held his score down to 618. He shot 686 in the doubles and 715 in the singles, winding up his amazing performance by grabbing a 279 in the third game of the singles with a perfect score save for a spare in the sixth frame.

In the nine games he scored one foul on the second frame of the first game of the team match, due to a slip. He had one railroad, made five errors and picked one cherry. In those historic nine games he had 67 strikes and 26 spares. He struck out in the third game of the team event, the second game of the doubles and the final game of his singles.

He would have had a perfect score in the final game of the singles but for the fact that one pin stuck, wabbled, almost fell and recovered its feet after a long stagger.

Itemized Score.

The itemized score of Knox's nine games gives the boys something to aim toward, if not at.

20,000 CHEER AS WILDERNESS WINS IN GREAT RACE

Havre De Grace, Md., April 28.—[Special.]—Wilderness, R. T. Wilson Jr.'s great colt, easily won the Chesapeake handicap here today and when he returned to the scales was cheered to the echo by 20,000 persons. It was a fine race, and on this performance the colt probably will go to the post in the $50,000 Preakness, which is run on May 12 at Pimlico, as the favorite.

Barbary Bush was second, with the Audley farm entry, The Clown, third. J. S. Cosden's Dunlin was a bad fourth. Wilderness earned $3,365. Wilderness ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 1-5.

Exterminator, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's gelding, failed in his attempt to beat Man o' War's American money-earned record of $249,465. Old Poison finished second in the Old Dominion purse, but was not disgraced.

The old gelding picked up the crushing impost of 132 pounds, conceding tons of weight to his opponents, and at the end was beaten by less than six inches. Exterminator now is $1,009 behind the record.

The winner turned up in Harry Payne Whitney's Chickvale, which was making his first appearance of the year. Paul Jones was third.

MICKEY WALKER FACES TOUGH FOE THURSDAY NIGHT

BY FRANK SMITH.

From riches to poverty almost describes the rate of the Chicago boxing fans. Last week there were three cards, two of which brought out the crowds, while this week there is only one promoter busy, which is quite enough every seven days.

On Thursday night at Dexter Park pavilion the fans hereabouts will get a glimpse of Mickey Walker, newly crowned king of the welterweights, and will witness a comeback effort on the part of Jack Britton, from whom Walker took the title.

Mickey will take on a tough foe in the person of Morrie Schlaifer, the Omaha mauler, who breaks into our midst with a record that is not to be sneezed at. We are tipped off by the followers of this Morrie boy that he carries a sock in either mitt, and that he is a go-getter from the tap of the bell.

Mickey in for Battle.

They tell us that Mickey is in for a trimming, but the only convincing way of licking a champion around these diggings is to knock him for a row of hatpins. Whether Schlaifer is capable of turning this trick remains to be seen.

Britton faces Joe O'Hara, who has made a host of friends hereabouts by his stellar work in the few battles he has had. O'Hara sails around in a pair of No. 11 boats, but seems to be able to maneuver them in such a way that one does not foul the other as he attempts to put a starboard blow on the earboard of his adversary.

He will stack up against a veteran who has been taking them coming and going for nigh on to eighteen years. If Jack has gone back, then O'Hara may be able to make a name for himself. On the other hand, if Britton is even as good as he was when he lost to Walker, then Mr. O'Hara is in for a rough evening.

Tremaine to Meet Levine.

These two ten round windups should be good enough for the average show, but Promoter Mat Foley will throw Carl Tremaine and Hilly Levine into the bull ring for ten sessions or less, all depending on the ability of one or the other to put over an early wallop to the chin of the other.

A fourth ten round bout will find Patsy Flannigan and Georgie Butch exchanging rights and lefts. There is a title at stake, according to the press agent of the show. It is the championship of the Twenty-seventh Ward Democratic club, of which both are members. Ald. Touhy will referee this bout.

Promoter Foley is trying to match up another good pair of boxers for a fifth ten round fracas.

Foley announces that tickets are on sale at the usual places and that they are going rapidly. He urges every one to get aboard early if they want to make the round trip to Dexter Park pavilion.

LOCAL CUEISTS TO HOLD ANNUAL DINNER MAY 8

The seventh annual dinner of the Chicago Billiard league will be held May 8 at the Hotel La Salle, when the William J. Blake, Julian T. Fitzgerald, and Hemmer trophies will be presented. Robert M. Sweitzer will be toastmaster.

Champion Defeated in Amateur Balk Line Play

George W. Nelson last night defeated Champion Bob Campbell in the state amateur 18-2 balkline billiard tournament at Mussey's amphitheater by 250 to 201, in thirty-six innings. Al Fleig won his match from W. Klensch, 250 to 178, in forty-seven innings. Tomorrow night Campbell meets James Peabody, former champion, and Barrett plays Fleig.

GOLFER TO SHOW EYES DON'T COUNT

Jack Jenkins, former Indiana professional, who now is conducting an all year golf school at 3137 West 63d street, in partnership with Jess Steinway, is an iconoclast when it comes to tearing down the theory that the eye should be kept on the ball.

To prove his doctrine, Jenkins at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Marquette park course, will give a demonstration of driving while blindfolded.

Senn Wins Triangular Meet from Gary, Morton

GARDINI SEEKS ANOTHER FLING AT GEORGE CALZA

When George Calza, popular Italian grappler, steps into the ring tomorrow night to meet Jack Linow in the feature of Doc Krone's wrestling show, Renato Gardini will be at the ringside to issue a challenge to his countryman. Gardini still is smarting under the sting of defeat by Calza in Boston. Renato's recent victory over Dick Daviscourt, together with his winning one fall from Champion Ed Lewis, entitles him to a return match, according to his friends.

Promoters have tried to match the pair for the undisputed Italian heavyweight championship, but some technicality always has arisen. A match between them would be an attractive event at the present time, considering the popularity of both with their countrymen.

Calza Is Favorite.

Calza anticipates little trouble defeating Linow, who is looked upon as a trial horse and crowd pleaser. Jack is rough and strong, rather than scientific. On the other hand, the Italian is improving with every match and is expected to develop into a strong championship contender.

Charley Cutler, another trial horse of the mat game, will take holds with Charley Hansen in a finish match, best two in three falls. The other bout will bring William Demetral, the Greek into the ring with Cyclone Byrnes an eastern heavyweight. Promoter Krone announces the prices of tickets will be $1 and $2 and reserved seats are on sale at the usual places.

Poggi in First Match Here.

Nazzarano Poggi, newest Italian wrestling star, announces he is out after two titles, both heavy and light heavy. The "little giant" won the championship of the two classes of the American expeditionary forces. Chicago mat fans will see the young soldier battler in action Tuesday night in his first important local bout at Italian hall, North Clark and Erie streets. His opponent is Sam Clapham, British heavyweight, who himself was at the front during the time of the great championship tournament in Pershing stadium, but because of illness failed to oppose the Italian for the laurels.

A semi-final of strength has been added to the bill for a one fall encounter between Nic Lutze, north side German favorite, and Toney Hatches, Lithuanian strong man. They are heavyweights.

The promoters also are after Carl "Doc" Furness to meet a worthy foe. Tickets for this show are now on sale at Italian hall, at prices ranging from $1 to $2 for the ringside seats.

RAYMOND BROS. ROLL INTO LEAD

The Raymond Bros. No. 1 featured the rolling last night in the Industrial bowling tournament which is finishing its third week at the Randolph, by taking first place in the main event with 2,902 pins. Tony Jensen set the pace for the would-be champions with 663 pins and a high game of 244. R. Pehdson contributed 626. Two quintets from the Florsheim company, the Parkways and Ormonds, tied for fifth place with 2,794.

In the minor events V. Larson and E. Carroll showed the way in the doubles with 1,161 and in the singles G. Nehr was top man with 628. Scores:

FOURNIER SIGNS UP WITH BROOKLYN; TO MAKE DEBUT TODAY

NEW YORK, April 28.—[Special.]—Jacques Fournier, former Chicago White Sox first baseman, of late years with the St. Louis Carninals, will make his first appearance with the Brooklyn Robins tomorrow in their game against Philadelphia. Fournier has obtained a contract for two years at a salary said to be $8,000. The Brooklyn club several months ago traded Hi Myers to the Cardinals for the big Frenchman, but the latter refused to accept terms until President Ebbets of the Brooklyn club talked with him over the long distance phone yesterday.

In making the announcement today of the belated acceptance of terms by Fournier, President Ebbets confirmed the report of his $100,000 offer to Jack Dunn of the Baltimore Orioles for Joe Boley, premier shortstop of the minor leagues.

The Old Copyreader

"Many a story is hopelessly written, but the story of life is hopelessly rotten."

THE ALIBI.

There are days when all seems futile
That I write; when there's no reas'ning
Though there's rhyme; when thoughts inutile
Furnish stale and tasteless seas'ning
To the ballads I moil over—
Then I read the gifted brothers
Of the talent, and discover
There are others.

I am told that Browning couldn't
Always tell just what he meant by
What he wrote; I'm sure Poe wouldn't Claim he set forth his intent by
Everything he did; and Kipling—
Sturdy Kipling, strong and breezy—
Oft perversified a stripling,
Very cheesy.

Shakespeare, while the hot potato,
Who forever will be quoted,
Quite deserved a ripe tomato
For some humor that he floated;
Field and Burns and even Riley,
Than whom there were none so sassy,
Sometimes slipped us phrases slily
Not so classy.

So be patient when the muses
Are not kind to yours truly;
When poetic pep refuses
To respond; when mood unruly
Cramps my comedy, if any,
Howe'er I regret or rue it—
Just remember there were many Beat me to it.

DROP SHIPMENTS

If you can do the selling and arrange with your source of supply to make shipments direct to the purchaser, we will finance such shipments by paying the manufacturer for his merchandise as soon as it has been shipped. With only a small investment required on your part to carry your own overhead, you can build up as large a business as your selling ability permits. We invite an interview to discuss this service.

Manufacturer, Why Restrict Your Sales?

The working capital you have tied up in accounts receivable makes it hard to plan for increased sales and increased profits. The more business you do the more hampered you are by your accounts receivable. We cash accounts receivable. If your customers do not take advantage of the cash discount you offer and our charge is no greater than this discount, then by cashing your accounts with us your business is on the same basis as if all of your customers paid you within ten days. You act as our agent and collect these accounts in the usual way without disturbing your relations with your customers.

Find $71,000,000 Deficit in New Bond Issue Plan

Survey Shows 26 Counties Will Foot Big End of Bill.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Seventy-one million dollars' worth of Illinois state roads are and will continue to be blue sky instead of gray concrete under Gov. Len Small's $100,000,000 road bond issue scheme if it passes.

Even the mileage of the proposed localized roads system that can be built with the fund will lack bridges and heavy grading work.

Twenty-five Illinois counties in addition to Cook county will, under the bond revenue agreement, pay 28.57 per cent of the total cost of the secondary system of connections and byroads, and will receive in return but 18.35 per cent of the mileage built.

These are the conclusions announced by engineers and transportation experts last week after an exhaustive study of the new routes introduced into the legislature through the new bond issue bill and shown on the exclusive state map published by The Tribune.

ALL interests engaged in the great state highway debate, which has eclipsed all other legislative issues of the present session, formed an entirely new conception of administration financing plans after completing a detailed study of the 119 new highways promised in return for the $158,000,000 in bonds and interest demanded in the Small road bill.

Computation of the mileage in the proposed routes, engineers announced, shows that about 4,500 miles of pavements are contemplated by the second bond issue. The department of public works in a recent official statement declared that there will be 1,200 miles of the $60,000,000 bond issue roads left uncompleted when the present funds are exhausted. This will leave a total of 5,700 miles to be built by the $100,000,000 issue.

To finish the 5,700 miles at Gov. Small's road building figure of $30,000 a mile will cost $171,000,000. In the building of state roads, the administration has based its construction costs on the actual laying of concrete pavements. As a rule the contracts for necessary heavy grading work and the building of bridges have been let separately and not as a part of the $30,000 a mile deadline. Contractors declare that much of the mileage remaining to be built on the $60,000,000 system includes the "difficult" roads, heavy grades and like engineering hazards which could not be completed under the economy figure.

With the slide rule computations as a basis, good roads men of the state generally have concluded that something more than $71,000,000 worth of the new roads will remain promises if the $100,000,000 is voted.

A further study of the new mileage promised to counties shows that twenty-five counties outside of Cook will be called upon to foot the lion's share of the secondary highway bill as compared to nineteen which are paying for neighbors' roads under the $60,000,000 building plan, auto associations announced. These counties pay 28.57 per cent of all of the automobile license fees which would retire the new bonds. They have been promised 18.35 per cent of the road mileage in the governor's bill. The open handed counties and their comparative percentages follow:

	Pct. in fees.	Pct. of mileage.
Adams	1.16	1.08
Boone	.42	.21
Champaign	1.76	.67
Clark	.42	.30
Coles	.74	.64
Crawford	.65	.50
DeKalb	1.03	.90
Fayette	.31	.24
Grundy	.46	.39
Kane	1.92	.87
Knox	1.05	.97
La Salle	2.10	.83
Lawrence	.52	.20
Macon	1.37	1.27
McLean	2.07	1.28
Menard	.30	.25
Moultrie	.35	.21
Peoria	2.27	1.26
Rock Island	1.75	1.31
Sangamon	2.02	1.63
Shelby	.63	.48
Stephenson	.94	.92
Vermillion	1.70	.35
Williamson	.63	.35
Winnebago	2.00	.78

But ten counties of the state now have all of the mileage awarded them under the $60,000,000 bond issue plan, have their roads paved, or all under contract, according to the latest progress map issued by the state highway department.

FIRST AID TO TRAFFIC

Some 750,000 automobiles in New York and millions of pedestrians have found that they can share street intersections 50-50 and both gain time under the safety arrangement. This is a view of 5th avenue and 42d street. Four policemen are stationed at that intersection, one on each sidewalk line, to see that pedestrians observe the traffic signals. Compare the scene with that at State and Madison at almost any hour of a work day.

French Athlete Enters Mount in Hoosier Classic

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 28.—The first entries from France for the international 500 mile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway have arrived, with Pierre de Viscaya, wealthy French sportsman, naming three Bugatti cars for the Hoosier event.

The announcement of the entry of the Bugattis followed closely on the heels of the information that the company making the German Mercedes cars had signified its intention of starting three mounts in the historic five century grind.

Bugatti cars are practically unknown in America, although on two occasions they have been driven at Indianapolis. However, the Bugatti team has been showing its tires to contenders in European racing events for the last two years with no little success.

Pierre de Viscaya, who entered the cars and who will head the Bugatti team, is 29 years old and has been driving racing cars since 1913, when he began participation in amateur hill climbing contests. Along with being a consistent racing pilot, Pierre is a champion tennis player, holds the fencing championship of Alsace-Lorraine, and is an excellent sprinter.

During the war he was first an infantryman and then an aviator. Released at the armistice, De Viscaya enthusiastically jumped into automobile racing. At Le Mans he took part in the 1920 light car road race and was leading in his Bugatti when, in the excitement of the pits, Ettore Bugatti, designer and builder of the French racing cars, began to unscrew the radiator cap of the car.

With great severity the French referee ruled the car out of the race because of the technical ruling barring ane one but pilot or mechanic from working on the car during the course of the race.

Motorize Farms.

Motor trucks are being increasingly used in the rural sections of the country. The survey of the United States just completed by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in collaboration with the local county agents has brought out the fact that there are 136,206 motor trucks on farms in the 1,218 counties which they survey. If the 40 per cent of the total counties which responded are typical, the total number of motor trucks on farms for the entire country is 348,000.

Missouri reported 13,803 motor trucks, Pennsylvania 12,631, Iowa 7,318.

List price of the cars will remain the same, $2,685 where trade-ins are required. The net price of the models, purchased outright without a trade-in, will be $1,985.

Auto Interests Issue Protest Against Taxes

LIMITATION of taxation on automobiles to the amounts necessary for the maintenance of improved highways and the administration of state motor vehicle departments with the state as the sole taxing agency is advocated by national motor organizations. The American Automobile association, the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers' association, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the National Automobile Dealers' association, and the Rubber Association of America all voice this opinion in a recent report.

Representatives of these five national organizations, after a careful study of the taxing situation in all parts of the United States, declare that federal, state, and municipal lawmakers and governing bodies are turning to motor vehicle manufacture, sale, and use as fertile fields for raising a big share of the annual revenues needed to finance governmental activities, and in doing this are placing special taxes on the automobile which are rarely based upon sound theories of economics or equity.

The committee contends that no money derived from the special taxation of the motor vehicle should be spent for maintenance of highways unless such highways are located where the highway transportation needs of the state require and unless such highways are built of materials and in a manner to meet these needs. It is pointed out that every tax assessed against an automobile, with the exception of the personal property tax, is a special tax and the automobile is subjected to a greater percentage of these kind of taxes than any other one class of property.

Development of good roads, they say, and their maintenance during the days of the animal drawn vehicle were financed through the expenditure of money taken out of the general purse, the lawmakers holding that the whole people benefited by the expenditure of money for such purposes. With the advent of the automobile, they declare, this view gradually changed until today every legislator with a pet road building scheme for his own community plans to foist additional taxes on automobiles throughout the state in order to raise the necessary money.

The conference committee regards such a theory as unwise economically and unfair and unjustly hampering to the logical and legitimate growth to which the motor vehicle is entitled. It believes that the best interests of all concerned will be best served by general taxation for highway construction and special taxation of motor vehicles for highway maintenance.

Original "Week."

The seventh annual "Bicycle week" is being observed as a country-wide demonstration of the many and varied benefits to be obtained by old and young people through the use of a bicycle.

This is the seventh successive year in which the joys of wheeling have been brought to the attention of the general public in effective and more or less spectacular manner. "Bicycle week" was practically the forerunner of the special week idea for the emphasizing of the sterling characteristics of a commodity, and the present wide cycling activity in the United States is due to a considerable degree to this annual spring demonstration.

New Survey Shows Steady Work on Dunes Highway

WHILE the work of completing the paving of the Dunes highway between Gary and Michigan City is progressing, there is little hope that the road will be finished and open for use before the middle of July.

A complete survey of the highway has just been made by the Chicago Motor club's road surveyor, who has talked with engineers and contractors to learn exact conditions as they exist and what the motoring public may expect.

From Gary east to Miller about 2,500 feet of pavement is now in; that is, from the eastern edge of Gary on what would be 5th avenue if extended. About 5,000 feet remains to have surface concrete poured, and as the average work shows 300 feet a day it is expected the road will be open June 20. From Miller north to the lake the branch road will not be finished before Aug. 1.

East of Miller to Baileytown there are 1,500 feet now in and 2,200 feet will be opened about May 21. This will connect the concrete laid last year and form a stretch of 3.3 miles.

The contractor will then move his construction outfit to the east end of the concrete and work east to a point near Wilson station, then move to Baileytown, from which point he will work back west to Wilson station. The concrete on the whole job should be completely poured by July 15 providing all rights of way are secured. There are two cases still pending in the courts.

The 2d street bridge over the river going east out of Michigan City is still closed and probably will not be in use this year. In the meantime a well marked detour has been laid out over 6th street.

Sell Own Cars.

Dealers are announcing that many motorists are themselves selling their used cars before purchasing new ones. This is helping not only to take care of the so-called used car problem, but is also bringing into the motor purchasing class a large number of persons who would not be in for years later. The scheme should be encouraged in every section of the country.

Advance Warning.

Police officers in Cleveland are conducting a series of lectures in the public schools on "Being Careful in Traffic." Careful instructions are given concerning the dangers of playing in the streets, carelessly crossing highways on the way to and from school and attempting to steal rides on the rear of street cars and automobiles.

And Once They Thought The World Was Flat

The Incident of Columbus and the Egg

WHEN Columbus was before the geographical council endeavoring to secure support for his expedition; a skeptic scoffed, "You can no more sail around the world than you can stand an egg on end."

Then Columbus showed his originality of mind. Securing an egg, he brought it down sharply onto the council table and it remained vertical.

Simply further proof that success and progress have always been due to open minds. What seemed impossible yesterday is accomplished today.

And so today Cole, with an economic idea as sound as was Columbus' theory, has at one stroke removed the waste and extravagance in automotive merchandising by eliminating the "Trade-In" evil.

COLE Merchandising Plan

WHEN Columbus set sail with his little expedition of three ships and eighty-eight men, it was with prophesies that he would disappear over the edge of a flat world.

¶ Two months and nine days later he had discovered the New World, proved his conviction that the world is round, and established one of the most important facts in History.

Now Cole Proves That Automobile Prices Can Be Lowered Without Sacrificing Quality

When Cole conceived and announced the Plan to sell Cole Aero-Eights at a net price instead of a list price, it was as revolutionary an idea as was that of Columbus 531 years ago.

Accustomed to high distribution costs, which have dominated America's third largest industry by an economically unsound practice, many were slow to appreciate the fundamental soundness of the Cole Merchandising Plan.

But in less than 60 days, thanks to the speed of modern thought and news, the public, the press and financial world enthusiastically endorsed the plan.

The Cole Plan has proved that a quality car can be sold at a price never before deemed possible, simply by removing an extravagant waste.

Whether or not you have an old car, remember that Cole saves you from $800 to $1000 by his Merchandising Plan. Consult your local Cole Dealer and let him show you just how this is done.

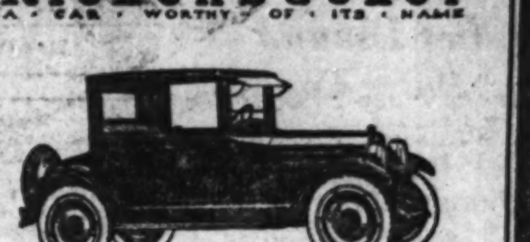
Rickenbacker
A • CAR • WORTHY • OF • ITS • NAME



It Invariably Outsells Because It DOES Outperform

The Rickenbacker tandem flywheel, plus the special crankshaft design, eliminate all periods of vibration—a Rickenbacker exclusive feature.

Also, the air cleaner is a valuable Rickenbacker feature. This invention clarifies and purifies the air before it enters the cylinders. All dust, dirt and sand, which get into the ordinary motor, do not get into the Rickenbacker motor. Consequently, cylinder walls, piston rings, bearings, etc., remain like new.

Still another advanced development is the differential brake equalizer which prevents skidding, makes for greater safety, preserves the life of your brake linings, tires and entire mechanism.

A few minutes at the Rickenbacker wheel will be a revelation to you. The Rickenbacker Six is the most advanced value on the market today.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., April 28.—[Special.]—Leaders in the automobile industry have, for the moment, forgotten traffic conditions, record outputs, and thousands of incoming orders, and are trying to decide whether or not it will become necessary in the very near future to announce an increase in the price of their production.

Forebodings of such a movement are reflected in the attitude of tense expectancy that right now prevails in motor circles. Those most interested, which means the heads of the great industry, are "sitting tight" and trying to be reticent on the subject, and it is what they leave unsaid that leads one to believe that, individually and collectively, they are giving the matter serious thought. According to statements from some a little more bold than others, an increase all along the line may be decided upon within a very short time—possibly along about May 1.

Every indication points to a probable advance in the price of motor cars, especially the better makes. All materials entering into the makeup of an automobile have advanced sharply during the last few months along with the cost of labor. An increase from 120 per cent to 200 per cent has been made in the essentials, but the prices of the finished product have not been changed with the exception of two or three cases. Skilled labor is at a premium and practically unobtainable. However, the leading factories are employing every means to maintain present prices as long as possible.

On the other hand, it is said that not one manufacturer of automotive vehicles wants to see prices advance. They are confident that an advance would do them no material good, for with the announcement in the price of cars would follow one in the price of material, parts, and labor. The manufacturer would then be no better off, he believes, and would meet with a greater sales resistance during the summer months, which is normally not the greatest buying season.

Meanwhile, production is attaining new levels. Records made today are broken tomorrow as insistent demand taxes the facilities of factories. In Detroit alone more than 10,000 automobiles and trucks are made every twenty-four hours, 40 per cent of the city's male population being employed in one or the other of Detroit's thirty-seven automobile plants and the scores of accessory factories.

One advance was made during the last week when the Hupp officials came out with a statement that a revision of prices had been necessary, ranging from $50 to $85. The possibility of an increase of Dodge Brothers can be gathered from a statement made by President Haynes, who announced that their business for the last three months was well in excess of the same period of 1922; that wages and material costs have constantly increased, and if continued, price increase will be inevitable.

Much of the same opinion is voiced by President Jewett of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car company, who says raw material costs have been steadily increasing since the first of the year. It has been a gradual increase, and up to a short time ago has caused comment. However, its pressure is now being seriously felt, and there must be either an increase in the price of the finished goods or quality will suffer. This company is producing about 5,000 cars per month.

"The real barometer of the automobile business is the steel industry," says President Everitt of the Rickenbacker Motor company. "Steel prices have gone up, and it is therefore natural to assume that when the automobile manufacturer goes into the next period he will find that the costs have increased, and it may be necessary to increase the price of automobiles to maintain a safe margin of profit. Rickenbacker prices are the same today as they were about fifteen months ago when the car was first announced, and while it may be necessary to increase the price of our product, we will do so only under the most extreme pressure."

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question F. J. Chana, 2229 South 59th court, Cicero, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

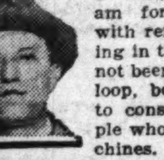
Are you for or against the new auto law enforcement campaign?

Where Asked.

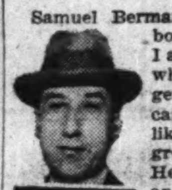
Clark at Randolph street.

The Answers.

Anton Zeman, 2612 South Springfield avenue, attorney—I am in favor of it. Autoists have no right to park their cars in the loop for any length of time suiting their convenience. I am in favor of having cars parked outside the loop entirely Under the best regulations the loop will be a congested center, and any effort made to relieve this condition should have the hearty support of the public.

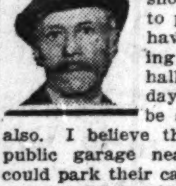


Abel Lavin, 1613 South Ridgeway avenue, salesman — I am for it, especially with reference to parking in the loop. I have not been parking in the loop, because I prefer to consider other people who don't have machines. This helps to give autoists who must use the loop a better chance, and helps the pedestrian to get around with a greater degree of comfort and safety. I believe every autoist should willingly abide by these restrictions for the greater good of all.



Samuel Berman, 605 Independence boulevard, salesman — I am against it. A man who has a car likes to get all the pleasure he can out of it, and he likes to put it to the greatest possible use. He is entitled to this, and I don't think the law should curtail his liberties in this respect. If they think it necessary to do that, let them build subways.

Henry J. Klahre, 212 East Ohio street, contractor—Absolutely yes. We had laws enough, and good ones, but they were not enforced. This clearing the streets of parked autos during the busy hours had become an absolute necessity. Now what they ought to get after is the "slow traveler"; that is, the autoist who trails down the center of the boulevard at a ten mile gait. Make him keep to the right, so that he can be passed on the left without danger of accident.



Edward J. Heidlicka, corporation counsel of Berwyn, Ill.—I am for it. Cars should not be allowed to park in the loop. I have seen cars standing in front of the city hall square for half a day. Speeding should be stopped in Chicago, also. I believe there ought to be a public garage nearby where people could park their cars and be sure that they wouldn't be stolen. There is a growing demand for such a garage.

TWIN CITIES.

Dayton, O., and Houston, Tex., has one motor vehicle to every four persons.

Interesting, If True.

Stories of canine intelligence would fill a large volume, if not an entire library. Usually in these stories a dog can do everything but talk—few of them ever related to a pup that was literate and believed in signs, as did the following story in the Cosmopolitan Magazine:

"On the main street of a village in southern California a little woolly dog appeared with a bone in his mouth. He was bent on burying the bone, and to that end attempted to scratch a hole in the pavement without, of course, making any impression in its hard surface.

"From street to street he went with the bone in his mouth, stopping at intervals to scratch furiously at the pavement, until he finally arrived at the corner of a street where a new sign had been erected.

"A resident of the town saw the little pup gaze earnestly at the sign for a few minutes, and then, with the bone firmly clenched between his teeth, he darted off up the street and was still going at top speed as far as the man could see him.

"A moment later the resident looked at the sign. It read:

"'Six miles to a dirt road.'"

Offers Air Service.

"Until such time as there is an air service station in every city and town, Rickenbacker distributors will gladly render first aid to any cross-country aviator," is the interesting announcement just made by Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, American ace of aces and vice president of the automobile company which bears his name.

"I learned on my several cross-continent air journeys what lack of quick and adequate service means," he adds. "At times we suffered hours of delay where minutes would have sufficed had we but known where to telephone for help."

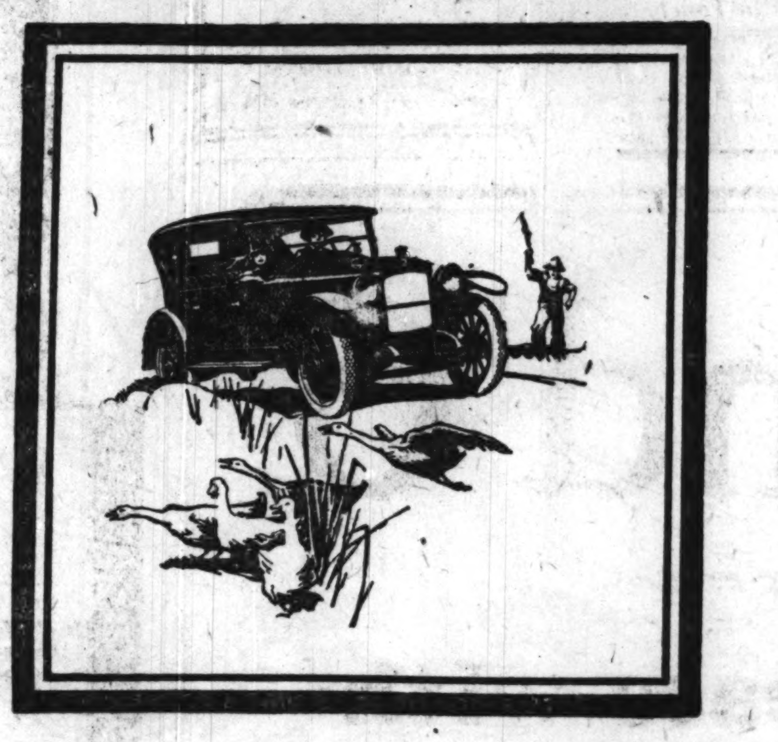
Amazing to Those Who Know Costly Cars



Most persons who know costly cars well, are amazed when they learn how closely Hupmobile construction parallels that of the most expensive cars.

The truth is that many Hupmobile production processes are more expensive.

They must be, or Hupmobile would not mean motor car economy, and motor car long life, to the pronounced extent it means both today.

Wallace to Mold Fate of Lincoln Highway in West

U. S. Asked to Aid Fight for Improvement in Utah.

THE fate of the Lincoln highway as a transcontinetal route linking New York with San Francisco is trembling in the balance. The question of whether or not the road shall be built west of Salt Lake City, Utah has at least reached the ultimate authority—the secretary of agriculture, who is empowered by congress to correlate interstate highways.

The Lincoln Highway association, with headquarters in Detroit, which laid out the route in 1913, before the existence of a federal authority and before there were state highway departments in most of the western states, has spent $950,000 in ten years in the promotion and development of the highway. The road has become the most important interstate thoroughfare of its length in the union, and has been generaly improved from New York to Salt Lake City, a distance of 2,450 miles.

Estimates of 1923 traffic, made by the areas it will traverse, show that some 60,000 cars carrying some 240,000 people will traverse the west on the Lincoln way, spending in the aggregate between Cheyenne, Wyo., and the Pacific coast more than $25,000,000. The construction and proper maintenance of the Lincoln highway in the west has thus become a question of real importance, not only to travelers from every section, but particularly to the areas anticipating the business of these travelers.

Every state through which the Lincoln highway passes between the Atlantic and the Pacific has made the famous route a portion of its federal aid system, with the exception of Utah. Utah has refused to incorporate that section of the highway between Salt Lake City and the western Utah line in its federal aid system, such action precluding the proper completion and maintenance of that section of the road across the Great Salt Lake desert connecting with the Nevada line and, in effect, making Salt Lake City the western terminus of the road.

Utah wishes to abandon completely that link. As the road connects with the main central route across Nevada, that state is naturally desirous of its prompt improvement. Nevada citizens, chambers of commerce, civic and commercial organizations of all kinds, and her officials, including county commissioners, the state highway commission, the governor and the legislature, have urged upon Utah without success the inclusion of the Lincoln highway in her federal aid system and the completion of the road which was indorsed in 1913 by then Gov. William Spry and in 1918 by then Gov. Simon Bamberger.

In 1918 Utah accepted $125,000 contributed by the Lincoln Highway association and spent it, together with some $80,000 more of state funds, in starting the construction of a satisfactory highway across the Great Salt Lake desert. That improvement has never been completed. The state did not have sufficient funds to complete it during Gov. Bamberger's administration. But the federal highway act, passed in November, 1921, made additional large sums available to Utah from the United States treasury, and would have permitted the completion of the last important gap in the road 3,305 miles long. However, the present administration of Utah refuses to build the road. Abandonment of the work already accomplished on the Lincoln way will mean that it will rapidly become totally impassable, thus blocking all traffic headed for the Pacific coast on its route.

If Secretary Wallace follows the wishes of the legislature of Nevada, as formally expressed, the Lincoln highway will be saved as a connected, central route from coast to coast.

NEW MOUNTAIN ROAD PLANNED AS FEATURE OF COAST SYSTEM

REDLANDS, Cal.—Formal proceedings calling for highway construction in Bear Valley to the extent of $165,000 have been started by the board of supervisors acting on a resolution presented for the Big Bear Lake boulevard. The property owners will be assessed for the highway will rim the lake entirely.

It is planned to start work in the spring and complete it this season.

The highway will be the best mountain boulevard in the west. It will be eight-inch macadam and eighteen feet wide. The character of the soil and the heavy hauling make necessary the heavy pavement. It is also planned to install an electric ornamental lighting system along the boulevard.

Always in Touch.

To keep policemen in touch with central offices when tracing criminals, several automobiles used by the flying squad of the Scotland Yard criminal investigation department in London are now equipped with radio sets.

Market Looks Up.

It is expected, says Vice Consul Frederick O. Bird, Beirut, in a report to the department of commerce, that the motor vehicle market in Syria will recover from its temporary lull caused by the stringency of the market and overstocking by dealers, and that sales will be unprecedented during the coming spring and summer. The American car is now firmly entrenched in this market, 74 per cent of the total registration of 1,276 cars made unofficially on Dec. 28, 1922, in the Beirut consular district, which makes up the larger part of the Syrian market, comprising American makes.

ROCK THE CAR.

When the gears of the electric starter become stuck turn off the ignition switch, put in "high" gear and then gently rock the car backward and forward. This will release the starting motor gear from the flywheel gear and the starter will then turn the engine easily.

You don't need to wait a lifetime for a substantial income—everything you have ever longed for—Health, Happiness, Contentment, Leisure, Freedom from Financial Worry—such as you have never dreamed possible—may be yours if you let no obstacle stand in your way.

EVERY child, woman and man in the world is a "Builder." As children, when we are old enough to think for ourselves, we immediately begin to build air castles about what kind of a man or woman we will be when we "grow up."

Acquiring an education is building—marriage is another step in building—becoming the head of a family and home is building.

We all have our hopes and ambitions. As long as our health and vitality last many of us are able to earn the necessities and some of the luxuries of life. But the percentage of men and women who learn how to successfully Build an Income is appallingly low.

I do not claim there is any short cut to riches. The secret of building an income is an open book to anyone who will read. I can show you an easy way to a safe and sure income—but I can't decide for you.

If your age is under fifty, I can't make you worry about what your financial condition will be ten, twenty or thirty years from now. With all hope gone, this would be a gloomy world. My message is one of Health, Wealth and Happiness.

If you will allow no obstacle to stand in your way, you can build now for an income not necessarily to take care of you in your old age, but a steady flow of profits into your bank account beginning within a comparatively few years and continuing throughout the balance of your life, regardless of your age—an income which will continue to grow for your children and your children's children.

Nature has no competitor in producing wealth for mankind. I am offering you an opportunity to join me where the soil with its rich alluvial deposits assisted by the sun, the wind, the rain and an all year round growing season, will actually produce more wealth in less time and on a smaller investment than anything else I know of in the whole world.

The kind of crop which will be grown and the location should have your careful consideration, but what you are most vitally interested in is the tremendous profit possibilities—an abundant income in a shorter time than you ever dared hope for.

Our company, owning more than 100,000 acres of the richest, productive rolling land in the state of Florida, absolutely free from all liens and encumbrances, invites you to join us in the development of Paper-Shell Pecan Orchards on a larger scale than ever before planted. You are offered a wonderful profit opportunity in which we take all the responsibility as to its development, delivering to you a splendid crop-producing, money-making Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard—with no time or effort required on your part, while you remain where you are and attend to your present duties or occupation.

While I am going to give you a few of the important facts and some indisputable evidence here, I have written an illustrated, descriptive book for you telling the whole story—"PECANS for Wealth, FLORIDA for Health."

Fortunes now being made from Paper-Shell Pecans

Do you know that the growing of nuts has reached gigantic proportions during the past ten years? The import of nuts into this country during the year 1920 amounted to the enormous sum of $59,659,019.00. Think of it! Almost $60,000,000.00 for imported nuts alone. $110,000,000 is invested in walnuts in California and the annual crop runs between ten to twelve million dollars.

Never before, has any company undertaken as large a Paper-Shell Pecan orcharding development as the one we are now engaged in producing. Eminent authorities state that an overproduction of Paper-Shell Pecans for years to come is an absolute physical impossibility. The domestic market has never been satisfied—the foreign markets have never been touched.

There is only a small area in the whole world in which the Paper-Shell Pecan can be profitably cultivated and grown for profit—and our orchards are right in the heart of this district in Florida. The man or woman who can share in the profits is indeed fortunate—I am inviting you to join us because, by putting a tremendous acreage under cultivation the cost of production can be cut down to the minimum—and it also should enable the owners of these Green Cove Pecan Orchards, through the strength and combined resources of you and every other owner, to exert a powerful influence in the marketing of pecan crops at top prices always. Down in Florida where I live, they say that a man owning a Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard has a monopoly—bearing pecan trees are accepted by our banks as first class loan security.

In my book, "PECANS for Wealth, FLORIDA for Health," I give you the proof that fortunes are being made from Paper-Shell Pecan Trees—I give you the names of the owners, the number of trees they own, the age of the trees, the weight of the nut crops, the prices obtained—enormous returns from "scrub" pecan trees and orchards, trees which have never received scientific horticultural care or cultivation.

Pecan richer than any other nut

Business men who have read the advance proofs of my book, "PECANS for Wealth, FLORIDA for Health" state that it is the best book ever written on a horticultural proposition—and I believe you will find it mighty interesting and instructive. The preparation of this book and the carrying out of our horticultural development has not been the work of any one individual. We have called on the experience of United States Government horticultural experts, prominent officials of the state of Florida, the acknowledged and leading authorities on pecan culture, practical orchardists and the highest men in the marketing of the product.

These authorities all agree that the pecan tree has few equals and no superiors—that its cultivation deserves more attention than it has had—that it is a source of horticultural wealth and a prolific money-maker—that the crops from orchards of any size are being bought up by nurseries and by private individuals without giving the general public an opportunity to purchase—that because of increasing population, increased consumption and untouched markets, for many years the demand will exceed the supply—that the Paper-Shell Pecan is richer in fat and food values than many other kinds of nuts—that the pecan contains more food calories—that the pecan tree is hardy, not killed by frosts, and trees have lived and produced crops after going through floods and also being injured by fire—and that the pecan tree will continue to bear a golden harvest annually for centuries. After you read this indisputable evidence in my book the Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard will appeal to you and every other investor desiring large returns with safety.

Where the soil and climate work for you

Our property is situated 36 miles south of Jacksonville, in Clay County which has won many prizes for its products. It is west of Green Cove Springs—and about 25 miles inland from the magnificent sand beaches of the Atlantic Ocean. Green Cove Springs is an ideal location for an all the year round Florida home.

The land on which your Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard is planted has two very decided advantages. It practically obviates the necessity of artificial drainage, and therefore eliminates a tremendous item of expense. Nature has provided it with natural drainage. The other advantage lies in the gentleness of the slopes which prevents "cutting" or erosion of the top soil when rains are unusually heavy. This insures that every foot is tillable and there will be no waste land. The elevation of our land is from 50 to 250 feet above sea level, exactly right for the growing of pecans on a successful commercial basis.

The character of the soil is of the sandy loam variety, with mostly a clay sub-soil,

Each Pecan Tree gets a "flying start"

By scientific methods of intensive cultivation and forced growth by means of fertilizer, by planting only pedigreed stock of the highest budded and grafted varieties, we propose to bring your Paper-Shell Pecan trees to maximum growth for their age, and the production of commercial crops of exceptionally high quality and in less time, and also by the use of our extensive organization and the size of our operations, at a lower cost This would not be possible for you to do as an individual—yet I am inviting you here and now to send for our book, read it carefully and become a partner for profit in this vast enterprise.

In our own nurseries thousands of selected nuts from known heavy producers of profitable crops are planted in adaptable soil, fertilized and cared for from one to two years. This gives a small growth above the ground and a greater length of tap root below the surface. Then this new tree is permitted to grow for another year, when it is transplanted into the permanent orchard. This means that at the time of being planted into your Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard the trees will have roots two or three years of age—in other words, a "flying start" towards an early income.

Under our improved system of planting and expert care, we are planning for commercial, profitable crops earlier than is customary.

Experienced, capable, competent developed organization

You want to know if we are properly equipped and have the organization to carry on the work under the terms of our ale agreement with you. I am personally rseeing the development of your or- hard—each tree gets individual super- ision and attention—we can't succeed unless your Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard is a success.

I realize, just as well as you do, that to make this a tremendous success, I must have ready for instant action a well-functioning organization operating as smoothly as a piece of well-oiled machinery. This organization I have today, as a result of my long experience here. We are ready to take off our coats and work until we deliver to you a well-developed bearing orchard. At that time you can take your orchard over if you wish, or we will at your request make arrangements for the cultivation, harvesting and marketing of your crops, either through a Co-operative Growers Association or some other medium.

Our substantial Company your safeguard

In deciding to make an investment for profit, you are affiliating yourself with a successful $6,000,000 corporation which has invested over $2,000,000 in the development of their property—and have this Spring planted more than 13,000 selected trees in these Paper-Shell Pecan Orchards before offering them to the public.

Our company owns and operates 25 miles of standard gauge railroad on its property. It operates its own motor bus lines, modern dairy farm, and general stores. For the benefit of field labor the company has camps of cottages and for the more skilled labor, superintendents and foremen, graceful bungalows. On its property is operated a complete canning factory, packing thousands of cases of delicious sweet potatoes, peas and other vegetables.

The company has constructed and operates various other projects and public utilities such as telephone systems and water works, etc. We are farmers on a large scale. We are extensively operating poultry and livestock enterprises.

The Company owns and operates on its property hotels for the convenience and comfort of citizens, settlers and employes of its Development Organization, one of the largest of these hotels being at Long Branch, and another in Green Cove Springs.

I do not believe that in this entire country there is a better organized or better equipped Development Organization to safeguard you as an investor for profits.

Warranty Deed Immediately

Our Paper-Shell Pecan Development is divided into five-acre tracts, each one facing on a 60-foot avenue. You have the option of purchasing one or more of these five-acre orchards. We plant approximately ninety selected, pedigreed paper-shell pecan trees to each five acres. While the orchard is being brought to maturity, we cultivate it for you, guaranteeing to turn over to you at the end of this period your Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard in good condition, with each and every tree as healthy and perfect as horticultural science and care can make it.

This is so unusual in horticultural propositions, I want you to make a mental note of it. Only a company owning its own property and financially sound could undertake and agree to do this. Upon receipt of your initial payment, we immediately issue to you a Warranty Deed for your orchard. This Warranty Deed conveys the property to you free of all liens and encumbrances. The Company also delivers you at the same time a Certificate of Title from an abstractor showing that the Company holds good and marketable title to these lands free and clear of all encumbrances, and in addition a Title Guaranty Policy issued by the Union & Planters Bank & Trust Company of Memphis, Tenn.

The United States Trust Company also protects you

Your purchase contract also provides that the Company will deposit with the trustees, The United States Trust Company, Jacksonville, Florida, your entire initial cash payment and also certain subsequent payments, which are to be "Held and disbursed as provided in the Trust Agreement with said Trustee and for the development of said land."

This simply means that nothing can prevent the development of your Paper-Shell Pecan Orchard from being carried out in accordance with our purchase contract—your protection is absolute.

To further protect you, in case of death before you complete your contract, your heirs will be privileged to continue the payments, at their option, or they may return the deed and the company will cancel all further payments and repay to your heirs the full amount of money you have paid. All these advantages are not simply stated here, but given in detail in my book and set forth in black and white in your Purchase Contract.

Wisconsin Opens Dairy Agency for Branded Products

By Frank Ridgway.

BARNSTORMING throughout the Badger state for several months is leading to the organization of the Wisconsin Dairying, Inc., a marketing agency which will be established at Madison to sell standardized, branded butter, cheese, and milk on a quality basis.

John M. Kelley of Baraboo, veteran advertising expert, attorney, and practical dairyman, is chief agitator and organizer in the new movement. He says dairymen are fifty years behind the times, that they are wide awake to advanced methods of production but asleep so far as merchandising their products—butter, cheese, and milk—is concerned.

Getting Unsatisfactory Returns.

"No set of men has even gone farther in promoting production than dairymen, but they have utterly forgotten organization, advertising, and merchandising," Mr. Kelley says. "The gist of teaching from influential sources is that dairymen should seek low costs of production by weeding out scrubs, buying better sires, and practicing economy in feeding and management. This is commendable, every day doctrine, but no solution of the dairyman's problem. I will make a gift of the average pure bred herd of dairy cattle to the average dairyman, and defy him to make ends meet as profit and loss is determined by any other business in the world. The only way he can keep his head above water under the present system of marketing is to forget wear and tear, interest on investment and setting aside a reserve fund, and not allowing anything for his own labor or the work of his wife and children."

Under the present day method farmers in Wisconsin claim dairying is not bringing a satisfactory return, in spite of the fact that they have been working for years to stabilize their business by improving methods of production, perfecting manufacturing processes, enforcing sanitary laws, and developing refrigeration and transportation facilities.

Must Develop Program.

Recent agitation has brought Wisconsin farmers to a realization that they must develop a merchandising program to handle dairy products. A plan embracing these fundamentals has been worked out:

1. A standard high quality product, properly branded or labeled.
2. Judicious advertising to stimulate consumption.
3. Coöperation of all agencies in the channels of distribution.
4. Continuous supply of quality product to meet demand.
5. Payment of premium to producers of high quality product.
6. An efficient coöperative commodity marketing organization to guarantee the daily performance of work necessary to fulfill and guarantee the preceding five points.

Industry Never Organized.

"Dairying, like Topsy, just grew up," says Mr. Kelley, a Holstein breeder. "The industry has never been organized. In neglecting to organize and advertise his business the dairyman has kept two important things from the public. He has never told the world about the value of his products or the burden and sacrifice of producing them.

JOHN M. KELLEY.

As a leading dairyman and a veteran advertising expert, backed by fifteen years of experience as attorney for Ringling Brothers' circus, Mr. Kelley is chief agitator and worker in the organization of Wisconsin Dairying, Inc., a new marketing agency which will be established at Madison to sell butter, cheese, and milk on a quality basis.

"Marketing has been neglected in our state notwithstanding the fact that Wisconsin produces 76 per cent of the nation's cheese and one-sixth of the creamery butter made in the United States. In general these products are put on the market without any 'identification tag.'

Emphasizes Value of Trade Name.

"No concern that enters the field of human consumption markets a product successfully unless it is able to establish and control a standard of quality. That is not being done to any extent with dairy products. Advertising pays only when a trade name is featured. A trade name cannot be maintained successfully except when applied to a dependable quality.

"Dairymen have overlooked the possibilities of selling on a quality basis; they have never realized the value of a trade name—a brand—and the only reason they are able to exist is because they do not set aside a reserve, allow for replacement, as business men do, or deduct from the milk and cream checks a little for the work of themselves and families. In Wisconsin we have paid little attention to marketing and distribution. We focus our interests on the milk pail, produce a million dollars' worth of dairy products every time the clock ticks off forty hours, and pay little attention to marketing.

Substitutes Cut Sales.

"Recently we have been boring through the fog that has settled over the dairy industry in my state, and have found some interesting facts. For example, we have learned that the displacement of the dairy substitutes on the market today would double dairy production, not allowing for increased consumption which is being neglected to an alarming degree.

"When the war was over American dairymen expected a strong demand for dairy cattle from Europeans. Instead Europe has adopted the 'cocoanut cow'—using a cocoanut oil in making a butter substitute—and dispensed with the cow to a great extent. Europe's consumption of oleomargarine is two and a half times the entire butter production of the United States. Europe during the last fiscal year consumed more than 1,000,000 tons of oleomargarine. It takes only 100 pounds of milk, churned with other ingredients, to make 250 pounds of oleomargarine. In spite of these facts, American dairymen are wondering what is wrong with the market for dairy cattle."

Mr. Kelly thinks the dairyman is partly to blame for his condition.

Dairyman to Blame.

"The dairyman has permitted leading butter substitute firms to use a picture of his Holstein cow in advertising oleomargarine. I am surprised at the company's modesty. The wonder is that the advertiser did not photograph the owner of the cow and his family, and secure a testimony praising the oleomargarine. I am not criticizing the advertiser; I blame the dairyman. He makes feverish appeals to politicians for legislation to protect him against butter substitutes, and on his way home stops at the grocery store and loads up with oleomargarine for his family.

"Dairying is so extensive that the welfare of the dairyman concerns every individual in this country. In the development of a better merchandising system for dairy products, which shall include organization, standardization, packaging, labeling, and advertising, bankers, manufacturers, real estate men, and big business in general must help to bring to the dairy industry the principles of organizing, marketing, and advertising."

Bankers Support Move.

Wisconsin Dairying, Inc., is in the organization stage, and is being strongly supported by bankers in all parts of the state. J. M. Smith, Shell Lake, president of the Bankers' Association of Wisconsin, is at its head. Mr. Kelley is one of the directors.

The nonstock, nonprofit organization is to be financed by bankers and farmers. In paying his fees this year and next the dairyman will turn over one average day's milk check during June, and the banker supporting the movement will pay one-tenth of 1 per cent of the capital stock of the bank each year.

Report Shows 100,000 Farmers Co-op Marketing

Aproximately 100,000 farmers are marketing through eight producer controlled coöperative commission firms, selling cattle, hogs, and sheep at the rate of $100,000,000 annually, according to John G. Brown, president of the National Live Stock Producers' association.

Mr. Brown, in making his quarterly report to the farmers here a few days ago, showed that 15 to 20 per cent of the total live stock shipped to the Buffalo [N. Y.] market is sold by the producers' concern; 5 to 8 per cent at Chicago, or more than 1,000 carloads a month; 25 to 30 per cent at Indianapolis, 50 to 60 per cent at Kansas City, 15 to 18 per cent at the National stockyards, East St. Louis, and 25 to 30 per cent at Peoria.

At Peoria the coöperators have voted to return to farmers as patronage dividends 10 per cent of the commissions and 50 per cent of the cash membership fees after May 31.

Other coöperative commissions firms are to open at Sioux Falls, S. D.; Oklahoma City, Cincinnati, and Cleveland.

"The Chicago Producers' Commission association has repaid its membership fees in full and has decided to pay a substantial patronage dividend after the close of its first year's business, June 30," said the president.

GARDEN NOTES

Check over your planting table to see how many vegetables are to be planted early. Nine or ten of the ordinary vegetables are normally planted in Chicago gardens about this time of year, including such crops as early turnips, spinach, rutabaga, rhubarb, onion sets, leek, horse radish, garlic, and corn salad. Plants are used to get a start with rhubarb and horse radish.

From 350 to 400 tons of fertilizer will be used by tomato growers in Orange county, Ind., this season. A tomato factory furnishes the fertilizer at cost to the growers, and takes their note, which is to be paid without interest when the first tomatoes are delivered to the factory. The factory officials are to pay a bonus of $1 a ton for tomatoes grown on the fertilized ground until the price of the fertilizer has been reached. Each grower is applying 500 pounds of 2-12-6 fertilizer to each acre of tomatoes grown for the factory.

Gardeners should remember that manure exposed to the heavy rains that come during April and May will cause a loss of about 50 per cent of its fertilizer value.

Small hog receipts and active eastern competition were the outstanding strengthening factors in yesterday's trade, prices advancing fully 10@15c, with top up 15c at $8.30. An accumulation of weight packing grades that filled local orders held the average price steady at $7.80. Practically half of the local packers were out of the trade. Shippers absorbed three-fourths of the fresh arrivals at 3,000, only 2,000 being left in the pens at the close. The week-end supply totaled 10,200, including 6,239 over from Friday, and [illegible] fresh arrivals, which carried [illegible] "directs."

Last week's receipts, which were smallest since October, at 156,800, stand [illegible] smaller than previous week and 15,[illegible] above the ten year average. Average weight, estimated at 235 lbs., stands 1 lb lighter than a week ago and 4 lbs above the ten year average. General average price of hogs this week at $7.75 dropped [illegible] under previous week and $4.30 below the ten year average.

Considering the fact that last week's cattle receipts were second largest of the year, market conditions were generally satisfactory, the week's average price of good beef steers at $9.05 equaling the previous week. Arrivals for the week totaled 61,100, there being only one week larger since early in December of last year. Better grades of beef steers closed strong, while other kinds ruled steady [illegible] lower than a week ago. Top beef steers for week, $10.40, equaling top in March.

Lamb Trade Firm.

Last week's receipts were third smallest of the year at 65,200, standing 27,000 below previous week's arrivals. Prices finally experienced a reaction, averaging 25c above previous week at $13.40. Closing values ruled largely 40@50c higher than a week ago, with sheep unevenly [illegible] to 50c higher, clipped kinds showing most strength. However, handy wool [illegible] shared in part of the week's strength, a small lot of aged wethers, on a Navajo order, equaling the year's top mark of $10.00. Top lambs reached $15.00, highest this month. Exporters helped the heavy lamb trade most of the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 21,477 cattle, 52,996 hogs, and 17,711 sheep a week ago, and 25,386 cattle, 48,763 hogs, and 15,064 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 61,000 cattle, 160,000 hogs, and 72,000 sheep, against 68,658 cattle, 128,089 hogs, and 56,634 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 40,000 to 55,000. F. Gehrmann marked 40,000, M. Minteer 44,000, J. M. Waters 45,000, Lester Armour 46,000, W. S. Nicholson and F. R. Burrows 47,000, F. W. Waddell and W. H. Overman 48,000, Charles Gross 50,000, E. R. Gentry 53,000, and H. Pattison 55,000.

Consolidated Exchange Invites Investigation

New York, April 28.—The Consolidated Stock Exchange is eager to have a fair and thorough investigation of any phase of its business, President W. S. Silkworth declared in a statement today. "The exchange and its officials," he said, "welcome any investigation that Attorney General Sherman or any other official may care to undertake. We feel that the public interest is paramount and that any movement started in the interest of the public will prove to be in the interest of the exchange."

REAL ESTATE NEWS

PLAN $900,000 10 STORY HOTEL FOR HYDE PARI

Will Be at 55th Street and Boulevard.

BY AL CHASE.

There seems to be no limit to the number of hotels and apartment buildings contemplated for the Hyde Park district. Close on the heels of the announcement yesterday that a great structure to cost several millions was planned for the northwest corner of Stony Island avenue and the Midway comes the news that still another hotel is planned for Hyde Park.

It's going to be ten stories, cost $900,000, and will be erected at the northwest corner of Hyde Park boulevard and 55th street from plans by Architect William P. Doerr. This is just a block north of the big new Windermere and two blocks south of the Cooper-Carlton, Sisson, and East End Park hotels and, of course, not far from the Hyde Park and Chicago Beach hotels.

Harry Salvat and Henry J. Neumeister, owners of the Fashion Automobile stations, bought the corner 40x150 some months ago, through Charles E. Fox of James J. Carroll & Co. Yesterday they bought the 30x150 adjoining on the north, through the same broker, which gives them a site fronting seventy feet on the boulevard and 150 feet on 55th.

Buy Professor's Residence.

They bought the last parcel from Prof. Benjamin S. Terry of the University of Chicago, who has lived there for many years, for $20,000 cash.

Wreckers will demolish the two old stone residences built during the World's fair period, now on the site, some time after May 1. The new hotel, as yet unchristened, will have ninety-one apartments of two, three, and four rooms. Completion date is set for early next year. The same brokers who negotiated the purchase of the site will have charge of the renting and management.

Plan Five Story Apartments.

In the next block west, on Cornell avenue, at 5474-84, Gustav G. and E. O. Anders have bought the 160 feet of vacant, with a depth of 278 feet, from Mrs. Cecilia O'Connell, for $80,000, and intend erecting a five story fireproof apartment building to contain 200 suites of two and three rooms. Thomas R. Bishop probably will be the architect. J. J. Carroll & Co. represented the buyers and Baird & Warner the seller.

A block to the north the two brick residence at 5325-27 Cornell avenue have been sold by Vivian Simonson to C. Wind, through T. D. O'Hern & Co., for $23,500, and early in 1924 Mr. Wind will erect apartments on the 50x150 site.

Buys Old Timer.

At 5510 Cornell avenue the two story brick and stone residence, one of the oldest homes in the district, was sold by Ernest Hendrickson to State Representative Michael L. Igoe for $21,000 cash through O'Hern & Co. The buyer will rent temporarily and later on probably will erect apartments. The property is 50x113.

The Triangle Building corporation, of which J. L. Laycock, cashier of the Calumet Trust and Savings Bank, is president, has sold to Clyde L. Day, attorney, 60x222 of vacant at 5328-32 South Shore drive at a reported $60,000, or $1,000 per foot. Mr. Laycock bought it a year ago for $500 a front foot. Mr. Day intends eventually to improve with apartments. T. D. O'Hern & Co. were brokers.

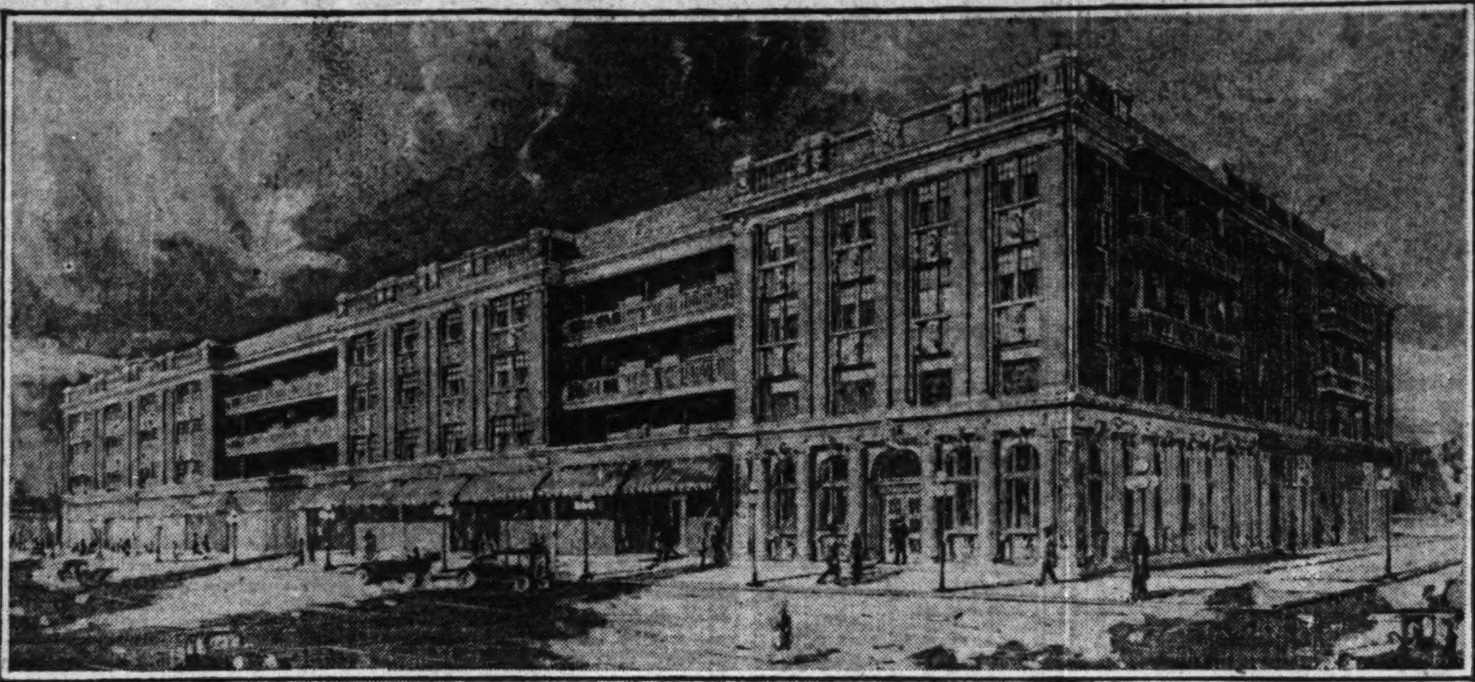
Jackson Park National Bank Building



Here is the new Jackson Park National bank building, to cost more than $1,000,000, and to be erected on the north side of 71st, extending from Jeffery to Euclid avenues, from plans by Architect William P. John Carroll is president. The Euclid avenue corner will have a drug store. There'll be a dozen other stores. In the upper floors will be eight suites of offices and 115 apartments, some one room and kitchenette, some two rooms, and some threes. The building will be set back thirty feet on Euclid and fifteen on Jeffery, making the total frontage on 71st 223 feet. It will front 178 on both Jeffery and Euclid.

This school will contain thirty-seven classrooms, kindergarten, manual training room, household science room, assembly hall, gymnasium, library, and doctors' and nurses' room. It will be ready for the youngsters next spring.

FANNIE MAY TO OPEN 3 MORE CHICAGO SHOPS

Candy Concern Will Have Fourteen Stores.

Three more candy stores are announced by the Fannie May Candy Shops, Inc., which gives that rapidly growing concern a total of fourteen. Two of the new sweets shops are in the loop and one in Englewood.

An 18x45 store in the Pullman building, at 210 South Michigan avenue, has been subleased from the Mussallem Linen shop, which is to move next door, for four years from May 1 at approximately $50,000 for the term. This gives Fannie May two Boul Mich shops—the other being in the Blackstone hotel. L. A. McHale was broker in the Pullman building lease.

One on Wabash Avenue.

The second new Fannie May shop to be opened in the loop on May 1 will be at 23 South Wabash avenue, where one-half of the space now occupied by a Weeghman cafeteria has been rented from the Charles Weeghman company for five years at a term rental of $37,500. The space is 13x40. E. F. Keebler & Co. were brokers in this deal.

The third of the trio of new candy shops will be in Englewood, at 725 West 63d street, just east of Halsted, where a store has been rented from Irving Isador for two years at a term rental of $4,500. A new building is to replace the present structure, which necessitated a short term lease. Harry M. and Louis Englestein were brokers.

When these three are open Fannie May will have thirteen Chicago shops and one in Peoria. Eight will be in the loop. There already is one in Woodlawn and one in the Wilson avenue district.

First Shop on La Salle.

The first shop was opened at 11 North La Salle only two or three years ago. The next was at 11 West Monroe. Then in the order of their opening came one at 29 East Jackson, 1010 Wilson, 71 East Adams, 115 West Jackson, 830 East 63d, 414 South Wabash, 8 West Randolph, and 638 South Michigan, in the Blackstone.

H. Teller Archibald, head of the Fannie May Candy Shops, plans opening several more shops, both in the loop and in outlying sections.

Marquette Recreation Building to Have Annex

Carl C. Marzano, president of the Marzano Construction company, and one of the pioneer builders in Chicago Lawn and Marquette Manor, has just bought 125x125 of vacant, north front, in 63d, between Spaulding and Homan, through J. H. Maier, who took it for approximately $25,000. On it he has started work on an addition to his Marquette recreation building, from plans by Architect A. V. Capraro, which will give him one of the largest structures of its kind in the city. It will cover 225x125, have twenty-six bowling alleys, the same number of billiard and pool tables, a gymnasium, and large quarters for cabaret, club meetings, rest rooms, etc.

Start Work on Ravenswood $200,000 Co-op Apartments

Work will start on Tuesday on a twenty-four apartment building, lot 150x165, at 4727-37 North Paulina from plans by Smith & Howe by the Paulina Apartment company. Sixteen apartments already have been sold to members of the company. Miss Allee Leiniger took title to the site for the coöperative owners through the Union Bank of Chicago as trustee. The site cost a reported $32,000 and the building will cost $200,000. The four, five, and six room apartments will be arranged and finished as far as possible to suit the owners' wishes. It will be ready Oct. 1.

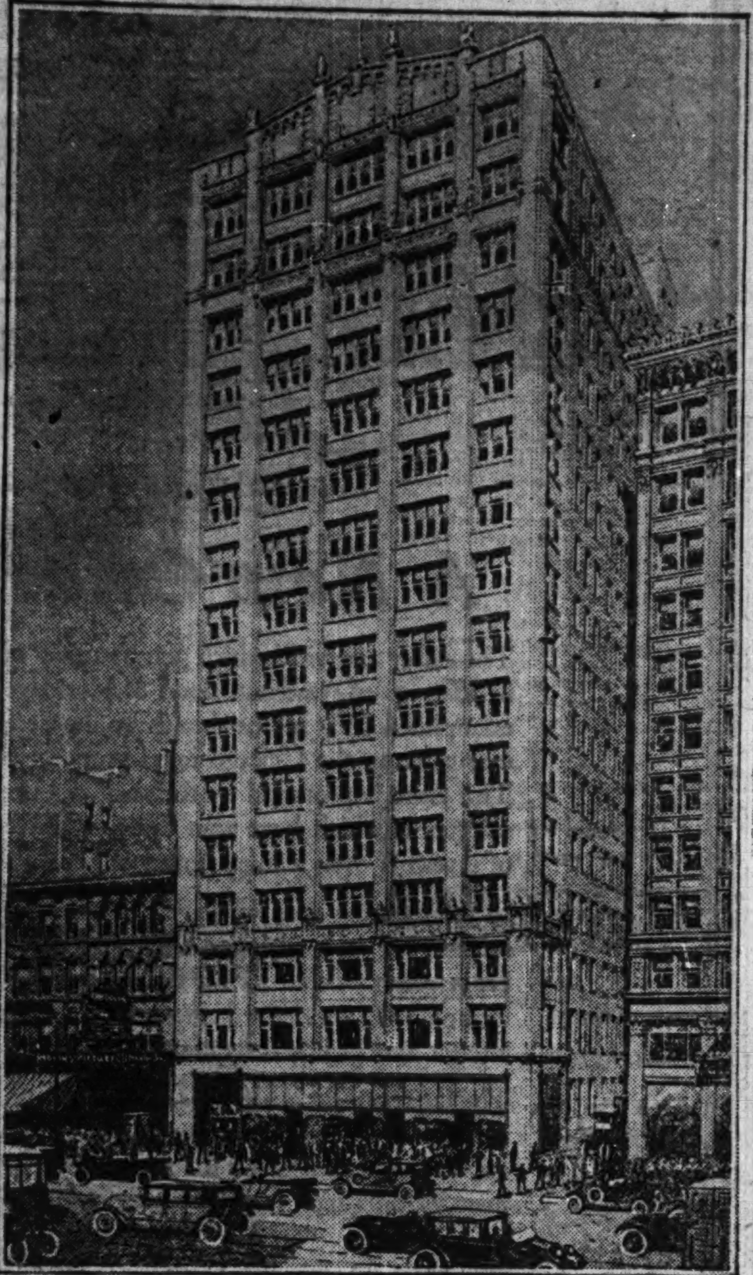
PROFESSOR SELLS RESIDENCE.

Prof. Theodore G. Soares of the University of Chicago sold the residence on 50x150 of ground at 5541 University avenue to John R. Thomas, western manager of the Ætna Insurance company, for $26,500, through T. D. O'Hern & Co.

CORNELL AVENUE DEAL.

J. H. Schroyer has sold to R. D. Lyman the nine flats at 5485-89 Cornell avenue, lot 75x150, for $75,900, subject to $30,000, through T. D. O'Hern & Co. The same brokers sold the six flats at 5324-26 Hyde Park boulevard to Mr. Schroyer for $45,000.

Skyscraper for State Street



Here is the first new skyscraper State street has had for a long while. It's the sixteen story Butler building, just north of the Randolph theater and across the alley from the State-Lake building at 164-70 North State. Wreckers will start tomorrow tearing down the present old improvements. It is expected much of the space will be taken by jewelers and furriers in large units. There'll be four stores on State. William M. Cahn is president of the Butler Building corporation, which holds title to the property. William B. Frankenstein is vice president. Willis & Frankenstein will be agents of the building. Peabody, Houghteling & Co. have underwritten a $750,000 bond issue. The total investment is placed at $1,314,000; the actual cost of the building $1,080,000. C. A. Eckstrom is architect. This project was reported in this department on Feb. 6.

WHEAT PIT BIRTHDAY BANQUET PLANNED BY REAL ESTATE BOARD

GEORGE R. QUIN.

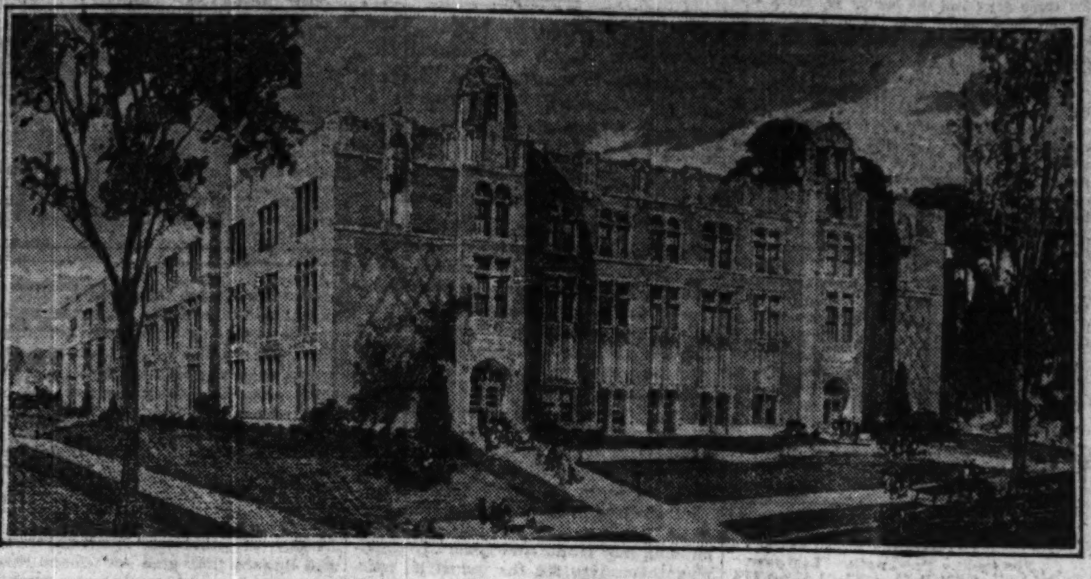
The fortieth birthday of the Chicago Real Estate board is to be celebrated with a banquet to be held on the trading floor of the Chicago Board of Trade, on Thursday evening, May 24. A committee of three, George Robert Quin, chairman, Henry George Slavik, and Hyde W. Perce, has arranged an elaborate program with "1883" the keynote to everything from menu to entertainment. The speakers' table will be in one of the trading pits and the 'entertainers' platform in another. All kinds of novelties in the way of food and entertainment are promised. There'll be no set speeches; in fact, Chairman Quin promises "novelty speakers," whatever they are.

Plans are being made to accommodate about 1,500 realtors. The cost is placed at $5. A Board of Trade committee, headed by H. A. Rumsey, has been appointed to assist the realtors in making their fortieth anniversary banquet a success. It happens that the Board of Trade also has an anniversary to celebrate about the same time, but it'll not participate with the realtors in their banquet.

BUYS WEST LAKE STREET PROPERTY.

McKay & Robbins have bought the property at 2539-41 West Lake street, now being improved with a one story factory building.

Five Year Campaign Wins School



After a five years' campaign to get a new public school the efforts of the Park View Improvement association have met with success and above is shown the design of John C. Christensen, board of education architect, for the $575,000 building to be erected at Central Park avenue, Drake avenue, and Grace street. Among those most active in securing this school for the neighborhood were Alexander Falk, Fred Reimers, Charles Lenske, Oscar Samuelson, G. E. Bentley, J. D. Kelsey, and John Diez. Work will start June 1. It will contain twenty-three classrooms, gymnasium, kindergarten, assembly hall, household science room, library, and doctors' and nurses' room.

"The dominating features in the design of the above building," said Architect Christensen, "were drawn from the archives of the English medieval architecture during the year 1411, when perpendicular style was being fully developed. A notable example of architecture in this period was the guildhall at Cirencester. The character and feeling in this particular building were borne in mind throughout this design."

This house will be comfortable on the hottest days of summer and the coldest days of winter. It is completely insulated in the walls and roof with Flaxlinum.

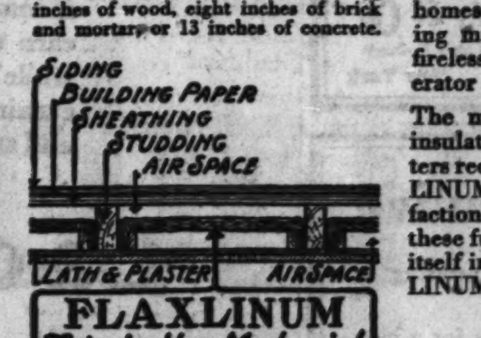
FLAXLINUM Brings Comfort In Summer as Well as Winter

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable, chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes.

For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets 1 inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down."

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.



FLAXLINUM This is the Material that keeps the Cold Out

YOU have been reading about FLAXLINUM as a home comfort maker and fuel saver in winter. Another important point for every prospective home-builder to know is that FLAXLINUM keeps houses cool and comfortable in summer too.

A layer of FLAXLINUM in the walls and roof of a house is an effective barrier to the penetrating heat of the sun. No matter how scorching hot it is outside, the interior of the home lined with FLAXLINUM remains refreshingly cool. At night even the sleeping rooms on the top floor invite restful sleep. Isn't it worth a lot to have a house of that kind?

When you use FLAXLINUM in your new home or in the roof of a house already built, you are not experimenting with a new, untried product. FLAXLINUM has been proved efficient not only in hundreds of homes during the past twelve years, but as an insulating material for the better class of refrigerators and fireless cookers. This year 9500 new railroad refrigerator cars will be lined with it.

The most convincing proof of FLAXLINUM as an insulating material is found in the enthusiastic letters received from home owners who have used FLAXLINUM. By the hundreds they report perfect satisfaction and fuel savings of 30% to 40%. It is through these fuel savings that FLAXLINUM actually pays for itself in a few years. Write or call for the free FLAXLINUM booklet and sample.

LIQUIDATION ON, LOWERING PRICES FOR ALL GRAINS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation by scattered holders of the May deliveries in all grains combined with excellent weather conditions in the wheat belt both sides of the international line and local pressure carried prices off readily, and while there was a good class of buying in wheat on resting orders on the way down the finish was about the bottom. Wheat closed at a net loss of 1@1⅝c, with May leading. Corn was off ⅝@1⅛c, oats ¼@⅝c, and rye 1@1⅝c.

Wheat and corn sold at new high figures for the season to date early in the week, but with a change in weather conditions in the northwest and a breaking of the drought in the southwest there was heavy profit taking and the advance was lost at the finish, with wheat off ½@1½c, oats ⅛@⅝c, and rye 1@2c at the close, while corn was ⅛@⅝c higher as compared with the previous week. Trade in provisions was not large, with lard 7½@12½c higher and ribs up 2½@5c for the week.

Crop News Is Bearish.

Aside from reports of a better demand for hard winter wheat at the seaboard, with some business done on overnight offers abroad, there was little in the news that was regarded as bullish. No rain was reported in the northwest and the forecast was for generally fair both sides of the international line, with further rains in the southwest. Reports from the winter wheat territory showed improvement and a bearish sentiment has been created in consequence. Houses with eastern connections bought July at $1.22½ on resting orders and on a scale down, while many scattered longs liquidated.

At the inside figures July showed over 4c off from the high point of the week and the market is back to where it was a short time ago. Commission houses in general lean to the buying side on the breaks, with the technical position stronger as the result of the sharp reaction. Liverpool closed ½@1d lower.

Good Buying in Corn.

Fears of liberal deliveries on May contracts led many scattered longs to get out of their holdings, but the buying was of a good class and the May-July difference showed a tendency to narrow slightly early, but it widened at the last. It would not be surprising if the first of the grain fleet cleared from here Monday or early this week. Country offerings remain very small and St. Louis bid 77½c at loading points within seventy-five miles of Chicago Friday night, equal to 4⅝c over Chicago May, track here.

Oats showed stubborn resistance to pressure, with September getting good support on a minor break made in sympathy with corn. Basis on spot was ¼c better as compared with the May, and while weather conditions were favorable for field work there was no increase in offerings to arrive.

Liquidation in Rye.

Longs in May rye sold freely, and it went 2½c under the July at the last, the widest discount so far. There was some buying by houses with eastern connections, who were removing hedges against sales to Germany. The two northwestern markets received 64 cars.

Provisions held within narrow limits, being firmer early with hogs, but lard reacted later with grains and closed unchanged, while ribs were 5@10c higher. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregates 1,402,000, against 979,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

PARTIAL PAYMENTS

Every far sighted man should realize that he earns only what he has left out of his income at the end of the year.

Since capital is not accumulated to be spent, but to be used for an income, it is advisable to invest it as it is accumulated.

Purchasing high grade securities on a payment arrangement is the ideal method of following out this sound principle. Our interesting free booklet explains the convenient terms of our plan.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The grain and stock exchanges are to operate on daylight saving time, commencing Monday.

Liquidation is on in grains and prices may go lower as the trade viewed it at the finish. There has been heavy selling of all kinds for three days, and the buying yesterday was not as good as of late. It may take several days to digest the load put on the markets.

Commission houses, conspicuous on the buying side on all breaks of late, were amongst the largest sellers of wheat yesterday. Offerings were absorbed on resting orders and by shorts, who were taking profits. Prices have dropped over 4c from the high on wheat and around 3c for corn from the high of Thursday, the best of the season so far, and the trade was less disposed to stick to the buying side, owing to feeble rallies.

Selling of September corn by local operators continues liberal, while the buying is not strong. More opposition to the advances is noticeable amongst local operators and a few of the commission houses. Others regard both wheat and corn a purchase on breaks.

Montreal reported charters of a steamer for Greece at 24c and to Italy at 19½c.

WOOLS ON HIGHER BASIS

"As compared with 1922, the wool market is on a decidedly higher basis," says S. Silberman & Sons. "Prices steadily advanced from spring of last year until the end of the year. Since then prices have remained steady at the advanced level, but there has been no tendency toward a higher level. Mills have been and are running full force, and the supply of domestic wools is practically exhausted. There is, however, a bountiful supply of foreign wools and importations have been enormous, and these serve as a check on higher prices for the United States wools. It is our opinion that the wool situation is intrinsically sound, and that the level indicated by our quotations will prevail for the next two months. The mills are in need of early wools, and it is unlikely that there can be any reduction; in fact, our customers are ready to buy and would take great quantities of wools had we them on hand at present. On the other hand, the situation does not warrant holding wools any longer than necessary. The first wools will undoubtedly command the highest prices. Later the mills will have filled their urgent requirements and will not be inclined to stock up at the present levels."

GERMANY KNOWS GAME OF MAKING AMERICAN MARKS

BY SCRUTATOR.

American marks, who bought German marks to the tune of a billion or so, have played Santa Claus to Deutschland for a row of 365 Christmases per year.

German state and federal finance is a jungle of mystery, smoke screened with propaganda, of course, but a few juicy items have recently been extracted from the morass by a British financial critic. The German government has been printing money to sell abroad, and at the same time depreciating that money by printing yet more to spend at home to give the folks a good time.

Many state budgets carry subsidy for opera. Prussia voted subsidies to Silesian theaters, probably to influence the Silesian voters against incorporation with Poland. Athletics and other amusements figure in many other budgets.

Information is being brought from Germany of how the big capitalists are building new plants and generally equipping themselves for the industrial mastery of Europe. Some Chicagoans recently returned from the International Chamber of Commerce session at Rome say that the British steel manufacturers are actively opposing any settlement of the Ruhr row on any basis that might lead to a combination of the French and German steel industries, for this reason.

The public budgets reveal that Germany has not only been subsidizing the construction of private manufacturing plants by voting huge sums to German manufacturers, mine owners, and ship owners whose property was taken by the allies in the allotment of former German territory colonies and shipping. In addition the federal and state government have embarked on an immense program of public works, canals, conduits, harbor facilities, and all that sort of thing.

To keep the Poles from reading their telegrams the Germans have laid a new cable in the Baltic to connect with East Prussia around the Polish "corridor," which splits Prussia in two. Heavy subsidies have been granted to the proposed Rhine-Danube canal and another canal which is to connect Berlin with the Rhine.

A huge underground concrete conduit is being built right across Germany to carry telephone and telegraph lines, and perhaps power lines. Part of this great project has been completed. No other country can match it. Scores of other items could be mentioned, but as many of them are probably still in the promotion stage, it would give an unfair picture.

Americans have paid for no small part of all the above. It is believed that we have spent a billion good dollars on German engraving. It is said that the Hollanders, Swedes, Danes, and other Europeans have fallen even harder. The original German plan was to float a loan over here after the senate ratified the Versailles treaty. But later the Germans discovered that you could really buy grain, cotton, and tobacco by working printers overtime.

The paper money swindle in a way, is a testimonial not only to the gullibility of the human race but to the honesty of a great part of it. The writer does not recall any economist who has emphasized the real criminality of the fraud. It is this—any government that issues false promises to pay swindles the very people who have the most faith in government, impoverishes the very classes upon whom governments must rely for support in peace and fighters in war. Honest folk believe that other people are honest and instinctively trust their rulers. It is the gambler, the sharper, and the natural anarchist who first grasp the meaning of fiat money and employ it to dispossess people of slower wits but better morals of their property. Germany has not only cheated her own best people but sapped the morals and outraged the trust of thousands of humble folk in other countries.

There are some dark chapters in the history of American local government and finance that give Americans reason to pause before becoming too sweeping in judgment of other peoples. There has been repudiation and confiscation over here in many forms. Innocent purchasers of many traction securities, holders of brewery securities, and those who helped finance some of the states which embarked into state socialism—known as "internal improvements" seventy-five years ago—all in a small way have undergone what Germany has inflicted wholesale.

"HI COST" GIVEN WALLOP; COTTON AND SUGAR DROP

BY O. A. MATHER.

Yesterday was "price reduction" day. Sugar tumbled from its haughty pinnacle, cotton was given a sharp downward jolt, gasoline took another drop in the east, and copper and lead slipped further. It appears that the upward movement of average commodity prices, which occurred gradually but continuously during the first three months of the year, has been reversed, as an equally gradual decline has taken place in the last three weeks.

The sugar speculators became alarmed yesterday over the spreading movement by housewives to support a "buyers' strike" while the current high prices obtain. They also had misgivings over the pending government action against the New York coffee and sugar exchange, which opens tomorrow. So they offered Cuban raw sugar down to 6⅝ cents a pound, or more than a quarter of a cent below the recent high price.

Cotton Prices Drop Sharply.

Cotton prices broke as much as $4 a bale. The selling of this commodity was by persons who were impressed with the disposition among banking interests to withhold credits for speculative purposes, coupled with reports of curtailment in eastern textile operations and improving prospects for the new crop.

The Standard Oil Company of New York made another cut of a cent a gallon for gasoline and naphtha. The Standard Oil Company of California also reduced gasoline a cent when purchased through coupon books. The price of copper has been gradually scaled down to 16¾ cents a pound, while lead yesterday was reduced from 8 to 7¾ cents a pound.

In general Dun's review reports 31 declines and 29 advances last week in a comprehensive list of 338 wholesale commodities. In the preceding week there were 23 declines and 24 advances. A year ago declines and advances were evenly balanced.

Middle West Shows Prosperity.

The general situation in the middle west remains excellent, according to the Chicago federal reserve bank.

"Employment reports give many indications of increasing industrial operations," the bank's review states. "The most noticeable feature of the situation is the numerous wage increases granted or contemplated. Manufacturing operations caused an active demand for credit, bu the demand was not excessive. Marketing of grain and live stock helped farmers to liquidate part of their indebtedness.

"Continued improvement in savings deposits is shown. An increase on April 1 of approximately 1 per cent was shown over the preceding month, while compared with a year ago an increase of 10 per cent was made. The average account on April 1 increased slightly over March 1, while compared with the preceding year the gain amounted to 2.3 per cent."

Big Ore Movement Expected.

In anticipation of one of the busiest of shipping seasons of recent years the Chicago and Northwestern railway has sent a fleet of twenty-two gigantic locomotives to the Gogebic range at Bessemer, Mich., to handle the output. With but forty-two miles of track from the range to the lake docks at Ashland, it is hoped that this number of engines will be sufficient to handle this season's expected heavy production.

Leading building material concerns operated at greater capacity during March than during any month of the three preceding years, the Chicago Association of Creditmen reported yesterday. The plants operated at 93 per cent of capacity. Collections increased 39 per cent over February and total sales jumped 22 per cent.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—[Special.]—LEAD—Dull at 7.95c. ZINC—Slab, quiet at 7.10c.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Bear operations in the stock market were encouraged yesterday by the emphasis placed in the weekly mercantile reviews on the slackening in industrial expansion, the speculative uncertainty concerning the immediate course of oil prices and the easing tendency of commodity prices. Oil shares were again the principal target for selling pressure, the Barnsdale issues being singled out and depressed to new low prices for the year. Several other shares in that group were forced down a point or so, but good buying support set in at the lower level and losses were limited to fractions.

Reports of buyers' strikes against the high prices of sugar inspired some hurried liquidation of those shares. Trading in railroad shares were dull, with price changes mixed. Gains, however, exceeded losses among the standard issues at the close.

There were 356 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Vo., compared with 418 in the preceding week, and 543 during the corresponding week last year.

Directors of the Chicago Railways company have ordered paid on May 1 the interest of the 4 per cent noncumulative adjustment income bonds for the year ended Jan. 31, 1923.

Robert W. Woodruff of Atlanta was elected president of the Coca Cola company at a special meeting of the directors yesterday. Mr. Woodruff succeeds Charles Howard Candler, who resigned to accept the chairmanship of the newly created advisory committee. D. C. Jackling, vice president of the Utah Copper company, has been elected president to take the place made vacant by the death of C. M. MacNeill.

NEW YORK.—The vogue for pleats, now well established in the outer apparel markets, is extending to undergarments. Some of the new lingerie lines show pleats as the most conspicuous details.

Fraudulent Oil Stock Promotions—Revere Oil.

The Revere Oil company is one of the many rank oil stock promotions against which we have warned all inquirers. The magnitude of its operations was indicated by the very large number of letters we have received asking about this particular company. Our opinion has been confirmed and additional light has been thrown on the machinations of this company by the report of the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which has made a thorough investigation of the company in conjunction with the post-office department. The report brings out the following facts:

The Revere Oil company, a trust estate of Fort Worth, Tex., using a fake photograph of its refinery, found a short cut to the pocketvooks of stockholders of failing or defunct oil companies by the "merger" scheme, which absorbs lame concerns and gives the stockholders the cold alternative of putting up more money by purchasing 25 per cent additional stock or being frozen out empty handed.

It is estimated that the Revere company has over 13,000 shareholders practically all of which were "ready made" for them in the seventy-five or more concerns which have been absorbed. The total capitalizations of these concerns represent in the neighborhood of $150,000,000 into which an amount estimated in excess of $25,000,000 has been paid by the public.

The trustees of the Revere Oil company, F. & M. National Bank building, Fort Worth, Tex., are Albert H. Sheperd, J. C. Verser, and Charles Nelson. Warren Hollister, who was formerly president, is now at the head of the Pilgrim Oil company of Fort Worth, another objectionable "merger" promotion of which we already have written.

The International Brokerage company, and the Dixie Royalty company, both of Fort Worth, are two recently organized companies which are being conducted by employés of the Revere Oil company, whose purpose is to go over the old ground and circularize those stockholders who failed to accept the original "merger" offer.

The Revere Oil company appears to have been among the pioneers in the "merger" game in Texas. The method employed is to solicit the stockholders of the concern about to be absorbed to send in their certificates of stock, together with 25 per cent in cash for exchange in, "one of the really financially strong and remarkably growing oil companies." This is only a clever method of selling Revere stock at the rate of 20 cents a share. The same shares could be purchased from local brokerage houses handling this grade of stock at prices as low as 6 cents a share (quoted at 3 cents bid, 6 cents asked in February and March, 1923). Yet the Revere company claimed in its literature that the "present offering of stock is $2 per share."

The holdings of most of the companies that go to make up a "merger" are of small value. They have produced little, or no, oil. Even where any production was forthcoming, mismanagement precluded the possibility of profit to stockholders in most instances. The accumulation of worthless properties by "merger" companies adds nothing to assets. When a company drills a dry hole, the property usually is worthless and thereby becomes a liability. Most of the so-called "assets" of these defunct companies consist of dry holes, worthless leases, wild cat acreage of little or no value and, in many instances, indebtedness.

"Mergers" from a promotional standpoint, are an improvement over the old stock selling method. They avoid the heavy expense of an advertising campaign because they already have an interested list of prospects who were vulnerable on other occasions and quite naturally are interested in any proposal to save their original investments from what appears to be certain loss.

To overcome whatever sales resistance might be encountered in approaching stockholders, the advertising of the Revere Oil company has dressed up the scheme to look like a prosperous, functioning organization in each department of the oil industry. It reads:

> "Revere is an oil company in every sense of the word and is engaged in every branch of the petroleum industry from producing the oil to marketing the same at their own filling stations."

It emphasizes the advantage to stockholders in operating this complete chain from producer to consumer.

> "Their refineries give them an outlet for the oil they produce and through their own filling stations they can reach the consumer direct; therefore, they are not dependant on any agency which may fail them at any time."

The alleged profits from this system of operation were described in the following manner:

> "Filling stations in and about Fort Worth which afford a marketing medium for the company's refined products and which are bringing in a most surprising rate of daily income."

Revere does not actually operate a refinery. The one owned by the company is leased to the Western Oil Sales corporation, and so far as can be ascertained, does not handle such production as the Revere company might have. Neither does the Revere company own the filling stations. They are leased on a rental basis. The gasoline at these stations is not Revere's own refined product. It is purchased from other sources.

The photograph of the refinery plant used in the advertising has been faked by taking three pictures of the same equipment from different angles, patching them together, with embellishments, so that they appear as one complete refinery unit. By trick photography, the refinery as it actually stands, has been triplicated. The Revere Oil company also has made representations about another refinery, which has no basis in fact:

> "This merger will make it possible to immediately place the 2,000 barrel Abner Davis refinery at Wichita Falls in operation."

The Revere Oil company did not take over and operate this plant.

Throughout the literature of the Revere company, highly colored advertising appeals force the impression upon the reader of the extensiveness of the organization and its possibilities for future growth. One officer stated:

> "My prediction is that the Revere Oil company will be another Sinclair, Magnolia, Cosden, or Texas company. They are scarcely two years old and have grown from almost nothing to a nationally known organization."

One of the brokerage houses which urged clients to participate in the Revere Oil company "merger" plan is E. McNeal & Co., 134 South La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

The Revere Oil company or similar promotions such as the Pilgrim Oil company and the Petroleum Producers' association, headed by Dr. Frederick A. Cook, rarely "merge" as the word is usually understood in finance. Their movement is a mere piece of mechanics to get hold of the list of stockholders so they can continue the sale of stock by the methods above described.

Thirty Million Dollars in 1923 To Meet Constantly-Growing Demands for Service

TO provide for the ever-increasing requirements for electricity and gas, operated utilities of Standard Gas and Electric Company will spend $30,000,000 on new property construction, extensions and additions in 1923. Total power resources of the companies will be increased over 39%.

Growth of the business of these companies—serving 665 cities and towns, with population of over 2,375,000, in 16 states—has been consistent since 1912. The substantial increase of 1922 was reflected in a gain of 23.3% in net revenue of Standard Gas and Electric Company. Dividend requirements on the Preferred stock were earned more than 2½ times.

Securities of public utility companies represent the most substantial and reliable form of investment to be found—investments in properties supplying daily necessities. They are fundamentally sound and meet the requirements of the most conservative investor. Diversity of their business is limited only by activities of the people and natural resources.

You may share in the prosperity of one of the large, progressive and rapidly-growing utility organizations of the country by investing in the on the PEAK again!

THE PEAK YIELD on the best grade First Mortgage Bonds in that period of extremely high income which followed the Armistice was 7%—proving that 7% with such security as our Bonds offer is the highest yield you are ever likely to see!

FALLING RATES characterized the period just passed through in which no securities worthy of the consideration of our clients yielded better than 6½%. How remarkable it is then that we have again obtained for you the peak yield of 7%.

THE VAST VOLUME of building now in progress explains this. It has simply created a temporary demand for money strong enough again to raise the price of mortgage loans to 7%.

EASIER MONEY will again start interest rates on their downward course, leaving many regrets with those who might have profited for years to come by stocking up now on 7% bonds.

Our Suggestion to the Foresighted

INTEREST RATES have gone down—the best possible proof that they will go down again. But as usual only the few with foresight will act and profit before it is too late. A passing condition has again given you the opportunity which in the past it took a world war to create.

Lay in as large a supply of 7% First Mortgage Bonds as your funds permit. We offer them with finest North Side, well diversified security, two to ten year maturities. The latter will give you a long, long period of liberal income and the gratification of knowing you were foresighted enough to invest in safe 7% bonds on the very last call.

The New York Times.

New York, April 28.—[Special.]—The week ended today on pretty nearly all markets in character with the previous movement of the week. With the possible exception of the foreign bonds, financial and commercial markets alike gave no evidence of anything but indecision.

Prices on the stock exchange went in most cases a fraction lower, but the business done was of trifling magnitude, and the day's changes were practically negligible. The week as a whole has effected a downward readjustment of prices, but the alternation of days with moderate advances and days with moderate declines has left even the week's movement comparatively unimportant.

Stock Market Shows Caution.

The stock market is apt to exercise its prophetic instinct by foreshadowing not only the events of the future but the mood of the future. So it is not inconceivable that unwillingness to move definitely in either direction may be the advance indication of the mood which will prevail later on in general trade.

The extremely rapid business expansion which immediately follows the ending of a period of great industrial depression is itself a measure of the underproduction of that period—just as equally sudden and violent contraction measures previous overproduction. But the test of the season of recovery always comes when there is evidence that production has overtaken consumption. That consideration has been somewhat overlooked in the converging of the discussion upon the question of possible abuse of credit. But we have not yet had the other test applied.

Bond Prices Show Firmness.

Comparisons of bond market prices with those at the end of the preceding week make a much more favorable showing than in the case of stocks. Securities of home companies present a number of respectable advances, but it is the foreign securities list whose movement for the week is impressive. More than a dozen government bonds of that description have risen substantially, with gains for the week ranging from 1 to 4 points.

It is still too early to be sure how far this indicates expectation of favorable political developments, how far the mere correction of mistaken views regarding the economic situation, and how far the turning of investment capital, from a stock market which had ceased to move into a branch of the bond market, which at any rate gave relatively large net returns to the investor.

New York Loans Expand.

weekly statement of the New York ring house shows an increase in loans discounts of $36,375,000 and a de- of $42,035,000 in demand deposits. ompanying these changes was a de- of $6,579,420 in surplus reserve, stands at $9,417,320. Details of statement, with comparisons, follow:

THE POTTERS

PROLOGUE.

We left Pa Potter, you may remember, gazing with unmixed consternation into the honest features of a typical New Yorker whose intense remark, "Meshuga," is all the answer Pa can get in reply to "Where is the Broadway subway?" . . . anyway, Pa found it, even if he had to climb into and out of a few subterranean barber shops, coal holes, etc., in the quest . . . they couldn't hope to hide a subway on a fellow as keen as Pa—at least, not indefinitely . . . here we are . . . Follow the Green Line . . . Follow the Black Line . . . turnstiles . . . penalties in all languages for using slugs . . . watch your step . . . ding ding . . . whew, terrible! . . . I'd Walk a Mile for —— Shake Hands with Health—— Why the Subway Is the Safest—— . . . yeh, I gotta go over on Thoity-thoid . . . I seen dis goil at de colb, and I says . . . vas haben sie gemach . . . droshka katushka minushka vodka . . . [illegible] hop lo chee chow chu . . . oi oi . . . si si . . . oui oui . . . ya ya . . yass yass . . . yup . . . yip . . . yeh . . . bumpbumpbump . . . WALL STREET!

SCENE I.

Wall street . . . a church at one end, at the other the river: take your choice . . . where the bull lies down with the bear as they wait for the lamb gayly leaping about from point to point on the neighboring margins . . . and now comes Pa Potter . . . yea, a second Daniel . . . Boy, page me a few lions . . . you go in here, Pa, and be sure to take the express, as the locals don't go any higher than the thirty-second floor . . . here you are . . . gold letters on the door and a sneerful office boy already . . . "The Cosmic Radio Corporation" . . . of course you can go right in—aren't you going to be one of the directors? . . . tough luck, the meeting is already on . . . there's Rankin . . . "Hello, Rankin" . . . "Hello, Potter" . . . Shhh, the great expert is giving a speech on Radio . . . Listen!

EXPERT (who has a high, thin voice and a well modulated Adam's apple that beats perfect time):

And, of course, as you well know, when the tube connections are changed from outside excitation to self-excitation by coupling the grid circuit over on to the plate circuit, the frequency at which power is being produced in the plate circuit will probably change from the original frequency of sixty cycles . . .

(Which nobody can deny.)

PA (sotto voce, to Rankin):

What did he say?

RANKIN (mysteriously):

Shhh . . . he's an expert. He's explaining everything.

EXPERT (with growing enthusiasm):

Assume that it takes one-tenth watt input to completely control the output of the plate battery, and that under these conditions the plate battery can deliver ten watts of power. You can see at a glance, if the grid circuit is connected to a sixty-cycle source of power, the power output of the plate circuit will be a reproduction of the impressed sixty-cycle wave.

(Certainly. Why not?)

PA (dizzily):

What does he mean, watts? If don't make sense to me.

RANKIN (pityingly):

Can't you keep quiet? I tell you he's an expert. He knows all about radio.

PA (doggedly):

Then why doesn't he tell us something about radio? He's just reciting some charades.

EXPERT (with fanatical fervor in his voice . . . Peter the Hermit . . . Savonarola . . . General Coxey . . . Henry Ford . . . they all got that way):

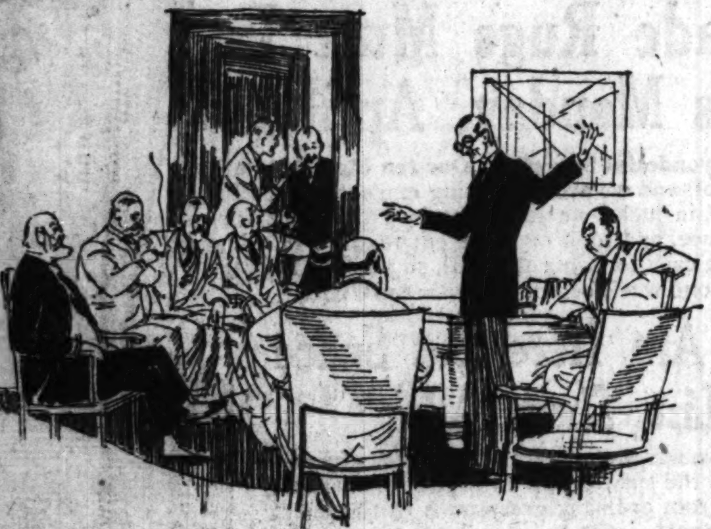
Gentlemen, may I say one word here for the square law type of variable condenser? It grieves me to think that there may be hundreds—yes, thousands—of people in this country who do not understand that to give a straight line wave length calibration a square law condenser is made with offset variable plates, so that the dielectric area is in proportion to the squares of the scale degrees . . .

(Cries of "Bravo!" and "Hear! Hear!"



"Shhh . . . he's an expert."

PA (coming up for the third time and clutching Rankin helplessly):

Huh? Wazzat?

RANKIN (dazed but game):

He says that if you take that thingumajig you know, that there whatchamacallit—in the—er . . . in the—er . . . O, you know . . . Sshhh, we're all going out to his house tonight, and he's going to give us a practical demonstration. Meanwhile just sit as quietly as you can and look as intelligent as possible.

EXPERT (with fine glow of pride):

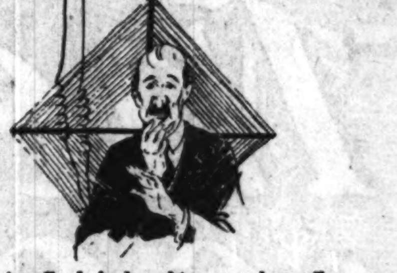
And now, gentlemen, we come to the location of the choke, which should, as we all know, be between the last filter condenser and the oscillator tube. But where should the bypaths condenser be located? Ah, gentlemen, how well we know it should be located on the oscillator side of the choke.



"Turn it off; he's breaking my heart."

(Quite so . . . Cheerio!)

SCENE II.

The Expert has fitted up one room in his home in faithful imitation of a wireless room on a liner . . . red and green lights flash fitfully . . . an insane ship's clock rings off two bells . . . four bells . . . seven bells—whatever it happens to have on hand . . . the Expert wears a cap and uniform and cries, "Avast!" and hitches up his pants fore and aft as he tears up and down the long row of dials and things which lines one entire wall . . . this evening Pa and Rankin are among the favored few who have come to hear the Expert tune into stations from coast to coast . . . in fact, they may even hear the Expert broadcast, as he has a license and an outfit and a lot of words backed up in his system curdling for an outlet.

EXPERT (running nervous fingers over numerous dials . . . shrill shrieks and low moans answer his efforts . . . his eyes gleam with sadistic delight . . . a piercing screech . . . ah, he has it!):

Listen, gentlemen; in just a minute you will hear Los Angeles.

RADIO:

This is Station J-U-N-K broadcasting from the top of Oppenheimer's Dry Goods Store in Alligator Hollow, the Garden Spot of Florida. Mr. Oppenheimer will now give an address on "Why Honesty Is the Best Policy" . . . Stand by one moment, please . . . Mr. Oppenheimer now speaking—of the Oppenheimer Dry Goods Store, Station J-U-N-K——

EXPERT (twisting dial hurriedly and casting Mr. Oppenheimer into exterior darkness):

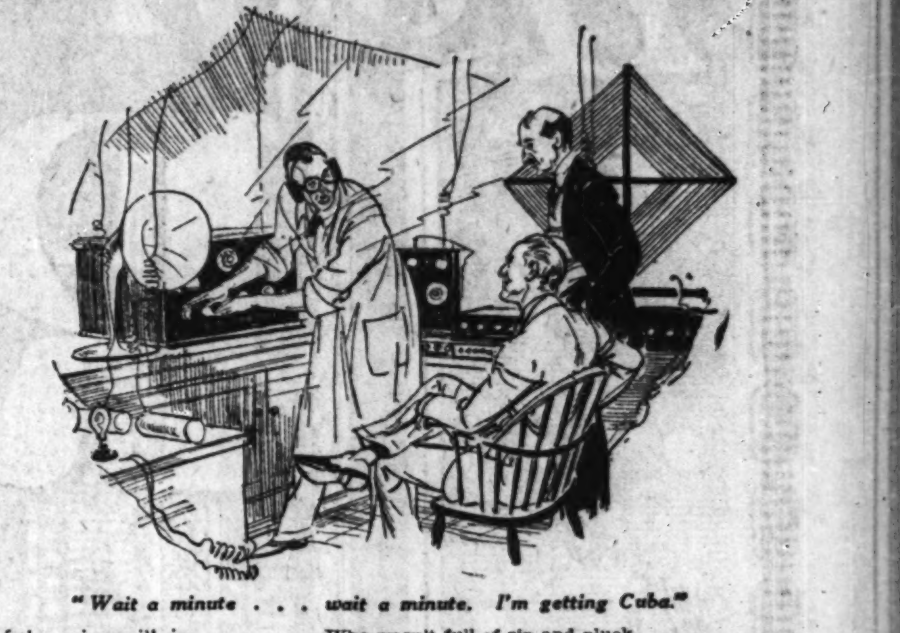
There must have been some mistake. Let's try Chicago now. (Fiddles lovingly with half a dozen knobs and things. The whole place is filled with exquisite moans. The Expert quivers to the very depth of his nefarious soul):

There, now we shall have it!



"Wait a minute . . . wait a minute. I'm getting Cuba."

RADIO:

. . . setting the vertebræ of the spine will, in nine cases out of ten, cure any ailment of man, from whooping cough to housemaid's knee. As everybody knows, the cervical as well as the dorsal vertebræ——

(The Expert turns the knobs apologetically.)

RADIO:

. . . but how should Harold Cuckoo know, dear children, that he was running on sun time, and not on standard time? As long as he has been a cuckoo, grown to full cuckoohood with a clock of his own, he has always run on standard time, and here they had changed to sun time without notifying Harold! No wonder he got all mixed up, dear children. When it was 12 o'clock he thought it was only 1, and cuckooed only once, which made him eleven cuckoos behind. And when it was 1 o'clock he thought it was 2, and cuckooed twice, and then he was one cuckoo ahead. He had gained twelve cuckoos in an hour! Poor Harold Cuckoo, he couldn't figure it out. Next Tuesday night, dear children, Aunt Agatha will tell you the story of Sadie Snake and Algernon Anteater . . . Buzzzz . . . Buzz . z . . zz . . . This is Station S-A-P, on the top of——

(Again the knob is turned—twirled, one might say.)

RADIO:

. . . a poet of the people, who sings the songs that come from the hearts of the people—homely, simple, songs, simple—there is no other word for it . . . Stand by one moment, please . . .

I never did a bit of dirt
To nary person on this earth;
My hands and heart are always clean—
I'll keep 'em that way, too, I mean;
For nobody never had no luck
Who wasn't full of zip and pluck.
But no matter what you do, nor where you roam,
There is no place like home, sweet home.
People talk of wealth and fame,
But give me a little country lane
With elderberries growing on it
And mother in her old gray bonnet;
And I wouldn't trade a crown of gold
For her silver threads among the gold.
O, there will never be no other
Like you, my dear old sainted mother.

I thank you.

EXPERT (excitedly):

Wait a minute! Wait a minute—I'm getting Cuba. Listen . . .

RADIO (a bit thickly):

Yesshir, three sheers for Uni' Shates, Lanoliberty, Lanofree . . . Free do anyshing ain't agin law . . . Wowie . . . Gimme shtein o' Skotsh . . .

PA: Turn it off; he's breaking my heart.

RADIO:

My next imitation will be that of a Swede who joined the Salvation Army . . . This is Station B-O-R-E, on one of the Thousand Islands . . .

PA (disappointed):

Gosh, I thought sure enough it was Cuba . . .

EXPERT:

And now, gentlemen, I think I have certainly demonstrated to you how it is almost possible to get anybody at any place with hardly any effort! What a marvelous future is in store for us! Think of being able some day in the future to sit in your room and listen to concerts in China, Czecho-Slovakia, and the Ukraine . . .

(Let us all pray that it will never come to this!)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

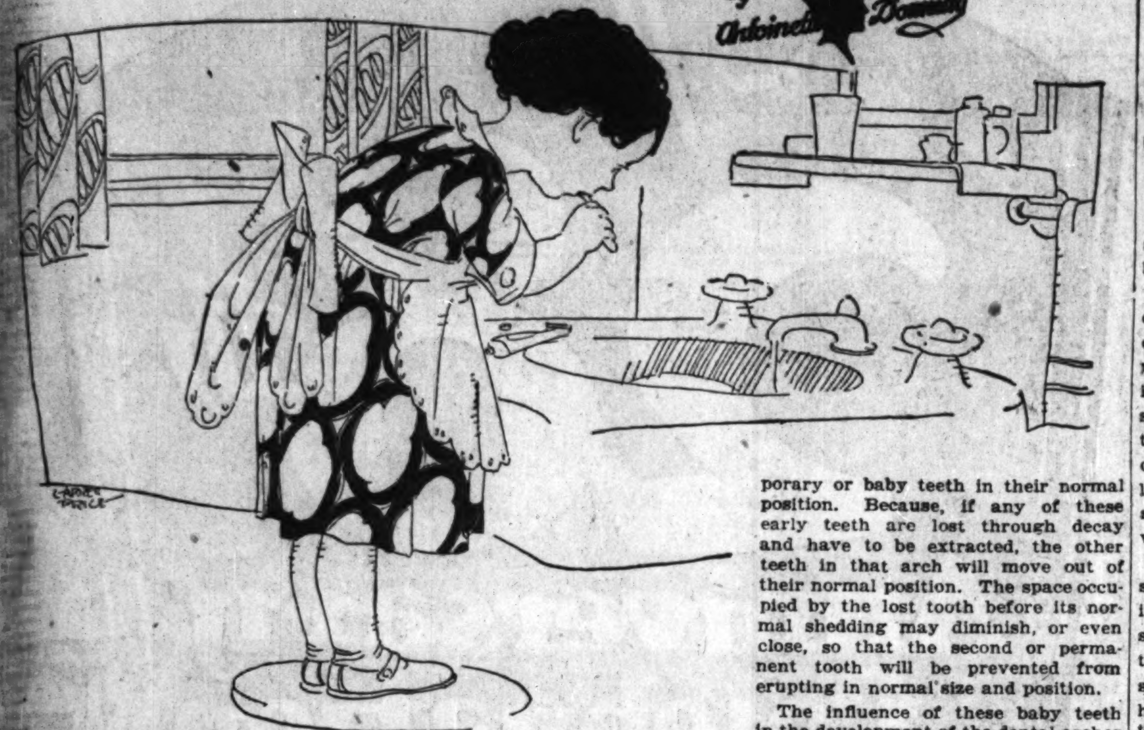
BEAUTY and EARLY TEETH CARE

by Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Last week I pointed out the relation of facial beauty and the full complement of teeth, each tooth occupying its normal position, and how inharmony in the balance of the mouth due to malocclusion (teeth out of normal position) results in depressions below the wings of the nose, flat sunken lines of the mouth, prominence of upper teeth, protruding lips, under developed chins, and other disfigurements which contribute to a lack of balance of the features and a less attractive appearing person.

Too, I pointed out the influence of the mother's food in building the baby's bones, and how the same food will build the teeth. While nursing the child the mother should eat plenty of eggs, milk, corn, whole wheat bread, spinach, apples, and grapes. The doctor will tell her what is best in each individual case.

Giving Teeth Exercise.

When baby is weaned its food must contain bone building material. Candy is bad for the teeth. Children should have plenty of milk, cream, butter, oatmeal, nuts, apples, currants, figs, berries, tomatoes, spinach, and cornmeal. Give your child rye bread, crusts of bread, dry bread, and food hard to chew. This will give the teeth work and send good blood to the inside of the tooth and keep it strong.

Most mothers realize the importance of care of the permanent teeth which begin to appear at about 6 years. But comparatively few realize the influence of the first teeth upon the ultimate appearance of the child's mouth. When, as a matter of fact, these first temporary teeth determine the position of the permanent ones.

The first or baby set of teeth begins to appear between six and eight months, and by the twenty-fourth month the full number of twenty should be present—ten in the upper and ten in the lower jaw.

These teeth must be kept clean from the beginning, and the dentist should see the baby every six months, so that these important teeth will not decay. Bad first teeth may cause the second or permanent teeth to decay or come in crooked.

To clean baby's teeth, wrap a soft piece of clean cloth around your finger and wet it with warm water and a little cooking soda. Rub over and around the teeth. Do this in the morning as soon as baby awakes and at night before she is put to bed. Then, when she grows up, her teeth will be strong and beautiful.

Importance of Baby Teeth.

At the age of 6 the first permanent molar erupts directly behind the last temporary tooth in the arch. There are four molars which come through about the same time. These teeth are guided into their normal positions because of their normal contact with the temporary teeth in the arch. Therefore it is necessary to realize the importance of retaining the temporary or baby teeth in their normal position. Because, if any of these early teeth are lost through decay and have to be extracted, the other teeth in that arch will move out of their normal position. The space occupied by the lost tooth before its normal shedding may diminish, or even close, so that the second or permanent tooth will be prevented from erupting in normal size and position.

The influence of these baby teeth in the development of the dental arches is so important that they should by all means not only be retained their full normal period but, if they become affected by decay, their full diameter should be restored by suitable fillings.

A long period of time—twenty years or more—is required by nature to complete the building of the complete set of teeth. The baby teeth are usually ideally perfect from the fact that the foods and habits of the child are quite normal and simple during these early years. Neither do these teeth meet with interference during their eruption from any remnants of previous teeth, which are generally the disturbing factors to the placing of the permanent ones.

Prevention Better than Cure.

The relation of the upper and lower jaw is usually correct with the first teeth. Their cusps on eruption are usually well defined and their locking such as to maintain themselves in normal occlusion and the jaws in harmonious relations, which is highly important as the development of the bones of the head and face progresses. But toward the last period in existence of these baby teeth there is apt to be a wearing away of the cusps, which is the beginning of many abnormal lockings of the first permanent molars and subsequently abnormal facial defects.

Quite aside from the beauty value of watching these earliest teeth is the vastly important one of the child's health. The reduction of children's diseases through correction of early teeth disorders has amazing statistics to substantiate this phase of vital interest to a parent.

The mother, therefore, interested in the future health and beauty of her child, should guard these baby teeth as the divinities which shape the destiny of their successors. If a dentist is permitted to advise and correct on this early denture, money and a great deal of pain and deformity may be saved later. The wearing of braces and teeth straightening devices could be prevented, to say nothing of the abnormalities before referred to.

Each permanent tooth as it erupts is dependent upon contact with each preceding tooth for its normal position in the arch of the mouth. Therefore, lack of any one tooth will result in a malposition of all the teeth, both in relation to each other and to their opposing teeth in the opposite jaw.

The thought of taking a tiny youngster to the dentist may send a mother into paroxysms of shudders and quakes. But so rapid are the strides in dentistry, in the education of people on tooth preservation, and its relation to health and to facial regulation, that I venture to guess today's baby will be in a position of knowledge a few years hence to lay the blame of her health and beauty ills to a mother's gross negligence.

The Queerest Boss I Ever Had

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

His Companion in Misery.

I was stenographer to a lawyer who was more cuckoo than a clock. I was hired on sight thus: he came over to where I was sitting in a restaurant, quizzed me, discovered I could typewrite and keep books, and told me he would give me twice the salary I was getting. I have a kind face, I suppose.

Well, every six weeks or so this boss of mine was visited by a peculiar harmless form of insanity, which consisted of the belief that he was being pursued, I never knew by whom, for he always referred to his alleged pursuers as "they." At these times he suspected everyone——janitor, elevator men, bellhops, passers-by on the street—all but me. I was his companion in misery; it was not he but we who were fleeing from persecutors. When he felt the malady coming on, he signed several blank checks and entrusted them to me, together with some general orders about the particular zigzag flight to be taken. Then we would jump into a taxi and make the rounds of hotels, sanitariums and hospitals.

These spells usually lasted about a week or ten days; we rarely stayed more than a day in any one place, sometimes only a few hours elapsed before he became seized with the conviction that "they" had got the scent and were on his trail. Wherever we went he created tremendous scenes. I was never sorry for him because in his sane moments he was cruel and pitilessly mean, and these qualities were helped out by a genuine brilliance of mind. I was only sorry that his mania was not more ambitious, for I have always wanted to travel in China, Peru, Hindoostan, Montenegro and other places more curious than the healthatorium, which we honored several times.

In our flights we always took along his papers and ledger, for he was afraid "they" would find out the extent of his fortune. But even I never did. He once told me, "If you ever make my books balance, you're fired." The books never did balance, and "they" never got us. L. M.

He Dreaded 13.

I was once employed by a man whose dread of 13 was so strong I was required to count the letters that came on each of the five daily mail deliveries and never bring him more than eleven at a time—these to be selected entirely at random, if there were more than eleven—leftovers to be mixed with the next lot that the postman brought. In this way there was never one that could be recognized as a thirteener. S. K.

Fancy Work in Hand.

The queerest boss of my experience embroidered—yes, and beautifully, too. I have never seen any better looking work than his.

While dictating letters he would embroider; business conferences found him with his fancy work in hand. Several pillows and other articles of his own making adorned the office (coal and lumber)!

And notwithstanding this queerness he was a regular man, and the kindest and most considerate of bosses. F. M.

Master of All He Surveys.

I was a maid in a family where the man was head, with a capital H. He hired all servants, prepared menus, and checked over all household bills.

When friends were asked he ordered the flowers for decorating the house and table, and arranged them himself, giving his wife not the slightest voice in the matter. In fact, the poor wife was not permitted even the pleasure of choosing her own gowns or wearing the colors she liked. He said, "Today you wear white," or "Tomorrow you shall wear yellow," or blue or black, whichever might suit his fancy.

Judging from the establishment he supported and the lavish way he spent money, also the good standing he was reputed to have in the business world, he must have been a busy man and a successful one. M. T. M.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

CRETONNE SIDEBOARD COVER.

THIS time of year many of us plan to make new things for the house. Among the many attractive articles seen recently were some covers or scarfs suitable for sideboard, table, or a drophead machine.

One of the highly colored, stunning designs in cretonne is chosen, carrying out the color scheme of the room in which it is to be used, and the cretonne is edged with black sateen—an extension hem being set on all around and the corners perfectly mitered. A cover of this kind should not be quite as large as the surface it is to be put on, so that a narrow margin of the wood will show on all four sides.

For instance, if one had a sideboard that measured 17x50 inches on top the cretonne should be cut 12x45 inches, and the finished edge of sateen should measure one and one-half inches. This would make the finished scarf one inch smaller on all sides than the sideboard.

As the sateen hem is, of course, double, it will be better to choose a rather light weight, and if the hem is to be one and one-half inches wide, cut the sateen about four inches wide. This will allow for a seam on each edge. Fold the strip through the center on the length and pin it carefully on the sateen, allowing for the seam on each, and fold the corners so a perfectly mitered corner is made; remove from the cretonne, stitch the mitered seams, and then baste on the cretonne, so that the seam will come to the inside, and stitch. After this is done hem the other edge down over the seam by hand.

If this is not an easy way for you to do the corners, two strips of the sateen may be cut, each one nearly two inches wide. Upper and under pieces may be mitered, and after the outside edge is stitched on the under side may be stitched to the right side along the upper edge and then hemmed down by hand.

Sometimes one will have a sideboard, table, and sewing machine all in the dining room, and covers that match may be made for all three.

A strip for the dining table between meals would be good looking made this way, and it should be long enough to hang properly over the edge on both sides.

If one wanted to put money into things of this kind there is nothing more stunning than a heavily brocaded ribbon, with a border of black satin. These ribbons come wide enough to make the cover for the dining table or sideboard. For a table measuring 45 inches, ribbon 12 inches wide, edged with a 3 inch finished hem of black satin, would be all right, and for a table that width the strip should hang over each side about 9 or 12 inches—making the finished length 63 or 69 inches.

There are wonderful ornaments in the fancy goods sections of the department stores that would look well sewed to each end, and would help to weight it down.

WRAP-AROUND
The Corset Invisible

Trade-mark

It Folds About You Softly

N/68, the Redfern Wrap-around shown above, which is designed for slender and medium figures, folds about you softly and comfortably, and imperceptibly smooths out every imperfection of contour.

The present fashion in dress, with its emphasis on a woman's natural beauty, is merciless to an ill-proportioned figure. It exacts a flat back and the illusion of a long, flowing line, and the Redfern Wrap-around, that marvelous achievement of modern corsetry, is the only corset which is INVISIBLE under the new frocks.

Do not confuse this triumph of corset design with the rubber girdle, which stretches into shapelessness and pushes up on the figure, more of a hindrance than a help in wearing graceful frocks.

This Wrap-around has alternating panels of brocade and silk elastic, the popular waistline top, and light, comfortable boning.

There is a different Redfern Wrap-around for each figure. All materials; all prices. Have your model fitted by a corsetiere in department store or corset shop.

WAITING FOR THE CALL.

BELOVED: 'Tis night! I am so lonely. If you were only here—the dear boy, who loved me once, I know.

As I write I wander back in memory to those dear days when you said you would always love me. We were so happy then. If I had only known that after a few sweet years together your love would grow cold for me, who loved you more than life, dear heart, I would have prayed to die.

But God did not call me then. He gave me a few years of love and happiness, and our darling baby. Now my heart is broken and God in his goodness and mercy will call me soon.

I know I cannot live much longer. I am so tired. I am sorry because of baby. It seems as though I could not leave her. But I know you love her, even if you cannot find room in your heart for me, her mother. I want you to come when I am gone, and take her back with you.

Teach her love and honor. O, my dear, will you help her to remember her mother? She must not forget I loved her so. I know you will do what I ask, because you love her, too.

Beloved, I am waiting for the call to come. When I leave this world of sorrow I will leave all sad memories of your falseness behind. My darling, you do not know how I have suffered. I wish my heart could forget for a moment and I could see you again in memory as you used to be.

But I cannot forget. I will remember until the last how your face shone with love for her. With her hands on your dear face, I saw you clasp her to your heart. I heard the low spoken words of love, then, my darling, you gave to her, my false sister, the kiss that should have been mine. How could you, O, how could you deceive me, when I loved you so? Can you be happy when I am gone—I wonder?

I forgave you, my husband, long ago. I pray every night for strength to forgive her. Please think of me kindly when I am gone. Remember, I loved you with all my heart until the last.

Good-by, God bless and keep you, until you come to me where hearts are not broken and thrown away.

YOUR WIFE.

Your Son His Clothes and You

WELL-FITTING clothes give a boy confidence—and they strengthen your confidence in him.

That is why boys and mothers both like Kaynees.

Kaynee blouses and wash suits fit as though custom made. The sleeves are the right length, the yoke falls naturally into the lines of the shoulder, and the collar has the neatness that pleases you and the comfort the boy needs.

You will notice the exclusive patterns, the latest checks, stylish stripes and good, solid colors.

As for economy—you can tell by the feel that the material will wear. If you have bought Kaynees before, you know that the sun and laundry won't fade them. And the good style lasts till he can wear them no longer.

Leading stores everywhere sell Kaynee blouses and shirts for boys and washtogs for younger boys.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Though she is past 84 years of age, Mrs. Rebecca Wood has just made final proof on her 640 acres of grazing land near Buford, Wyo.

Miss Maude Howell is said to be the only woman stage manager in the world. She has acted in that capacity for the last two years for George Arliss in the "Green Goddess."

Today almost every woman in Russia is a worker. Former princesses keep lodgers, daughters of former rich bourgeoisie dance and sing for a living. Even the wives of high soviet officials work in offices and elsewhere to earn an income necessary for their living expenses.

Mrs. Bessie T. Redman of Seattle, Wash., is probably the only woman in the country to take up tombstone making as a business.

Fort Leavenworth, Kas., has the only organization affiliated with the General Federation of Women's Clubs composed exclusively of the wives and daughters of army officers.

Pretty, Wavy, Curling Hair Without Hot Iron

Here's a simple method which is a favorite of the belles of a certain exclusive social set. It will give your hair such a pretty curliness and lustre and permit you to do away with the ruinous waving iron forever. Just get from any druggist a few ounces of pure liquid Silmerine, and apply a little with a clean tooth brush just before doing up the hair. This will give you a real surprise. The fascinating, fluffy, wavy effect will appear so natural, and there will be no greasy, gummy, streaky or other unpleasant trace of this harmless liquid. You can exercise for hours in the gymnasium, dance all evening in a heated ballroom, or take a long motor trip, without fear of your hair losing its curl—indeed, you won't need to again use Silmerine for a considerable time.

Polish This Way to Preserve Your Teeth

It is a startling fact that 95 per cent of adults have pyorrhea. This begins around the necks of the teeth and exists a long time before its nature is suspected. Infection spreads, the reddened or swollen gums retreat from the teeth, bleed easily, pus pockets form, teeth loosen and fall out if the trouble goes uncorrected. Once-a-Week Tooth Polish is an effective preventive. It stops, by polishing the teeth, the formation of tartar and other irritating accumulations which is one of the primary causes of pyorrhea. If all people knew this, druggists would be unable to supply the demand for this remarkable polish.

AFTERNOON AT CHERUITS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—A Cheruit success. And a success of Cheruit's is always a great success indeed. Nobody caters to a more sophisticated public. I was going to slip the adjective "French" in between the words "public" and "sophisticated," and caught myself just in time. That would have been limiting Cheruit's clientele unjustly and giving an insufficient scope to the image which the mention of her name would conjure.

She lures all of the nationalities, and when her name is pronounced I think of a little drawing room—far too little—in which some lady of the time of Louis XIV. must have discussed with her lord how insufficient it was for entertaining her after dinner guests who came in for the music and the dancing after the collation had been served. I don't know whether she was sophisticated and modern enough to complain about the lighting, both artificial and natural, but at least all of the guests and clients of Mme. Cheruit do who crowd here to see her lovely clothes. The crystal chandelier remains the same as in those days of voluptuousness, and when we steal a moment from the displays in front of us to look out through the long French windows we see the stately, symmetrical Place Vendome.

But what always interests me more in this house, next to the collections, is not the historical setting, but the assemblage that has come to enjoy the treat. I think of one American woman in particular, who is so rich it almost hurts, and her good looking husband, whom she brought to enjoy the treat. He was square of chin and grizzled and magnificently set up both as to physique and the tailoring which covered it.

She had so hoped he would enjoy his afternoon and stay long enough to help her select something. But she had not meant he should enjoy it quite as much as he did. For the mannikins all took a fancy to him, and stopped to show him each costume in detail, until the proceedings got his wife's attention off the matter of selecting her opera costume for next winter's display, and she took her magnificent looking husband away even before the antique chandelier was lighted with its pale light, that seemed to flow from another century, and the evening things were on display.

But my image of that room is not complete with that one picture. I think of the opposite side of the room on that same afternoon, when the two Japanese women considered among the most gorgeously dressed women of Paris were there, and the leader of them had her husband along, too.

Whenever I ask who those people are—and I see them every place—the reply always comes promptly, "O, they are the Rothschilds of Japan."

So I gather they are rich. And for that or some other equally good reason (and I don't know any other half as good) all of the mannikins are forever trying to lure that husband as well. But perhaps because she has been differently brought up, or perhaps because Japanese women are not so fond of their husbands, this wife does not let it disarrange in any detail so important and delicate a proceeding as the selection of a dress.

Meanwhile one of the best dressed and most celebrated of the demi-mondaines of Paris attends the afternoon performance quite alone, letting no such disturbing influence as sex blight or in any way affect so important a matter as the selection of a costume. She wore a lot of monkey fur and affected stern lines, although the irregularity of her features could not quite stand it, and otherwise dressed in the manner which the artist and I have so often analyzed as comprising the essence of chic.

There were Spaniards in that gathering, and Swiss, and even English—all of which is equivalent to saying what I have been aiming at throughout this letter—that Cheruit is international.

And here is an offering of hers. It has 1810 or directoire lines in the lapels of this otherwise severely straight coat, which buttons by means of seven buttons that slip into seven long buttonholes. A directoire spot of embroidery is appliqued over the right breast, the way we sometimes work monograms on nightgowns. There is a jabot of plaited organdy filling in the area surrounded by the lapels. The costume is soft gray, and so is the hat, which is screened with a little eye veil of tulle. This is being worn by Mrs. Herbert Worth, one of the smartest of the New Yorkers living in Paris.

Here is another of Mrs. Worth's new gowns from Cheruit. It is of brown silk, and striped, with a curious bertha collar—one might almost generalize that Cheruit is running to berthas—that is made into a tooth shaped border which shows its irregular coast line to advantage, as the collar hangs over the bodice. There are tight sleeves which also terminate in pointed, tooth shaped edges that take the place of cuffs.

The belt is of cire leather in gray and is also trimmed in pointed pieces appliqued on the material. Perhaps it might be more literal to describe the belt proper, or the foundation for it, as being of the "goods" itself and trimmed with a tooth shaped edge of the cire. Two ornaments hold the belt together. The skirt is gathered full in front and is tight in the back.

And here is a Cheruit evening dress, also for Mrs. Worth. The bodice is in a beautiful shade of green with tarnished gold in design crushed into it. It is embroidered around the belt and the neck line. The skirt is of old gold lace that lengthens and drags along the ground in the back. The fan—an important part of the costume—is of green gourrah feathers. With this costume Mrs. Worth wore to the opera the other night a mantle with gold design on shrimp colored velvet and a sable collar. She was really stunningly handsome and smart.

The fourth offering is by Lanvin and shows an entirely accordion plaited dress of green crepe de chine of the almond shade. It is made in the kind of bodice that we used to call "jumper," the waist of which is indicated by a belt with tiny longitudinal tucks in the manner of the rest of the dress and a low pocket. The jumper and coat are heavily embroidered in silver and black.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

PLACING YOUR DISCARDS.

TODAY finds many of us right in the midst of preparations for moving, doesn't it? And how the old things pile up—things we had forgotten we had!

Among them are many we simply can't use, and yet it costs us a pang to throw them away while there's service left in them. And throwing them away is not only wasteful, but positively tragic, when we consider what a tremendous help they would be to poor people.

Old rugs, even the most threadbare, would be Godsends to many a family living in bare, damp basements; an old bicycle, doll buggy, or child's tricycle would be the first joyous spot in the life of a poverty oppressed little boy or girl. Why not, then, make an effort to put these things to use?

Moving time gives us all plenty to think about, I know, but, hard as it seems, we always get through it somehow. And when it's all over won't it be far better to look back and think that all the old discards are making life better and better for some one? Won't it be worth the effort?

Simply write, telling me what you have, and I'll give you the name of some one to whom your discards will mean more than you ever imagined.

Suitable for a Girl.

"I have a pair of brown oxfords, size 5A, a brown taffeta silk tam hat, and a black leather bag I am no longer using. They are in good condition, and would be suitable for some girl. Kindly send the name of someone who could use them. F. R. H."

Books to Give.

"We have a number of school books of the higher grades, which we shall be pleased to give to any one calling for them. The list consists of books on higher arithmetic, algebra, geometry, trigonometry, astronomy, physiography, physical geography, chemistry, economics, latin, German, French grammar, musical exercise book, etc.; also a few books of fiction, geographical magazines, and an assortment of other magazines. As we are going to move the first of May, kindly print my letter as soon as possible. M. R. H."

Offers Silk Pieces.

"I have a basket full of silk rags, wound in balls, that I would gladly give to some one who could use them. I was going to make them into rugs, but haven't the time to do it. "G. T."

Sewing Under Difficulties.

"I have read and heard of the wonderful ways in which you have helped needy ones, so I am coming to you. I am 16 and a working girl, and make most of my own clothes. I have no full-length mirror or dressing table, and sometimes my clothes turn out dreadfully crooked and uneven because I cannot fit them on before a mirror. Perhaps some correspondent has an old dressing table with a long mirror—or just the long mirror—to give me. I will be so grateful. J. T."

We Hope So.

"Has one of your readers a piano instruction book to spare for an invalid? E. S."

Can't Make Ends Meet.

"I am a woman with five children and a husband who has been ill for two and one-half years. I am trying to make ends meet but cannot do it. Have some of your readers discarded clothes for my children? Boy, 13, wears size 5 shoes; girl 10, 13½ shoes; boy 8, 9½ shoes; boy, 6, 7 shoes; boy, 4, 6 shoes; and if your readers will send me summer clothes, I will be grateful. MRS. S. B."

Loves a Garden.

"Will you ask your kind readers to send for my address when thinning out shrubs and bushes, or instead of discarding any garden plants to pass them to me? I love a beautiful yard, but have not the means to purchase many seeds. We have made our 'tumble down shack' look habitable, and a nice garden will improve it further. "MRS. B. F."

Ask Tennis Net.

"I wonder if it would be possible to secure the loan of a tennis net for this summer? I am president of a girls' club, and we aren't able to buy a net. If some one would lend us one for this summer, we would take excellent care of it and return it in perfect order. "M. H."

He Wants a Home.

"We have a black male kitten about 9 months old, without a white hair. He is well cared for and in good condition. We cannot take him with us when we move on May 1 and want to find a good home for him. M. L."

Widow Asolutely Penniless.

"I am a young widow—with a son four years old and another coming soon. I am tragically unprepared for it—absolutely penniless. When I think of what will become of us unless we get assistance from some source, I could actually go mad.

"I loathe finding it necessary to ask for help but circumstances make it imperative—for the children's sake. I have an opportunity to take an unfurnished room—but I haven't a thing in the world to put into it.

"I wonder if any one would give me a bed and whatever else in the way of furnishing it that they might wish to dispose of. I would love to have some linen, both bed and bath. I will appreciate it so much if some one will help me. B. E. O."

Variety of Books.

"I have an adjustable dress form—full length—I would like to give to some one; also a gas heater [not cooking stove] in good order. It heats one large or two small rooms.

"The following books I also offer: Algebra, high school word book, trigonometry, composition and rhetoric, arithmetic, chemistry, etc.

"I would like two or three addresses to which I could send current magazines at the end of each month. Some are suitable for men, some for women. I would prefer giving these magazines to shut-ins who cannot afford to buy them. If you do not know of any such, then suggest some institutions, please. "M. J. R."

Offers Piano Rolls.

"I have twenty 58-note player piano rolls which I will be glad to give to any one who will call for them or pay transportation charges. B. L. T."

Offers Dress Form and Shoes.

"I have the following articles to give to any one who will call for them: Adjustable dress form, couch, pair man's shoes for broken arches, 8½ size, pair woman's shoes, 3 B. D. J. M."

Rose Jar Recipe.

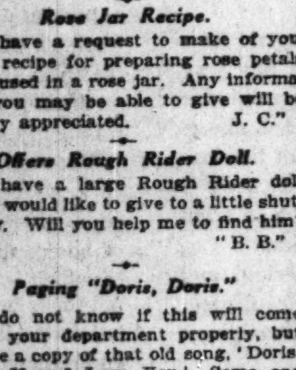
"I have a request to make of you, for a recipe for preparing rose petals to be used in a rose jar. Any information you may be able to give will be greatly appreciated. J. C."

Offers Rough Rider Doll.

"I have a large Rough Rider doll that I would like to give to a little shut-in boy. Will you help me to find him? "B. B."

Paging "Doris, Doris."

"I do not know if this will come under your department properly, but I'd like a copy of that old song, 'Doris, Doris, How I Love You.' Some one please send me one. M. M. M."



Cantilevers Are All-Day Shoes

You can put on a pair of Cantilever Shoes in the morning and wear them until you go to bed at night. You don't have to change into old shoes for comfort; and Cantilevers are shoes smart women wear daytime and evenings with sports clothes and tailored suits.

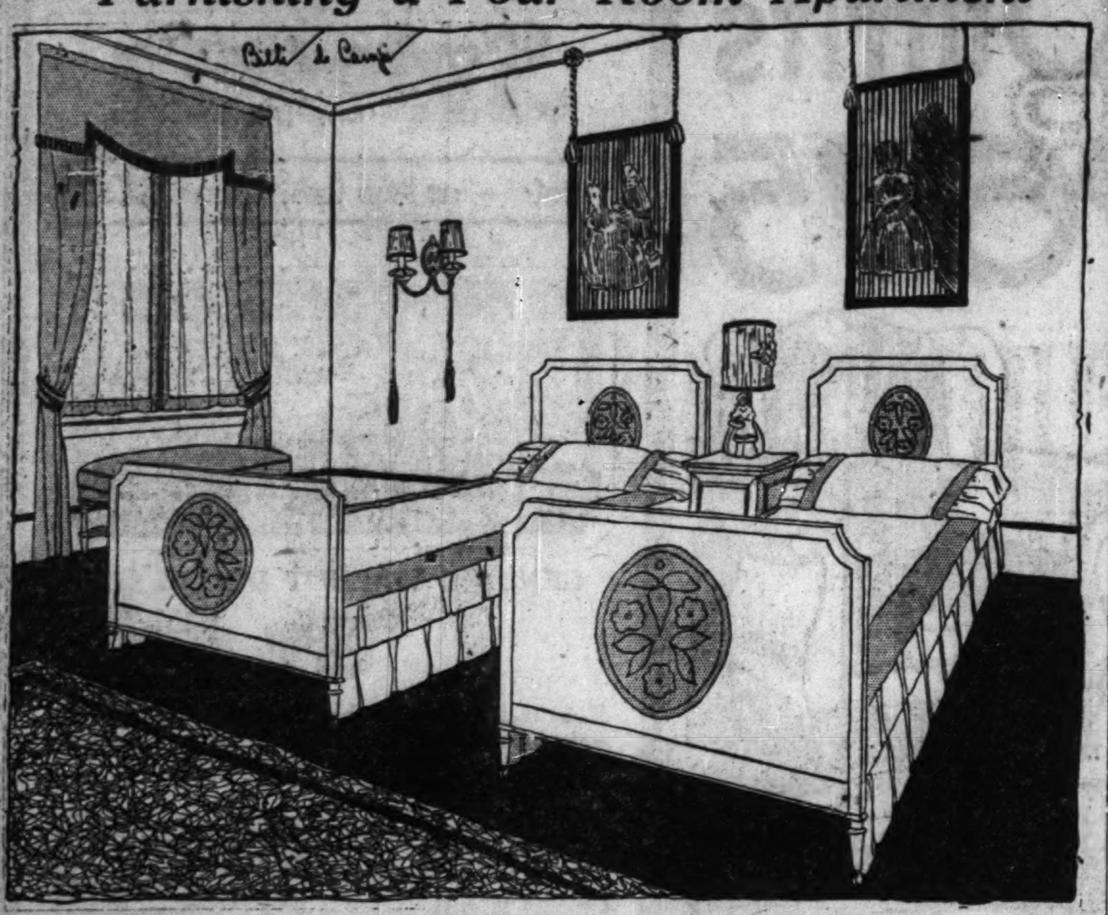
Furnishing a Four Room Apartment



Brown mahogany furnishes this bedroom.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By Anita de Campi.

DUE to servant problems at the present time, a great many people find it convenient and comfortable to live in four or five room apartments. They desire that the rooms be moderately small, so as to lessen the housecleaning difficulties. Still, they detest the cooped feeling that is apt to prevail in the average small apartment. Economy of space and labor may be combined with a pleasing sense of spaciousness, however, if the proper decorations and furnishings are introduced.

Quiet harmony, resulting in restfulness, is imperative in small rooms. Walls, ceilings and floors are the first consideration, as the handling of background has a strong effect on the general aspect of the room. It is not always necessary to have plain walls. Many interesting treatments may be introduced successfully. Plain, neutral toned walls, however, always are in good taste, and are to be advised in case of any existent doubts. The ceilings, in most cases, should be slightly lighter than the sidewalls. Dark stains or paint should ordinarily be used on the floors.

Unobtrusive, well designed furniture is more appropriate and practical for small rooms than elaborate, crowding pieces. It is to be remembered, too, that the selection of textiles and colors is important in simple furnishings, as the charm and distinctiveness of the ensemble is largely dependant upon these items. Pieces which are capable of two or more uses are highly desirable.

Recently I was invited to inspect a four room apartment which had been completely furnished for about $1,000. It was really surprising to see what delightful and lovely effects had been attained. Maybe it would help some of you or give you suggestions to hear about it.

Ecru paint had been used on the walls of reception hall, living room, and dining room, and the ceilings were old ivory. This repetition of color on the walls of the three rooms which opened into one another made each room seem larger than it really was. In the reception hall there was a console table in Queen Anne style, finished in brown mahogany. A decorative letter holder and a silver box were placed on this table. Above there hung a polychromed wall mirror, about 14x20 inches. A Queen Anne chair, of antique brown mahogany, completed the furnishings of the hall.

In the living room there was an overstuffed arm chair, covered in brown denim, and embroidered on the seat and back with floral motifs, done in colored worsteds. An Adam rocker, with cane back and side wings, had a seat upholstered in jade green damask. It was necessary that sleeping facilities be provided in this room. The regulation day bed seemed really too narrow to be comfortable. One of the convertible davenports, while they are quite suitable for occasional use, seemed unsatisfactory for an everyday piece, due to the extra work and time, and closet space required for the daily folding and complete disposal of all of the necessary bedding. Still, an ordinary bed, with one footboard higher than the other, would have looked out of place in the living room. The problem was satisfactorily solved, however, by the purchase of two of the low footboards of some three-quarter width beds. These were used together, forming an attractive and comfortably wide day bed. The bedding could be left on this, concealed beneath a good looking dark cover.

This day bed was placed sideways to the wall. Colorful extra cushions converted it into an agreeable seating space. Placed beside the arm chair was a brown mahogany magazine stand. An Adam library table, of brown mahogany, had a drawer for the accommodation of pen, ink, and stationery. Jade green drapes were hung over ecru voile glass curtains. Accessory cushions were of blurred rose, gray, and green cretonne. On the library table there was a dull silver lamp, with a clear rose colored silk shade. The 9x12 Wilton velvet rug was a deep malachite green.

For the dining room there was a three piece antique walnut table. This was made of three entirely separate pieces. The central, oblong one was used on ordinary occasions, when few were to be seated. In addition to this, there were two semicircular end tables. These could be set against the wall, singly, and used as consoles, or added, one at each end of the oblong, to make quite a good sized dining table. There were six chairs, of unique design, matching the table, with blue leather slip seats. A lovely set of china, with floral designs in peasant style, enlivened the built in glass-doored cabinet, and added color and character to the room.

Brown mahogany furnished the bedroom. The twin beds had solid head and foot boards, on which motifs in color had been applied. There was a dresser, with a large mirror, three small drawers, and two large ones. Matching the dresser was a commodious chiffonier. Between the beds was a small table, on which was placed a glazed turquoise lamp, with a mauve and a gold colored silk shade.

In addition to these mahogany pieces there was a comfortable wicker arm chair. Mauve rep, flounced and trimmed with sand colored bands of the same material as shown in today's illustration, was used for bed and dresser covers. There were ecru net sash curtains, with mauve drapes. Striped linen, in turquoise, mauve, and sand color, with hairlines of black, covered the cushions of the wicker arm chair. Two small colonial rugs, combining the same colors, were sufficient, as there was not much clear floor space. The wallpaper was two-toned ecru in fine stripes.

Jade green and white was the color scheme used in the bathroom. The walls were tiled to a height of four feet and the space above was enameled oyster white. Above the lavatory was hung a good sized oval mirror in a jade green frame. Practical as well as decorative were the sash curtains of white voile, dotted with jade green. A green and white rag rug was used on the tiled floor.

In the kitchen, which served also as a breakfast room, rose, leaf green, and white were the dominant colors. There was a white enameled kitchen table, with a knife drawer, and three white enameled chairs. These had pads, with detachable covers of rose colored chambray. Green and white linoleum covered the floor. Leaf green paint was used on the woodwork, and the walls were light ash green. Most of the utensils were of white enamel, matching the stove, sink, and furniture. White scrim, with rose colored chambray overdrapes, curtained the windows.

Answers to Queries.

E. D. M.: Yes, buttercup yellow and delft blue make a cheerful combination for the kitchen. With the furniture and rugs that you have for your dining room, natural colored sand plastered walls would be quite attractive, with old ivory voile glass curtains, and rose colored taffeta drapes. A figured rug, in Chinese blue, burnt orange, dull green, sand color, and black would be nice for the living room. Have sand colored silk gauze curtains, with Chinese blue taffeta drapes. One lamp shade could be of burnt orange taffeta, under shirred black georgette. The combination of reed and painted furniture would be quite appropriate for the sun porch.

S. W.: The green silk of which you sent me a sample would be attractive as drapes for the windows in your living room and study. You could use an ecru lining. Taupe mohair velvet would be nice for the upholstery of your three piece set. Have two toned ecru paper for your walls, and use a nigger head brown rug. Bright orange colored taffeta, veiled with midnight blue georgette, would make attractive lamp shades. Carry out a color scheme of light yellow and corn flower blue in the bedroom. Use gold colored silk gauze, without overdrapes, at your dining room windows.

R. J. R.: Primrose yellow wall paper, with an indistinct figuring of white, would look well with the woodwork in your dining room.

* *

A. H.: Have ecru silk gauze glass curtains in your living room, with striped casement silk drapes, in mulberry, old blue, and black. Use mulberry velour portieres.

Explanations in Order.

One summer day John and I were sitting in the swing on the front porch of our cottage. All the others had left, leaving us alone with two chaperones and the 5 year old daughter of one of them.

The latter had established herself on the front porch with us, and, seeing John lean over to whisper in my ear, called out, "O, they tissed each uther."

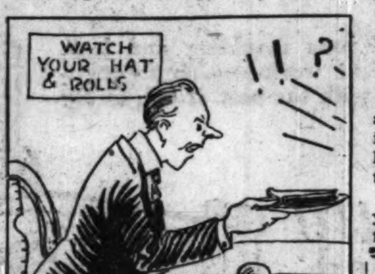
Of course, the chaperones came to see what all the commotion was about, and the explanation that followed only made matters worse. E. J.

Deep in Thought.

It happened in a crowded restaurant. I was slowly eating my lunch, and having several things on my mind failed to notice a young man seat himself opposite me.

Deeply in thought, I absent mindedly reached across and helped myself to his rolls.

Nothing dawned upon my abstracted mood until I heard him say quite icily, "Would you care for my pie also?" A. L.



Trials of the Stout.

My surplus flesh has always been a great source of amusement to other people and of great trial to me. When I was in high school I was almost as broad as I was long.

In the Latin room chairs with wide arms such as are used in dairy lunchrooms were changed about from the three prim rows in which they usually stood to a large semi-circle, as there was an exceptionally large class.

The first day of this arrangement I happened to get into the room early, took my assigned place. After the others were in I noticed that the arm of the chair next to mine was pushed over within a few inches of mine, thus effectively hemming me in. I sat still, hoping that the teacher, a young chap with an overdeveloped sense of humor, would not call on me.

He did though and waited, a bit annoyed, for me to rise and recite. I frantically motioned for the students next to me to move their chairs, but they only grinned. The teacher discovered the trouble. Then came my most embarrassing moment.

"What's the matter?" he asked maliciously.

"I—I can't get out," I panted suddenly, all out of breath.

He held his breath a moment, then burst into laughter, with the entire class a roaring chorus. W. E. B.

Within Earshot.

During my first year at boarding school I occupied an alcove in a dormitory, separated by white canvas curtains from six or seven similar ones.

One afternoon some of us were holding an animated conversation regarding our new acquaintances.

"Katherine," I said, "you're from Miss Ritter's home town. Are her curls natural or does she spend that half hour, during which I hear her puttering around 'after lights,' in putting them up?"

No answer—only a chuckle from Katherine. Miss Ritter was in her alcove! J. E. M.

Imagine How She Felt.

My most embarrassing moment was one day when I was riding on the street car. I wanted to get off and the motorman asked, "You want to get off here?"

"I said, "Yes, ma'm." J. H.

Jealous of Her Dimple.

A new girl came to school one day and, not knowing that I was standing near, said, "Just because Mary has got such a pretty dimple she thinks all the boys like her."

Stepping forward, I said, "Thank you," making the situation unpleasant for us both. M. L.

LOSING WEIGHT?

If Stomach Is Gassy, Sour, Acid, with Belching, Heartburn and Pressure, Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Any number of thin people have great trouble with what they eat or drink and suffer with indigestion. The food does not seem to prepare itself to nourish the body. The stomach is in an acid condition and such people often complain of weakness, rheumatic pain, headache and a run down condition when what they need is the alkaline effect to overcome or neutralize this acid condition. A host of people have found that by chewing one or two of the large white tablets from a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets they get this alkaline effect, they then begin to pick-up, [illegible]ke on firm flesh and eat whatever [illegible] like and feel fine. CHORUS MEN COME INTO THEIR OWN.

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In days of yore, the chorus man was a person who at least once in the evening came out in shiny boots and a hussar's uniform, whose clothing the rest of the time was pretty nondescript, and whose big moment came when for ten seconds he was allowed to put one arm about the prima donna while she sang something about "All the Boys Are Wild Over Me."

In those same days—and today too, in some musical shows—whatever shekels there were to be spent upon the clothing of the chorus were devoted to fitting out certain women members of the ensemble so they could march on to the stage resembling a hot fudge sundae or a lobster mayonnaise or a "Girlie of '63," or whatever the song happened to call for. The chorus man? Well, that was the trouble. He was just the chorus man.

But his day has come, and is coming, if "Jack and Jill," the more than successful musical comedy now running at the Globe, is any criterion. It is perhaps the first girl and music show on record where attention has been paid and money spent in dressing the chorus man like a human being, where care has been given to details of his dress, and his clothing has been designed and cut specially for him. And it shows.

John Murray Anderson, who is a pioneer in a great many other things in musical comedy, is also the pioneer in this. It was probably because Clifton Webb, his leading man, is something of an authority on clothing, and is so well dressed himself that Mr. Anderson asked him to design the clothing for the chorus; in fact, gave him carte blanche with the job of dressing them.

Any one who goes to see "Jack and Jill" cannot help noticing the difference between the men's chorus of this show and that of the average musical comedy that he has been seeing. The usual chorus man, when he was not dressed in the shiny boots and uniform mentioned above, was more likely than not to be dressed in rather tight fitting, unconservative clothing peculiar to third rate vaudevillians. A suit that a gentleman would pick out at his tailor's was more or less unknown to the general run of chorus men. But in "Jack and Jill" we see not only a stage full of well dressed boys but boys well dressed in the increasingly popular English way. There are no tight trousers or high waisted coats. Every boy looks as though his clothes suited him, and were not the first things he could lay his hands on in a hurried dressing before the evening's performance.

Interested, we went to see Clifton Webb, who is responsible for this unusual state of affairs, to find out how, why, where, and when it was all done. We found him in bed, laid a little low by constant rehearsing made necessary by frequent changes in the general scheme of things of the show. This, of course, must be taken into consideration. No changes are to be expected, and so it is more than likely that the costumes we shall mention will not be the same when Tom, Dick, and Harry take Mary, Jane, and Gladys to see "Jack and Jill." But the same idea will be behind it all. The boys may have new ties and a change of vest, or such, but they will still be individually and carefully dressed.

Mr. Webb was most enthusiastic on the subject. "I chose every suit, tie, and pocket handkerchief worn by the men in the show," he told us. "I didn't want them to look as though they were in uniform, and so I tried to give to each man the clothes that best suited his type. Some of them wear double breasted suits, and some single breasted, according to which style is most becoming.

Of course Mr. Webb could not have each man in a different colored suit. That would have made too much confusion of color on the stage, as the women furnish so much variety of costume, and the principal men would not stand out sufficiently. In the first act he took dark blue as a uniform color and put the variety and individualism into the waistcoats, collars, and ties. The shirts were all plain white, but the collars were wing for those who wore them successfully and turndown for the others. Ties were all four-in-hands and were chosen with care to type. Some wore single breasted waistcoats and some double. There were one or two fancy buff colored vests to add variety in a quiet way. No one wore jewelry, not even a watch chain.

In the second act the chorus had its one change, with the exception of a fancy dress affair, which was outside of Mr. Webb's jurisdiction. In the second act all wore black cutaway coats with black and white checked trousers. All wore bow ties, of different patterns. At no time did they have hats.

Since we saw the show some of the principals have been changed, and so it is useless to go into detail on what was worn by the absent members. The successors have dressed in an entirely different style of clothing to fit their interpretations of the parts. For instance, what is now, we believe, a French count, was at the time of our presence at the Globe theater an English duke. His interpretation of the part was comic, an element which was put across partly by his clothing. As he was short and stout, the extremely full English trousers he wore, and which, in the words of Mr. Webb, "made him look as though the balloon were going to ascend," gave a humorous aspect. Jack, the lover, whose personality suggested the college boy, was dressed in college boy style.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions away go indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

Olive Tablet Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

The little new boy in our neighborhood is the direct opposite of Robert. He is a dreamy child, while Robert is active and full of motion.

One day recently this child came over to play. He sat on the floor looking at an engine of Robert's, evidently studying its makeup and its various working parts.

Robert wanted to start to play, so he said: "O, Fred, quit thinkin' thinks, and let's do do's." J. R.

I took Edward to my home to spend the day. Being the only child, he was greatly surprised to find seven at our house.

He looked up at me and asked, "Do all you folks live here?" E. B.

I am a receiving teller in a bank. The other day two little boys with some cardboard dime savers came to me with this question: "Say, mister, will you fill these for us?" L. R. B.

After spending the winter in the south with the lovely, warm waters of the Atlantic almost on our door sills, I asked my son if he were ready to go north to grandfather's home.

He said he didn't want to go.

When I pressed him for a reason, he replied: "No, I don't want to go to my granddaddy's house or anybody's house if they haven't got an ocean in their front yard." R. R.

While painting the porch windows, a neighbor's little daughter came over to gossip. At one time, when leaning out rather perilously, she cautioned "Now, Mrs. T., you be careful or you will fall and hurt your garden." B. T.

Grandma takes great pride in orderly housekeeping, but the attic is used merely for storage, and things become thrown about in promiscuous confusion.

Barbara, visiting us, exclaimed, "My, grandma, your attic looks excited!" M. B.

Donald was visiting in the country with his mother. She had forbidden him to go into the poultry yard, where there were some newly hatched chicks.

Later in the day she saw him slipping out of there.

When asked about it he replied, "O, mother, I just had to go in and wish the chickies a happy birthday." A. M. T.

This Will Ward Off And Break Up Colds

Just a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin removes the congestion

THE two ailments that people generally regard as of the least importance are in reality the cause of most serious illnesses and of the greatest proportion of deaths. They are constipation and common colds. Many doctors now believe that colds, tonsilitis, a touch of malaria will cause constipation, instead of constipation being their cause. The fact remains that you seldom have a cold without constipation, due to general congestion. The only way to avoid colds is to keep up your vitality. You usually catch cold in the winter if you are run down. Therefore in cold weather exercise more; eat more fatty foods; drink four to six glasses of water a day; keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

You are also less liable to colds if your system is free from the intestinal poisons of constipation, so empty the bowels regularly with a plain vegetable laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

At the first sign of a cold, at the first few warning sneezes, take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin and the congestion will be gone in a few hours. Don't wait until the cold has a grip on you. Mr. Henry Dean, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y., cured a stubborn cold in just that way, and Mrs. Alice Corbbrey of Haskell, Okla., uses it effectively for all the small ills of her family, such as constipation, biliousness, headaches, dizziness, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is safe to give to infants, and all children like it. Before you again resort to cold remedies containing narcotics try a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist will supply you, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

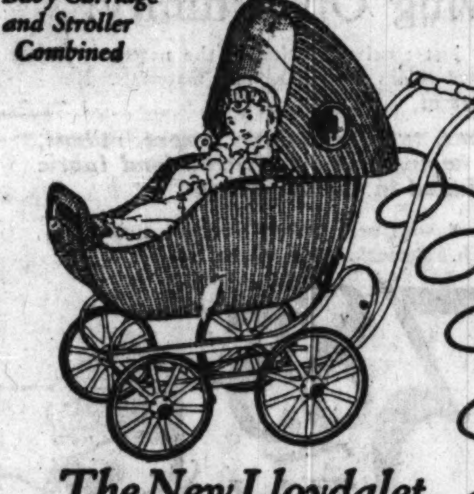
A Baby Carriage and Stroller Combined



The New Lloydalet

Only a mother, who has the daily handling of a baby carriage, can fully appreciate this unusual new baby conveyance. It combines Baby's first and second carriage in one; is smaller and lighter than any other baby carriage; yet almost as roomy as a large carriage.

Naturally, it is easily handled; and it serves perfectly as a stroller when Baby has outgrown a baby carriage. Because of the small space it occupies, apartment dwellers find it invaluable.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

Ask your dealer to show you Lloydalets.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand. Don't accept a substitute. Find the Lloyd name-plate on the seat.

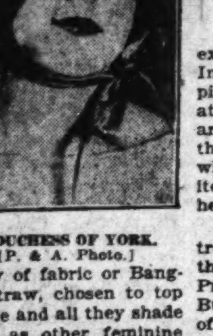
In the Hope Chest of a Duchess

By Elizabeth Craig.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—When Lady Elizabeth Bowes Lyon became the Duchess of York on Thursday she took with her to her new home one of the daintiest hope chests ever filled. Her taste is exquisite and her ideas original without being eccentric. Very petite, Lady Betty has an individual though simple style all her own, and she dresses up to it in a way that proclaims the artist.



DUCHESS OF YORK.
[P. & A. Photo.]

You noticed this first of all in the hats, mostly of fabric or Bangkok or Leghorn straw, chosen to top her hope chest. One and all they shade her face, but not as other feminine faces are shaded, by hats with mushroom brims. My lady gave hers flirtatious strings to keep them at their most becoming angle.

Wraps Are Picturesque.

Then take her wraps. They were neither outré nor dull, neither ornate nor severe in form, but rather the only wraps that would have framed her elfin personality, picturesque without being theatrical. For cold days she treated herself to a sable squirrel full length coat with wide sleeves, the whole lined with striped brown crêpe de chine. For cold evenings she chose a white fur cloak, gathered round the shoulders, and provided with a deep collar that can be doubled and worn high when the east wind makes it necessary. This lovely wrap had a band of white crêpe de chine brocaded in velvet inserted in the fur above the hem, and carried upward, panelwise, a short distance at either side. Flat flowers of the fur were appliqued at intervals on its surface, and the lovely lining of white satin was embossed with gold and powdered with posies of blue and cyclamen and orange flowers.

Although her actual hope chest was smaller than that of many a society bride's, every item was so individual, so expressive of the wearer's individuality, that in effect Lady Elizabeth had a larger and certainly more interesting trousseau than many another bride who allows her dressmakers to rule her taste and decide on a number of items required.

As was to be expected from one who since her debut in London society has shown a strong preference for cloaked effects, the future Duchess of York had packed away in her hope chest a number of picturesque cloaks for wear over afternoon frocks. One, of a lovely shade of blue velvet, is collared with white fox and destined to veil a picture evening gown of silver tissue with panniers of blue net and girdled with wee pink rosebuds.

Included Several Tailor Mades.

At the same time, as if to show my lady is not slave to any one style, the bride elect included several smart little tailor made suits with high collared jaunty sacque coats in her trousseau. One, in gray, which along with beige, brown, and an atmosphere blue, seems to be one of the bride's favorite daytime shades, judging from the many times these colors were repeated in her hope chest, had a simple hip length coat with a gray velvet waistcoat, intended for wear with a little close fitting gray and mauve flower trimmed hat. Another trotteur, of wall flower brown wool marocain, with a high Medici collar and wide sleeves all beautifully embroidered with wool stichery was accompanied by a tiny straw hat of the same shade trimmed with uncurled ostrich feathers. Lady Elizabeth also chose a three piece suit, comprising a straight hanging little frock with a plain, almost mannish coat, both braided to match the blue cloth material.

Unlike her town trotteurs, the country suits chosen by the bride were mostly in the vivid shades I think so becoming to her warm piquant coloring. One, a three piece to which she shows great favor was of chestnut suède with a silk jersey bodice to tone, the short suède jacquette accompanying being drawn into a tight band which fastened closely round the hips with a single button. Equally suitable for driving, motoring, or walking, it had a jaunty brown felt sports hat to give the top note to the color.

As was to be expected from an open air girl, the future duchess also added several knitted suits to her hope chest for country wear. The one I envied most of all was in mole gray, bound with braid, with a wrap overskirt, and a short, little loose hanging coat bound to match. To wear with it was a tomato colored crêpe de chine casaquin buttoned down the front and girdled with a narrow band of the material and a tomato colored cloth hat with a plaited brim to match the closely fitting quartered crown. I expect the bride-elect will also sport her brown and white flecked tweed sports suit early in her honeymoon days, so fond is she of tweed. It, too, was bound with braid and had a collarless coat with a single button. With this there was a yellow suède pull-on hat and crêpe de chine casaquin. to match with a turnover collar.

Boudoir Wear Fairylike.

To come to boudoir wear—it was so exquisite it was almost indescribable. Indeed, it looked as if some of the pixies that are said to haunt the Den at Glamis castle had used their fairy art not only in its fashioning, but in the making of Lady Betty's lingerie, which is partly developed in the favorite blue, now called after the bride herself.

No boudoir caps were included in the trousseau. Neither Princess Mary, the bride-elect's dearest friend, nor Princess Pat favored them, either. But the boudoir coats, the latest form of dressing jackets, and matinée jackets, the negligees and the rest gowns, were one and all adorable. Crêpe de chine and satin in ivory white, shell pink, Betty blue, and champagne were mostly used in their making.

Imagine one boudoir coat in softest white satin, bordered with snow marabou, and another of Betty blue softened down with swansdown, while pink marabou fringed a matinée jacket of azure blue. Champagne crêpe de chine was edged with swansdown for another boudoir coat; and still another, of blue broche, lined in ivory crêpe, was hemmed with the same fluffy trimming.

Her rest gowns were equally picturesque, whether trimmed with malines, fillet or Carrickmacross, which are her favorite laces. An exquisite negligée of rose pink crêpe de chine was the envy of all, with its rouleaux edging and scalloped wing sleeves; as also a filmy wrap of old parchment colored silk crêpe and malines lace with wide sleeves and a crêpe girdle.

Penchant for White Lingerie.

Most of Lady Elizabeth's lingerie was made at home by her mother, the Countess of Strathmore, her maid, and an old family servant, and I should not be surpprised if the rumor were true that the bride-elect made some herself, so expert is she with the needle.

No matter the craftswoman, the result was exquisite, marked by the absence of all elaborate trimming, by the absence of embroidered monograms and the eccentric color scheme so often chosen by modern brides. Fairylike is the word which best describes it.

As the future Duchess of York herself remarked on choosing some of her underwear at an Irish linen establishment: "It is astonishing that one can make such lovely things with a simple, fragile needle."

And that is what one felt about all the lingerie. The softest of cambric and gauzy lawn was openworked by elfin hands. To some sets were added the finest of Valenciennes lace, to others the daintiest point à jour work.

The bride showed a decided penchant for white lingerie.

Sets Seal on Lace.

As will be noticed, Lady Elizabeth—who, by the way, numbered some exquisite tea gowns in her hope chest, including a lovely thing in Brussels lace—set her seal on lace trimmed lingerie, which will have the effect of making démodé, for this season at least, most of the hand embroidered and plisse dessous so much the rage up to the moment.

Just as dainty in her hosiery as in her lingerie, My Lady Betty chose for her hope chest besides smart sports stockings, some of which I am told are being woven near her Scottish home at Glamis, gossamer silk stockings mostly with fancy clocks.

So that when the Duchess of York unpacks her hope chest she will find cheek-by-jowl thick warm sports wear like that which she has worn so much on her Forfarshire moors and the most fragile of cobwebby garments, almost in some cases like dolls' garments, so petite is she.

But before she left for her honeymoon gowned in soft crêpe marocain patterned in its own soft gray between a dove and a mole shade. Short sleeved, square necked, with a loose girdle, and a coatee to match, which tied at one side in a bow whose ends were the extension of the band which formed the bottom of the coatee, Lady Betty's going away toilette had not a bead, a frill, or trimming of any sort to enhance its beauty. Nor did it need anything but the little close fitting hat to match which the bride had massed with flowers of the same wondrous hue.

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon has got the clothes sense, all right.

If Hair is Turning Gray, use Sage Tea

YOU can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Never Makes a Hit.

"Dear Miss Blake: I don't know whether you answer such questions as mine, but am writing to you, as you always give good advice to young people. I am a girl of 17 and am invited out quite a lot, but I never seem to make a hit. I do not know how to dance, but would like to learn. Could you tell me of some good place to learn at a moderate price? MARY."

In almost every community nowadays one may find a dancing school. And I do think it quite important that a young girl know how to dance. Because she is awfully out of things if she cannot. Inquire about a normally priced school, and be sure it has a nice patronage and is of good standing in the community.

Wait a Year.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 15 years of age, attending high school. My mother does not allow me to go out with boy friends. Recently a young man in my class asked me to attend a photoplay with him, but my mother would not give me her consent. Do you not think she is a little too strict? "E. L. C."

Do you think mother too strict, dear? With all the things she reads about that happen to young girls allowed to roam the streets at night? I do not think so. Just wait another year and then she will be more leinent with you, I'm sure.

She's the One to Advise.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man 21, and am going with a girl of the same age. I have recently left high school, after much illness, and am puzzled as to my future. Could you tell me if you think it would be wise to enter the business world or to go in business for myself, as I have assurance of financial independence, but this will prevent me from seeing my sweetheart except on Sunday, if at all. Please, Miss Blake, help me out. "S. L. M."

Why not talk it over with the girl? She is the one who can best advise you, S. L. M. You will flatter her by courting her advice, and if she be your true mate she will advise you so that you will make a real success of your life.

Class Him with Impossibles.

"Dear Miss Blake: Some months ago I was introduced to a young man and we were mutually attracted toward each other. He took me out many times and at all times treated me respectfully and wonderfully. Naturally I fell deeply in love with him.

"After we had gone out together for several months he asked me whether I loved him and as I couldn't lie to him I told him I did. Since then, although we see each other every day, he has appeared quite cold and has not asked to take me out, but from what I know of him I believe he still cares for me.

"When he was with me he seemed to be nice, respectable, and gentlemanlike, but when in the company with his friends he acted absolutely impossible. About two weeks ago we had an argument and haven't spoken since, but I must be frank and say I still care for him. Will you kindly advise me what you think is the best course to take in the matter? FAY."

Now your best move is to make him believe that your affections, too, have turned cold and indifferent. But do you really think, dear, he is worth your wasting youth and precious heart beats upon? If you can, I should advise your trying hard to consign him to the impossibles on your list of men friends.

Women's Work the World Over

Miss Darthela Clark of Philadelphia is a registered master mechanic.

Because of the fact that the congregation was made up almost entirely of women, young women were called upon to act as ushers, take up the collections and read announcements at a recent Lenten service in St. Paul's Episcopal church in Richmond, Va.

Quite a number of women in New York earn from $10,000 to $30,000 a year designing dresses to be worn by other women.

With a membership of 400,000, the Needlework Guild of America is one of the largest organization of women in America.

Betty Lawrence of Montcliar, N. J., is the head of a brush factory, built to national proportions by her own effort.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance union is devoting more than 100 pieces of property in the United States to the comfort of women and children.

One-sixth of the income tax received by the state of New York is paid by women.

At the age of 43 years, Mrs. William Geotsch of Ethan, S. D., is the mother of eighteen children.

The American Women's club of London is launching a campaign to raise $100,000 to purchase a clubhouse.

Miss Ivy Cummings recently won the sports model event in an English auto meet, getting home ahead of a number of male drivers.

In the Tripolian mountains many women live underground, only coming up from their cave homes once in a lifetime, when they marry and change their abode.

How to Win a Man

By Doris Blake

"Never show your temper. All right to have one, but don't use it in public." So says this Ziegfeld beauty.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Why is it that a mere and often insignificant and temporary connection with a musical show seems to endow a girl with all the charms of Venus, Cleopatra, and the queen of Sheba combined?"

So, inquired Dan O. Caswell, son of a wealthy and socially prominent Cleveland widow, one cold gray dawn after he discovered there remained one thin dime between him and the one-half million dollars dissipated in little more than six months after Miss Jessie Reid first turned her dark brown orbs upon him.

"These same young men to whom the show girl represents the essence of beauty, wit, charm, and all the other attributes that make a woman desirable," further soliloquized Daniel a-come-to-divorce-judgment, which eventually freed him from this famous Ziegfeld beauty and highest paid chorus girl in New York, "these same young men would not waste a glance upon many of the young women if they saw them in the environment from which they had been graduated to the show. How many young millionaires, for instance, would waste their fortunes and their time pursuing waitresses around the country. Yet some of these chorus girls have reached their present eminence from such humble stepping stones."

JESSIE REED.

Seeking an Authority.

What magic spell is woven to completely obliterate the past? What spell to so enliven the present—for enthusiastic males?

Wherein lies the wizardry which separates the front row theatergoer of five round silver gentlemen so ungrudgingly, even though his point of vision be detached? The lure which fills an ordinary matinée with 75 per cent male representation? Which makes walking checkbooks of men who have been known to earn by the sweat of their brows?

The answer is—

Well, maybe one of the gentlemen present will tell!

I looked to Miss Jessie Reed for it, she being the acknowledged super-rose in the Ziegfeld horticultural gardens. We had tea over it at the Biltmore.

My first observation was that no matter what the early environment most of these girls know how to get clothes as well as where to get them and how to put them on.

Pretty, of Course.

A quiet but chic small navy milan hat with a jaunty plaited ribbon ornament, edged with a slight dash of Belgique red, covered her auburn "bob." And she wore a dark blue frock with the same note of color in the embroidered yoke, full length cut squirrel fur coat, black satin pumps, and hosiery.

Pretty, naturally, or she never would have got by the board of censorship in the Ziegfeld projection rooms.

"I've been on a vacation this week," Miss Reed explained. "I worked forty odd weeks straight through, without a vacation, and I needed one. I am taking a moving picture test, as I feel I had better get out of the Follies before I am pensioned.

Inquiry revealed her connection with the Glorified Temple of Youth or the Temple of Glorified Youth dated away back. Tutankhamenly speaking to 1918.

"If you stay in one place too long they keep too close track on your age," she confided. "On matinée days you ought to see the way people crowd around the exit door and gaze to see if you look any older up close. I dash out through the front of the house so they can't see me.

"Be Sweet and Natural."

"Thou shalt flourish in immortal youth" is not writ upon the boards of the Broadway stage.

"What kind of thing do you want to do in the movies?" I asked her.

"I want to do the country girl type, so I can wear a sunbonnet and simple clothes," she answered.

Boy, page Dr. Freud, please!

"How do you vamp them?" I swerved directly into the problem most vital to me at the moment.

"Who?" Jessie throws back.

"The men, of course."

"O, I don't know," was the reply.

"Any ideas on how they are vamped then?"

"I think a girl has to be sweet and natural and——"

Flash of Diamonds.

"You like diamonds, don't you?" I was forced to reflect aloud, with that $12,000 solitaire flashing back and forth from sugar bowl to teacup.

"Like pearls, too?" I hinted.

"Pearls are bad luck," replied the beautiful one. "Worse luck if you haven't any. I'm outa luck.

"You were saying—sweet and natural—then what else?" I plied.

"Never show your temper. All right to have one, but don't use it in public. Men don't like you to have a lot of makeup on, nor flashy clothes, I've discovered. Don't talk too much. I don't talk much. They like to be amused, that's what."

"What gift did you like best?" I pursued.

"A box of sunflowers from Texas," answered she, who was born in the Lone Star state, where also she got her first stage experience and the husband who preceded Dan Caswell.

Likes 'Em Middle Aged.

Miss Reed doesn't hanker particularly after the gay young blades of 80 or thereabouts. "One silly old fool," she related, "with one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel, gave me his picture. Then sat on my doorstep until he got it back. Wealthy old bird, too. The old ones are gayer than the young ones."

"What manner of man do you like, then?"

"I like a business man, middle aged. Yes, better than literary or professional men. They are more entertaining and more sensible."

"Don't you like the young ones to play around with and dance with?"

"No, I find the older men dance better than the young ones. They don't do the funny hops. I like them well dressed and good looking.

"Kinda prosperous like," I hinted.

"Yes. Entertaining. I don't like them fat, either. They must have nice teeth. I love beautiful teeth. Brunettes with black eyes, too. No diamond stickpins or loud checks in their clothes.

"No loud checks about them at all?" I waxed facetious.

"Now, I'm not a gold digger. They've made me out one long enough. That's why I'm going to play the country girl type in the movies."

Hers Are Butterfly Wings.

"What kind of compliment do you like men to pay you?" I asked.

"I like them to say I'm sensible."

"Not that you are beautiful?"

"O, every woman likes to be told that."

"You asked me what gift I got I liked best. Well, it wasn't the sunflowers. It was my divorce, which I got a couple of weeks ago from Caswell."

The court records have it that Dan Caswell was granted the decree and the grounds for divorce were charges of gross neglect of duty. Well, some men just do expect a lady to be youthful and beautiful and dutiful, forgetting quite that butterflies are not offsprings of the bee family—forgetful that "butterfly wings are born for a bower where roses and lilies and violets meet."

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers to Beauty Seekers

What's your beauty ill? Too fat! Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

ELIZABETH: THE SHAPE OF one's lips cannot be changed much after one has attained full growth, unless their unshapeliness is due to irregularities of the teeth, which dental surgery may correct, or to the practice of keeping the corners of the mouth up in a smile, in place of the downward drooping effect worn on so many unhappy faces. But with those two corrective measures a magic improvement may be effected in the prettiness of the mouth.

MARGARET: TO TAKE THE sting out of callouses, soak the feet in hot water for fifteen minutes at night before retiring. This will soften the skin. Then rub with a piece of pumice stone, removing as much as you can of the callous. Do not cut with a knife or razor. In the morning rub on a little cold cream or vaseline. A handful of sal soda added to the water will help greatly. Apply spirits of camphor on a piece of cheese cloth to blisters that come from perspiration. Better send s. a. e. for the other foot trouble information you want. It tells how to take care of the ingrowing toe nail, corns, etc.

AGATHA J. G.: IF SOME MORE or less ingenuous person would put up in bottle to sell at, say, $1 a tiny bottle, a pure soap and water preparation guaranteed to remove blackheads if applied with a face brush and warm water, I have no doubt it would meet a lively sale. More effort is wasted in lotions and bleaches and mud baths when a good soap and water and a scrubbing brush would do the work of removing blackheads much more speedily and permanently. Follow the scrub with a warm rinse, then a cold water one, and finally an ice rub. If you keep that up regularly you will have no more touble from the pesky annoyers.

WORRIED: I THINK YOU ARE wrong on that skintight fitting sleeve for the fat arm. It presents it in all its grossness, whereas a looser sleeve, particularly as they are designed today, is infinitely more attractive. The same idea holds true of the tight fitting dress. The long straight lines are kindlier, as they leave more to the imagination.

ROBERT: YOU WANT TO TURN your mustache from blonde to brunette? I could advise a henna, but suppose it should turn red—then what? If you don't like the thing why not turn it loose on the barber room floor? Somehow I cannot warm up to a dyed mustache nor the troubles attendant thereupon, hard boiled as I am. But my sympathies must be elicited by a nobler cause to dye for.

M. B.: THE SKIN OF THE FACE shrivels and acts like that with the disappearance of the subcutaneous fat just beneath the skin. The part played by this fat is seen in the appearance of wrinkles on persons who become thin and their disappearance when weight is regained. No, I certainly would not advise paraffin injection. It is an atrocious practice. Lifting the skin, when done by an ethical surgeon, is highly satisfactory, but I must advise you to know that the surgeon is a man of honor among his profession.

FRANCES: A GIRL OF 16, 5 FOOT 7½, should weigh about 130 pounds. You may allow a few pounds either way and still consider yourself right weight.

M. B. R.: SALT BATHS FOR REducing have little or no value, certainly no permanent value. No, it is a harder job than that. You should weigh about 135 instead of 168. You must diet and you must do more exercise than just turning on the water faucets in the bath tub. Willing? All right; send along the s. a. e. for my reducing course. And then let me keep an eye on you as you train down. I'd be glad to have you report, if that will be any moral support. I am always awfully interested. Am I not the doctor?

LUCILLE: HAVE WITHIN HANdy reach a bottle of alcohol and some fresh absorbent cotton to dip into it and wipe the face off with it several times a day for the oily skin trouble. Don't use any cold cream unless you use it simply as a cleanser, wiping it off thoroughly and then rinsing the face in hot water followed by ice rub. The idea is to close the pours to prevent the oil from exuding freely. Vaseline applied with a tiny brush will make the eyelashes grow.

X. Y. Z.: HOW TO REDUCE A double chin harmlessly? You cannot be too tender with it, X. Y. Z. Else it will mistake your intentions for encouragement. No, we must shake it off pretty vigorously, stretching the neck to the right and then to the left and forward and backward. But if you want to see the exercise in illustrated form, send me a s. a. e.

E. M.: IF YOUR HAIR IS OILY you should wash it every two weeks at least. In fact, you may shampoo it every week if necessary and be sure there will be no harm done. I have a pamphlet on the care of the hair which contains a tonic for oily hair and also a salt treatment which I would recommend your taking. Send s. a. e.

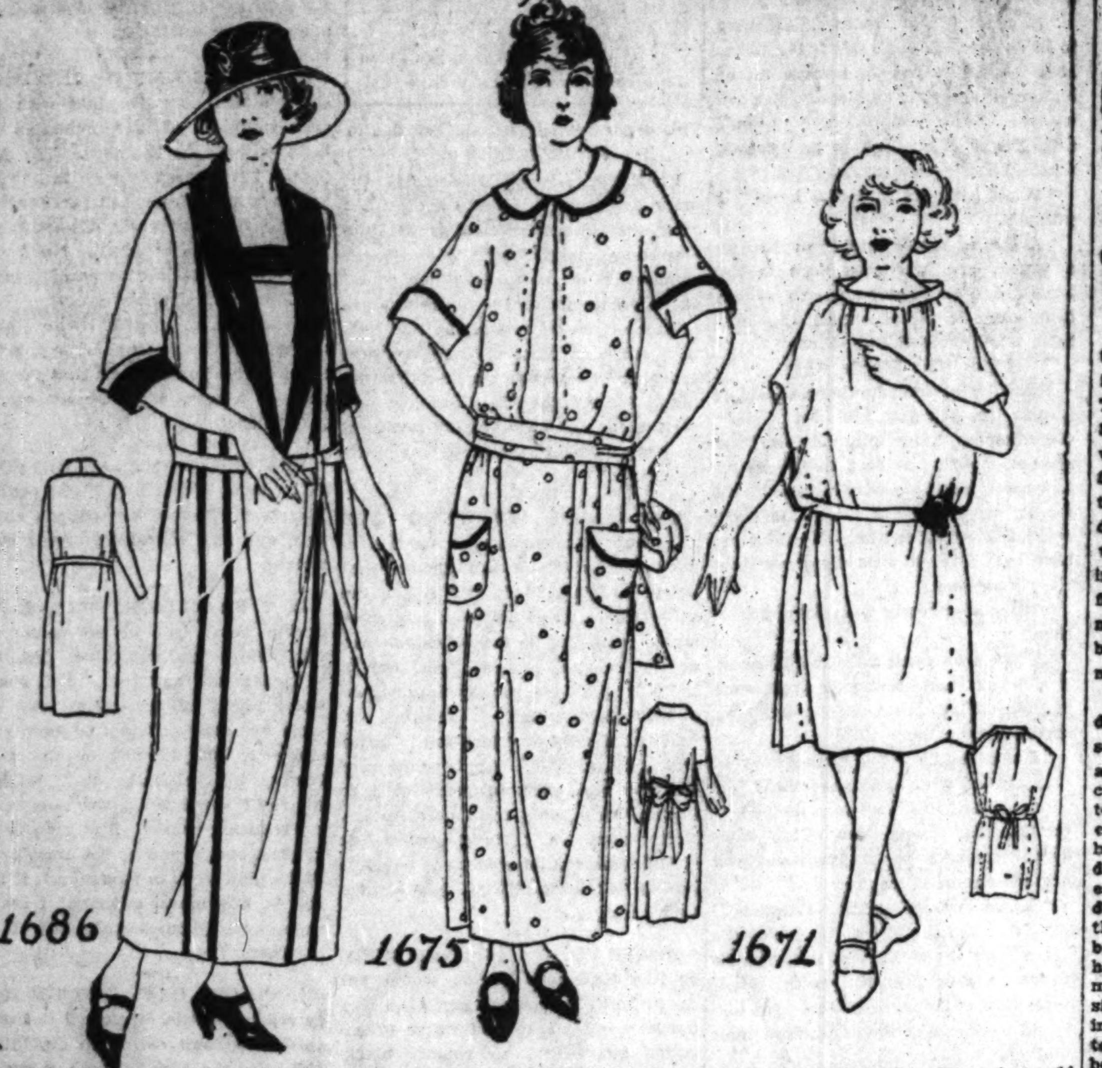
Patterns by Clotilde



1686—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 46 requires 3 yards of 54-inch material.

1675—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36-inch material.

1671—Girl's dress. Sizes 8 to 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 36-inch material.

How to Use the Patterns.

THE up and down trimming bands on pattern No. 1686 make it a particularly becoming design for a full figure. The pattern is in two pieces—front and back—and the front is cut from the neck to the waist line and finished with a large collar—seamed in the middle of the back. A vest is set in the opening, being sewed to the facing on the right side, and fastened with snaps on the left.

The pattern provides for a three quarter or a full length sleeve, the latter being made close fitting by means of a dart. In putting the long sleeve together be careful not to stretch the dart seam. Both edges are more or less bias and will stretch easily. After both seams are basted together hold the sleeve up and see if the dart seam looks smooth. If it seems at all twisted rip it carefully and pin together again with as light handling as possible, so as not to stretch either edge a bit.

The shorter sleeve is somewhat easier to make, and no doubt would be more comfortable for warm weather.

There are wonderful trimming bands in different widths, embroidered in colors, and one of these bands could be used on each side of the front, or several rows of narrow braid would look well.

Of course, it depends largely on the material used for the dress, as to what the trimming shall be.

Patern No. 1675 is a simple, yet smart design, that is becoming to the majority of women. The waist and skirt are cut separately, and set into the same band. The waist closes at the left side of the vest, and the one-piece skirt is gathered at the waist and slashed and fastened at the left side.

The short kimono sleeves are seamed on the shoulder—making a better fit for many figures than when it is laid on a fold there.

If one desires a longer sleeve, the pattern provides for a one-piece section that is attached and gathered into a wristband. Pretty pockets, collar, and sash complete the dress.

Mercerized cotton poplin, with vest and bindings of collar, cuffs, and pockets made of a contrasting color, would be attractive, or plain chambray or gingham, trimmed with one of the small checked ginghams. Percale made with bindings in the color of the design on the material would be pretty to wear at home on warm days. Either shrink any wash material you may buy or make sufficiently loose and allow for a deep hem at the bottom.

Pattern No. 1671 is a design that will be becoming to slender girls. A not too heavy material should be used. Most of the usual wash materials, taffeta, or challis would be appropriate.

The dress is in one piece and closes on the left shoulder, a perforation showing how far down the seam is to be left open. The front and back are gathered at the neck edges and finished with a straight double upstanding band. The front and back are slashed at the waist line between perforations and the edges are finished to slip the sash through.

The side edges of the dress are brought together and stitched through from front to back along lines of perforations given on the pattern.

It would be pretty to put some cross stitch embroidery down the side edges of the front and back from the top of the sleeves to the bottom of the skirt. Then put a single line of the cross stitch through the center of the neck band. A stunning monogram in the middle of the front of the waist slightly below the middle of the width would add to the beauty of the dress.

The side edges may be bound in a contrasting color if one prefers that to embroidery.

GETTING VEGETABLES INTO THE MENU.

THERE is a "dietetic" vegetable garden in Washington. There is also an experimental kitchen near at hand where, among other things, the different methods of cooking these vegetables are tried out. These are both parts of the United States department of agriculture, which has been searching the world for promising vegetables," with a view to suggesting to those on a restricted diet, particularly to diebetics, ways in which variety might be introduced into the menu," since, they say, the difficulties of the diebetic diet center mainly around the supply of vegetables. In the year 1921 there were ninety-one species planted.

"The difficulties of the diabetic diet" from my standpoint do not seem so much to center around vegetables as around getting anything rightly cooked for the sufferer. Difficulties, too, in preparing a diet, have been enormously increased because there has been so little agreement among the doctors as to what the diabetic should eat. There have been potato cures for diabetics, strawberry cures, and, of all the risky things, egg cures. The number of eggs prescribed for a diabetic have often been enough to kill a well man. Neither the well man nor the sick could utilize so many and either in any case would, therefore, have the torment of working them out of his body.

Even if a vegetable diet could not do all the good it might, it cannot do the harm an egg diet can. And if the supreme test for cooking vegetables is applied and come up to, a diet of vegetables may be doubled or tripled in worth to anybody.

Spare the Salt.

Here is the test of a well cooked vegetable: It is palatable without any seasoning whatever except salt, and in many cases we can spare that. Probably the salt is most suitably used when added to the vegetable at the half cooked stage. In no end of cases the careful preparation of the vegetable counts more than half in its final palatability.

A vegetable diet is now recognized as protective. It protects a human being from the forms of slow deterioration that comes from an imperfect diet. As a curative diet it has long been prescribed for a number of diet diseases, of which diabetics is perhaps the chief or most common. Nevertheless, I can hardly imagine anything less curative than a lifeless collection of cooked vegetables. Every ill person needs to have the incalculable advantage of having every food presented in as highly palatable a way as possible, since that sets the food so far on its digestive way. Unattractive food may be just so much vicious lead to the alimentary processes.

One vegetable alone, cooked to perfection, or a mixture of vegetables may present marvelously delicate flavors or, on the other hand, be an almost nauseating mess which has given off hateful odors in cooking—so losing virtue—and turns out but an unattractive wiltedness.

Cooking Cauliflower Flowerets.

Here is an illustration of the fact that you can cook and eat this vegetable without any dressing or seasoning whatever, although butter enhances any hot vegetable. Choose a head of cauliflower fresh, firm, and not too full. The inexperienced cook can get better results usually if she breaks this vegetable into flowerets and then cooks it gently after due and careful preparation, which begins with inspection, breaking up head, pouring boiling water over flowerets, and then rinsing them with cold water. A flat bottomed aluminum kettle with a cover that will seal hermeticaly is best for the cooking. Have no more than one layer of the flowerets in the bottom of the kettle, with one-half cup of water, which may be boiling to hasten matters, or cold, since so little will heat quickly.

When the water boils turn fire low and the cauliflower will steam done in ten minutes if fresh, in twenty if a bit old, but fifteen minutes is a good average. The flowerets now should be truly white. With imperfect cooking they are gray or pink or brown and strong instead of sweet to the taste. To enjoy this vegetable without any seasoning whatsoever eat it quite hot or genuinely cold. A dinner giving man of the year 48 A. D. promised his guests a "cauliflower hot enough to burn your fingers." One-half cup of water is enough for one large head of cauliflower if correctly managed. Butter and a tiny bit of acid may be used for the finish or a sauce, but try it without.

Cauliflower Leaf Stems.

The ribs of the cauliflower leaves and the stem below the head when peeled, sliced thin, and cooked, in just the same way as the cauliflower, in but a bit of water, after being first scalded and rinsed, resemble kohlrabi, and are worth saving, although bushels of them, perhaps 99 per cent of them, are wasted every year. They make a pretty garnish for a number of things and are one of the life savers, or health protectors.

Cooking Any Greens.

Clean and wash as many times as necessary, scalded to remove any invisible dirt, and sometimes a disagreeable surface quality, and then rinsed in cold water and finally gently cooked in a little water, which may be dried out in seasoning it or in other ways, any good green ought then to give all the stimulus to the digestion and even to the mind that it can give. In this way all its distinctive qualities ought to be as prominent as possible. The point to remember is that any green leaf can be cooked strong, just as tea can by too much heat and for some time. With much water and much heat all the precious mineral or nutritive salts are dissolved out, and thrown away with the water which is too strong to be usable. Present they give delicate flavors, and when lost, the greens may be quite appropriately called boiled hay.

The softer and milder greens, when chopped and heated up with seasonings, may have either an addition of butter or cream. Remember that butter adds as many calories per pound as cream does. Only a little of either is needed, with well cooked greens. A tiny bit of nutmeg adds piquancy. Chopped cold greens packed into a mold are delicious cold, if well seasoned, or may be used with a salad dressing. Cold dandelions need no sauce.

New Vegetables.

Among the vegetables being grown for tests are many that are raised for their leaves—they are greens. In some cases a more common or well known name might have been used, but here is the list as it stands: Anserine, asparagus, basella, bush and pole beans, cabbage, carrot, cauliflower, celeriac, celery, chard, chervil, chayote, collards, corn salad, cress, cucumber, dandelion, egg plant, endive, escarolle, finocchio, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mung bean, mustard, New Zealand spinach, okra, onion, leek and shallot, orach, pai-tsai, parsley, patience, pepper, purslane, radish, roquette, salsify, scorznera, sorrel, soy bean, spinach, squash, vegetable marrow, tomato, turnip, witloof.

Of course, the new thing about these is the variety grown. And the department of agriculture, though working mainly for the diabetic and encouraging him to make a garden for himself, for the sake of getting variety in his diet, adds: "All these vegetables are valuable in the diet of the normal person as well as the invalid, because of the vitamines, minerals and bulk they furnish."

As we know, with the coming of vitamines the medical world began more and more to prescribe vegetables for many physical ills, and the food intelligent began to eat vegetables more systematically, because of the protective value in them—insuring health over long periods of time.

Other Names for New Vegetables.

In this list there is only one, the first, of which I know nothing and have no information about. I fancy it is a green, and it surely was named for the goose (anser). Basella is eaten like spinach. I believe it is a climbing plant. Pole beans are treasures in the home garden. The old varieties certainly furnished the best of string beans and later the shelled beans for the succotash. Cranberry, as I remember, was a favorite variety, but today there is more talk about the Kentucky wonder.

Celeriac or celery root we all know. It is poor stuff if not well cooked. Hot and with a seasoned meat stock—only a little—it is excellent. Slice it, cut it up in dice, and cook in a small amount of water over a little fire in an hermetically sealed utensil.

Chervil is an alternate for parsley, but daintier. The epicure thinks it indispensable with fish. Collards are cabbages that do not head and are thoroughly well known in regions where the kale is most appreciated as a green. Pai-tsai we know well as celery cabbage. Corn salad has twenty names and is common in some of the markets of our large cities, but wholly unknown in others. It is a good salad green, much used by the French in autumn with slices of cooked beet, dressed in a bowl. They call it mache.

Attempts to introduce the chayote into our markets seem to have been given up. The name used has been "vegetable pear," a name used in New Orleans when "mirliton," the Creole name, is not. There is an interesting item about it in the Creole cook book, in which it says, "The botanists call it the 'one-seeded cucumber.' Like almost all gourds, the plant is a vine, and is trained by the Creoles upon trellis, fences, or arbors around their homes. It is not only an ornamental vine but an abundant bearer. The fruit, if properly prepared, as the Creoles know so well how to prepare it, is a delightful dish, and is of a much finer flavor than eggplants, squashes, or pumpkins."

I saw sprouted vegetable pears for sale in Los Angeles three years ago this spring.

Escarole can be found almost any time in Italian markets, sometimes with a bleached heart and sometimes not. It makes a delicious green when well prepared. Finocchio is just the Italian name for fennel, but not every variety has a bulb, which is eaten like celery or cooked like "celeri au jus." One of our seed catalogs calls it Florence fennel, evidently in distinction from sweet fennel, the foliage of which is used for sauces to serve with mackeral, and says: "A delicious vegetable which should be more largely grown. It is extensively used in Italy as a salad, and also may be served boiled." You will like it if you like the flavor of anise, which is mostly something to get used to.

The mung bean has been several times discuseed by the United States department of agriculture. It was discussed in 1919 because exaggerated claims were made for its good qualities and an exorbitant price charged for the seed. It was said then that it was introduced into the United States in 1835 and in 1853 was grown under the names of Chickasaw pea and Oregon pea, etc., one variety being known as Newman bean. In China it is one of the beans used for bean sprouts, bean vermicelli, and bean gelatin (perhaps this is what we see as bean cheese). You can learn a great deal about it, if you wish.

There are more varieties of mustard than most people realize, and the more delicate types make exceptional greens; the coarser ones are used and boiled to their destruction.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

And Actually Smiled.

It happened at a cantonment during the late war. I had just received notice of my promotion, and was telling my buddies the glad news.

Seeing a soldier, whom I thought was my bunkie, standing at the door, I rushed up to him with "Say! Can you imagine me getting a sergeant's stripes?"

He turned around, and I saw not my bunkie, but the hardest boiled, most vitriolic and hated old time sergeant in the outfit.

I expected him to reply with a sneer about "correspondence school sergeants," but instead he smiled—the first time I had ever seen him do so—and said kindly, "Well, son, there's no one in the company I'd rather see get it."

Memory of that remark from a man with some twenty years' service helped a lot during the months in the mud of France that followed. S. B.

The Reason Why.

A friend and I were discussing the number of women who are apparently successful business women, and manage a home also.

I remarked that it was surely an accomplishment, for my home and children seemed to demand most of my time.

My young son, quite unobserved up to this time, spoke up quickly, "And that's just the reason you are such a good mother." C. B. H.

All He Wanted.

On my seventeenth birthday I said to my father, "Do you know, father, I am 17 years old today?"

He said, "My child, if you give me as much pleasure during the next seventeen years as you have done in the past, I shall be well satisfied." D. R.

Best He Ever Had.

Five years ago I taught school in Montana. On Christmas I received a string of red beads from one of my old pupils. I wrote, saying I was surprised he had remembered me, and his answer gave me a thrill: "Five years is not a long time to remember the best teacher you ever had—one who taught you a lot and still let you have a good time." R. B.

The Whole Works.

My young son, a husky lad of 10 years, and sometimes rather difficult to handle, paid me a compliment which more than paid me for years of work and planning.

After a strenuous day when I was helping him prepare for the night, he said: "Mother, I've been thinking that we really wouldn't amount to much here if it wasn't for you. You are the whole works." G. F. R.

Why he wanted to know her

THERE was no special reason for his coming to this dance, and then, in the brightly gleaming lights he saw her! Slender, dainty, radiant, she stood out from among all others like a softly flushing rose.

She was turned slightly from him when his eyes first found her, and he watched eagerly for a chance to see more clearly.

Suddenly, as if his gaze had drawn her, she raised her graceful head and looked at him. Was it possible that anything could be so sweet?

The faintly glowing color of her round cheek, melting into the cream of throat and shoulder. The pure whiteness of the low, broad brow, the coral of curving lips—she was like a delicate miniature on ivory.

For a breathless second he watched her, then hastened to his hostess. "Who is she?" he whispered, drawing his friend quickly toward her.

She was like a delicate miniature on ivory

The delight of a lovely skin

However attractive you may be, it is possible to make yourself lovelier if you use the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian Day Cream. This is a vanishing cream that, when worked well in, is a protection for the skin and a delicate foundation to which powder adheres evenly, and from which it will not easily rub off.

Then, apply Pompeian Beauty Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of a delightful perfume.

Now a bit of Pompeian Bloom for a softly glowing color and added sparkle in the eyes.

Lastly, dust over again with the powder in order to subdue the Bloom. And instantly the face is radiant with added youth and beauty.

If you use these Pompeian preparations together for Instant Beauty, you will obtain the most natural effect. For great care has been taken that the colors blend naturally.

Pompeian Lip Stick is of a rose petal shade and adds yet another touch that will set off your beauty.

The Girl Who Was Out of Date

By MME. JEANNETTE

Not long ago I had a call from a young friend. She came in wearily and sank into a chair. The brilliant afternoon sunlight fell full on her face, and I was appalled when I saw how pale she looked.

"What is the matter?" I asked, expecting to be told that she was ill.

"Oh, I'm just tired," she said; "so tired I don't care how I look."

I was so indignant that for a moment I could not speak. There is no possible excuse for such an attitude!

To make the best of herself is the conceded duty of every woman, young or old; a modish gown means very little when her complexion is uncared for.

"Come here," I said to her, "and let me see what I can do for you."

First I used a vanishing cream, gently patting it into the skin. This was Pompeian Day Cream. I always use this, for it leaves only a faint creamy film on the surface and holds powder and rouge so well. Next a coating of the soft, clinging Beauty Powder. Then a bit of Bloom blended downward and outward from the cheekbone; dusting over all with a last touch of the powder. And this I had done to only one side of her face!

I turned her around to face the mirror. You never saw anyone so surprised! She looked and looked, turning from side to side; and I don't wonder, for she saw two entirely different girls, and one was so much lovelier it seemed incredible.

"That is what you can make of yourself every day, and it will take only a few minutes," I told her.

I couldn't help laughing at her astonishment; she had never had an idea she could be so pretty. She realized now the mistake she had been making, and watched with the keenest interest, while I made the other side of her face just as charming, adding at the last a touch of Pompeian Lip Stick.

She didn't say very much, but all the afternoon I saw her eyes straying toward the mirror. I hoped then that she would profit by my little lesson, and I know now that she did, for I've never seen her looking pale and weary since.

CORSETS THAT ARE DIFFERENT

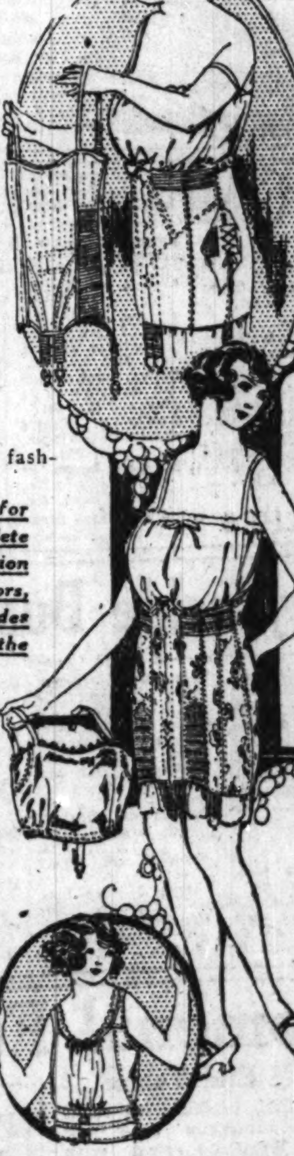
Elastisides

The stout woman is ordinarily the hardest to fit, still we fit more stout women to corsets annually than do all Chicago stores combined—and we have for years past—our corsetieres are trained scientifically to understand the importance of the corset and how it can bring you health and comfort along with the fashionable "lines."

Here you will find special fitters for many services, including a complete Maternity Corset Section—a section for elastic girdles, a section for juniors, a section for stouts—which includes our famous Nemo section with the advantages of the "N. H. F. I." of New York—the Medicanical Health Section in charge of a trained corset hygienist—and, finally, a section for surgical fittings.

We specialize in each division of corset service—fitting brassieres with as much care and thoroughness as we do corsets, with results that are most surprising to many women—every new improvement is featured here first.

A fitting service that has not alone won the approval and support of the majority of Chicago's well dressed women, but of the foremost modistes and physicians as well, for we can and do corset the figure according to the most rigid demands of either—and for our fitting services no charge is made.



The busiest corset shop in Chicago, because of the unusually proficient fitting service we provide—a service every woman appreciates, and especially so the woman who is difficult to fit—the fitting service is free.

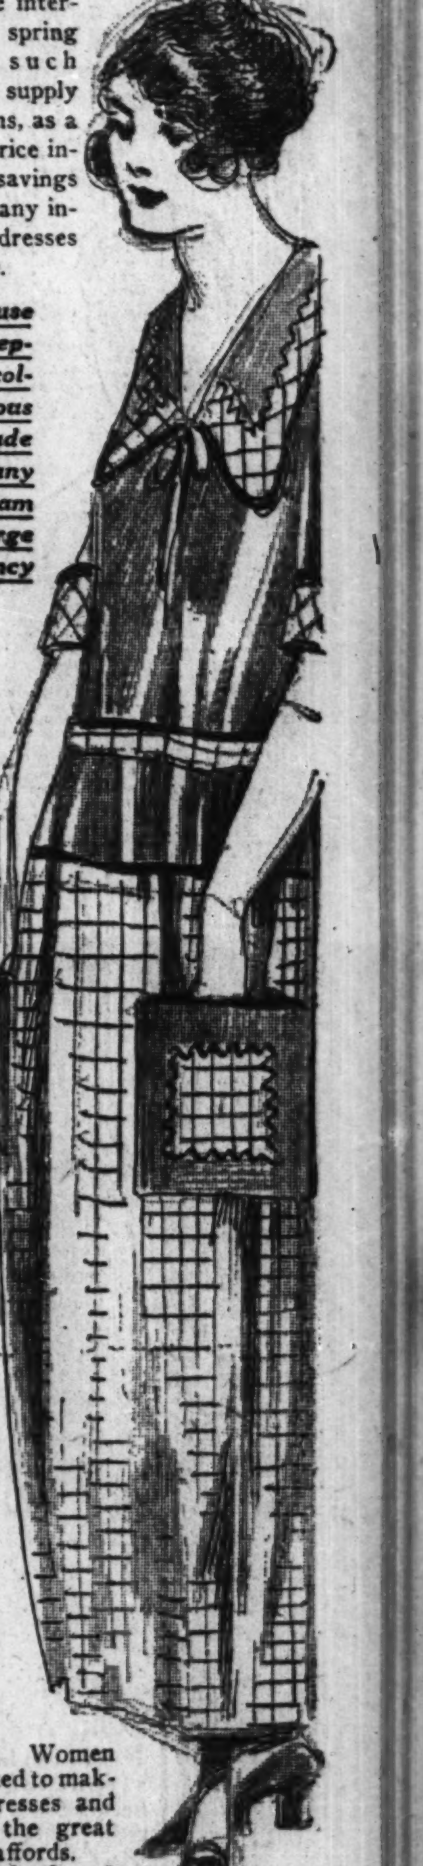
10,000 House-Dress Aprons, $1

—Third Floor—Center—



What could possibly be more timely, or indeed more interesting just now when spring cleaning time makes such great demands upon one's supply of house dresses and aprons, as a sale of them—a sale at a price indicating the greatest of savings—a sale that permits, in many instances, the buying of two dresses for the usual price of one.

Twenty different styles of house dress aprons, made of exceptionally good quality fast colored ginghams, the famous Triangle Brand, with the trade mark on every apron. Many and varied are the gingham patterns which include large and small checks and fancy stripes.

In the assortment you will find not only the gingham house dress aprons, but many in attractive combinations of gingham and plain color chambrays. Their wearing and washing qualities are most dependable.

Daintily trimmed with appliqued designs, rick-rack braid and plain piping, many with organdie vestees, cuffs, fancy pockets, belts and sashes. No woman can have too many house dress aprons, and there are a goodly number in this special offering that are sufficiently pretty in style to be used as porch dresses. We anticipate the greatest attendance any apron sale has ever had in the city.

Twenty styles to choose from, each seemingly more attractive than the other.

Please pay careful attention, too, to the making, the firmly, evenly run seams, the wide, full widths, the perfectly fitting neck and sleeves—the neatness of the trimmings—thoroughly good house dress aprons, the majority of which are $1.75 and $2.00 values—all with the famous "Triangle Make" trade mark, which is a further guarantee of genuine merit and that they are made in a daylight, sunny shop—spic and span and sanitary in every way right here in Chicago. Women who have been accustomed to making their own house dresses and aprons will appreciate the great savings this offering affords.

Hundreds and hundreds of these extraordinary house dress aprons—displayed in a large, roomy, special section on our Third Floor, adjacent to the moving stairway.

Note the illustration—it is representative of only one of two score or more of equally attractive models; some of which are prettily pleated, others are circular, still others are in the draped silhouette effects; most of them are belted with self or corded materials in both wide and narrow widths. Panels and side drapes of georgette seem to hold the center of attention in trimmings, although a goodly number of them are tastefully trimmed with ribbons, pretty flowers and large rosettes.

GOOD-MORNING!

April wasn't a bit stingy with screen contributions! With a few exceptions, film offerings have been one good thing after another. There ARE months, you know, when life for a movie reviewer loses all its sweetness, and the waters of the Chicago river are contemplated with thoughtfulness, if not enthusiasm.

* * *

"BELLA DONNA," with Pola Negri, was a dramatic and convincing photo-play. The foreigner who understands so well how to convey meaning by the flicker of an eyelash was, as Bella Donna, notorious in Paris, an intensely appealing victim of temperament. Another woman in the same part could have so easily revolted one or been merely cheap and uninteresting. Even in her maddest, baddest moments, Mme. Negri kept your sympathy and charmed you by the finesse of her art. The picture was splendidly put on and the star had a good supporting cast.

ANNA MAY WONG.

"TOLL OF THE SEA" was a photoplay with a "Madame Butterfly" motif. It was photographed in natural colors, and besides being exceptionally pleasing to the eye had a sincere and direct heart appeal. Anna May Wong, Chinese, proved herself one of the most finished of screen actresses. Kenneth Harlan played a difficult rôle as well as it was possible to play it. "Toll of the Sea" had "atmosphere"—if you know what that means.

"HEARTS AFLAME" had thrill and "punch"; some marvelous fire scenes, splendid scenery, good action, and direction. A decidedly worth while film production.

* * *

"STORMSWEPT" showed our most villainous screen villain, Wallace Beery, in an entirely different sort of rôle. The picture was rather an unusual program offering, featuring sun, seas, loneliness, and lovelornness. It must be said, however, that the Beery fans infinitely prefer this gentleman as a mean cuss, who will stop at nothing to gain his evil ends.

* * *

"THE FOURTH MUSKETEER," while not a photoplay for men only, was a picture that all men would enjoy. A snappy little prize fighting bit of entertainment, with Mr. Walker, a clean, likable, energetic young chap as the hero. The tale was written by H. C. Witwer, author of "The Leather Pushers."

* * *

"CRINOLINE AND ROMANCE," with Viola Dana in the lead, made a great hit. Sometimes Miss Dana is so much better than at other times. In the present release she is at her best, being exceedingly intriguing in her crinoline and as alluring when she dons more daring garb. She had a

Wampas Frolic and Ball Gay with Ten Thousand

By Mildred Spain.

LOS ANGELES.—[Special Correspondence.]—Adjectives blench. Hyperbole becomes the truth. The Wampas frolic and ball, ladies and gentlemen, was a wow! The Wampas made good its promise. "Every star will be there." And what more could you ask? You've seen a De Mille ballroom setting—a vista of gorgeousness. Beautifully gowned women, balloons showered down on the dancers, Sybaris and Hollywood. That was the Wampas frolic. Only where De Mille is content with extras the Western Motion Picture Advertisers provided real stars—they, personally, themselves.

BARBARA TENNANT.

The ballroom was the big stage in the new studio of Warner brothers in Sunset boulevard. It was bright with blue and gold drapes, lithographs of favorite stars, and boxes for those whom the Wampas have made famous. We noticed that Charley Chaplin's picture hung next to Pola Negri's, the dominant woman from Warsaw. There were four orchestras to provide music, but few could dance—there were 10,000 there.

Barbara Tennant was present in a bouffant gown of taffeta. Viola Dana and her sister, Edna Flugrath, had a box in the center of the floor. Viola was in heavy cloth of gold made with a circular skirt. In the Buster Keaton stall there were himself, his wife, Natalie Talmadge, and Constance Talmadge. Constance looked lovely in a low cut dancing frock of black georgette with clever ribbons made of rhinestones. J. Warren Kerrigan sat in "Baby Peggy's" box, where that young star held court in a short white dress and a red cape. May McAvoy, who came to the dance with Bobby Agnew, was in mirror crepe of gray. Leatrice Joy, who has had her hair shingled, looked like an old painting in soft ivory chiffon.

Andree Lafayette Singled Out Most Frequently.

The most distinguished person in the room perhaps was Andree Lafayette. She was singled out the most frequently during the evening. Her butter blonde hair was drawn back tightly from her face and twisted into a chignon—yes, a chignon. She sat in the box with her husband, Arthur Max Constant, and James Young, her director. Of the American stars Pauline Starke was easily the most striking. Miss Starke wore a simple dress of white chiffon and an ivory and diamond charm on a narrow black ribbon.

Bull Montana received the greatest shout of welcome, and Bull with true kingly kindness waved to all his admirers, while his cauliflower ears shone resplendently. Fred Niblo introduced the "stars of tomorrow" and "the stars of today" from the stage. Viola Dana remarked plaintively that that let her out—she was not a star of yesterday, or today, or tomorrow. The stars of tomorrow introduced were Eleanor Boardman, Evelyn Brent, Dorothy Devore, Virginia Browne Faire, Betty Francisco, Pauline Garon, Laura Laplante, Margaret Leahy, Helen Lynch, Derelys Perdue, Jobyna Ralston, and Ethel Shannon. The debutantes wore white and were given applause for histrionic ability and not for charm.

Ten of the "stars of today" followed in the costumes that had given them the raison d'être to star. Helen Ferguson appeared as the immigrant girl in "Hungry Hearts," Pauline

Words of Cheer Tell of Ravinia Season

By Edward Moore.

EARLIER than has been his practice by at least three weeks, Mr. Eckstein, in his avocational capacity as our summertime entrepreneur of opera, gives out his roster for 1923 at Ravinia. This is as good a place as any to say that, on form and taken in its relation to the rêpertoire of thirty-five or more operas tentatively listed for revival or first time performance there, it is well worth giving out by him through me to you, on the assumption that you are interested in whatever will keep music alive and moving in the weeks between now and mid-October.

This new roster is unrolled, cataloguelike, in the course of what Mr. Eckstein tells us is meant to be "a foreword to the annual prospectus of Ravinia Opera." Which reminds us that all of us may do a bit toward establishing in the mind of the general public here and elsewhere the institutional nature of Ravinia Opera by refraining from referring to its habitat as Ravinia park, although that, of course, is the name by which the delectable alcove on the north shore has been popularly known since it was laid out and set apart for the esthetic uplift of this and other nearby communities. So, because it seems to this writer to be a thing right and proper in all ways to do and to say, we shall hereafter refer to the place itself as Ravinia and to its principal industry in the dissemination of man-made beauty as Ravinia Opera.

FLORENCE EASTON.
Returning to the Ravinia Opera this summer.
[Matzene photo.]

Let us now return to the muttons of our theme—the list of singers. Set out, that list reads thus:

Sopranos—Elisabeth Rethberg, Florence Easton, Graziella Pareto, Josephine Lucchese, Margery Maxwell.

Contraltos and mezzo-sopranos—Ina Bourskaya, Marion Telva, Philine Falco, Anna Correnti.

Tenors—Tito Schipa, Giacomo Lauri-Volpi, Armand Tokatyan, Morgan Kingston, Giordano Paltrinieri.

Baritones—Giuseppe Danise, Vicente Ballester, Louis D'Angelo, Desiré Defrere.

Basses—Léon Rothier, Virgilio Lazzari, Paolo Ananian.

And, before proceeding to such identification as may be required for the unknown and the well known in the foregoing list, it is as well to add that there will be four conductors—Gennaro Papi, Louis Hasselmans, Wilfrid Pelletier, and Giacomo Spadoni—and that the Chicago Symphony orchestra has been reëngaged for both the operas and the concerts.

Explaining Their Allegiance.

Nearly all of the singers and three of the conductors have the right to print "of the Metropolitan Opera" on their professional cards. So, too, has the stage director, Armando Agnini, among those whose return is welcome, for he has done well in the seasons of his work at Ravinia. The non-Metropolitans are the Misses Pareto, Lucchese, Maxwell, Falco, Correnti, the Messrs. Schipa, Ballester, Defrere, Lazzari, and Spadoni. Of these, Mr. Defrere was for a time a member of the Metropolitan's forces; and, also of these, only Miss Lucchese may not add "of the Chicago Opera" when she is bent on identifying herself in print or conversation, though there is a whispered rumor that she will be able to do so soon. She comes from the touring San Carlo Opera,

National Theater Opens with "As You Like It"

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The American National theater did not come off so well at its debut in the Forty-fourth Street theater on Monday night as I had hoped it would. The play, "As You Like It," demands one or two towering personalities to carry it, and these it did not have. The theater is also too large, and this was another handicap, the voices of many of the players trailing off into a mumbling speech that could not be distinctly understood ten rows back. Which, I submit, is no way to start a national theater that hopes to serve as a model for the country.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU.
Playing Rosalind in "As You Like It."

However, it was otherwise a competent performance, and the intent of its promoters is so worthy we can afford to be generous until they stumble to their feet. My only real quarrel with them is that, being practical showmen, they did not realize in Washington, where they opened, that they would have a battle in New York, and reduce the odds against them to the minimum by taking a smaller theater and a few extra days of rehearsal to accustom the players to their surroundings.

"As You Like It," as any one who has followed a Shakespearean rêpertoire knows, is one of the weakest of the comedies in its performance, though one of the most charming in its reading. As entertainment it suffers the common fault of beginning with a flourish it is unable to sustain. The brotherly quarrel of Orlando and Oliver, the incident of Rosalind's banishment, the excellent drama of the wrestling match, and the quickly sprung romance of Orlando and Rosalind furnish a promise so splendid that too much is expected of the rest of the play for even a Shakespeare to fulfill. As a result only the impressive strength of the Rosalind has been able in the past to carry the play.

This Rosalind Isn't Like Predecessors.

There was the great Wallack Rosalind in Rose Coghlan, and the great Daly Rosalind in Ada Rehan. Modjeska, with Maurice Barrymore as her Orlando, the oldsters still rave about as being able to obliterate all memory of the play's weakness; and Henrietta Crosman, the best Rosalind of our time, was able to carry the play through a season or two that were completely successful. Marjorie Rambeau, competent and well schooled in the modern drama, is not of this caliber. Pretty and confident, skillful in the emotional incidents (she carried the scene of Rosalind's swooning perfectly), and a good comedienne, she still lacks distinction and poise, and her reading is hurried and without what most old timers insist upon as a proper reverence for the verse.

And so the evening left us disappointed and a little depressed. The supporting cast is able, but no more. Ian Keith gives youth and enthusiasm and a pleasant presence to Orlando. A. E. Anson, a little studied in trying to appear most natural, but giving by far the best individual performance of the evening, was the Jacques, and little Margalo Gillmore a pretty and buoyant Celia.

There is to me something both amusing and courageous about this American National theater enterprise. The men who are backing it represent the shrewdest showmen in America. They are all members of the Producing Managers'

'Summer Stock': A Joy Denied Us

By Sheppard Butler.

WITHIN recent days three distinct plans for summer stock companies in downtown Chicago theaters have come to naught. Each project was soundly conceived, with a roster of capable players in prospect and a well chosen list of worth while plays. Who and what they were does not matter, since we are not to have them. But one cannot help wondering why these enterprises always seem to fizzle in this particular neck of the woods.

Somehow they always do. Time and again within current memory summer stock has been proposed, hailed enthusiastically by every one approached on the subject, and forgotten, for one reason or another, when the time came for action.

So it is with an envious spirit that one hears what is under way in Philadelphia. They have formed a theater guild of their own there, and will begin operations next week, with a resident company serving as background for the ministrations of various visiting notables. William Gillette will start the festivities by appearing in a revival of "A Successful Calamity." Then will come a new play, "Winnie and the Wolves," made by Mr. Gillette from the "Winnie" stories of Bertram Atkey, and to be played by him and Miss Lola Fisher. Succeeding weeks will bring Miss Francine Larrimore in "Nice People" and "Scandal," Miss Grace George in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion" and perhaps "The New York Idea," and Miss Nance O'Neil in "The Passion Flower" and a new play. After that, more of the same if all goes well.

Reviving the Halcyon Times.

Here are the good old days of the "visiting star system" come back into being—the halcyon times when Jules Guerin was a scene painter at Powers', the arrival of Booth was an event, and everybody that was anybody went to the theater. Not many of the present generation remember them, but it is easy to imagine their joys—the endless variety as to plays and visitors of distinction, the pleasant familiarity of surroundings and supporting company, the comfortable habit of going to the same place every week and seeing always something different.

This sort of playgoing is, as Tantalus of the Line would say, sui generis, and vastly different from the sporadic amusement seeking we are accustomed to. There must be a peculiar charm about it; ask your father, or grandfather, if there isn't.

Can it come back? Why, it has. Philadelphia is not alone. Robert McLaughlin has the "visiting star system" soundly established in Cleveland. Henry Miller always takes a group of important people to San Francisco for summer stock. Indianapolis, Detroit, and scores of other cities have long had their resident companies. Folks like them, and, for the most part, they prosper.

But mention New York or Chicago in this connection and the showmen hesitate. We, they tell us, don't want summer stock. They don't know precisely why, but they think they are right. So everything, thus far, has begun and ended in talk.

As has been said, three plans for the coming summer in Chicago have collapsed. A fourth venture is still pending. Ralph Morgan would like to organize a company for summer

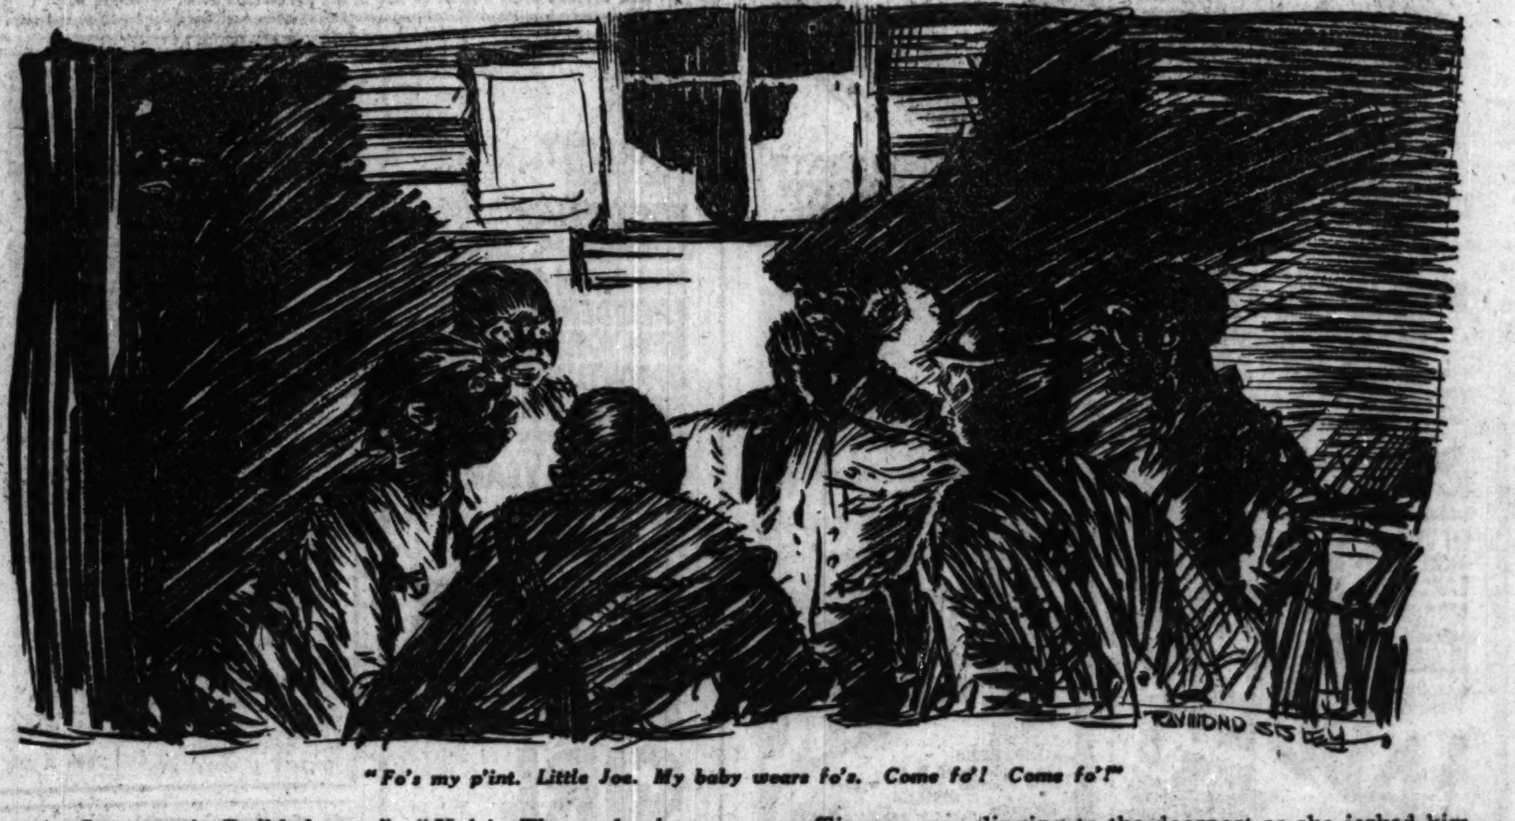
Old Reliable Hears a Tirade on Gambling, and Demonstrates the Eternal Truth

By Harris Dickson



"Fo's my p'int. Little Joe. My baby wears fo's. Come fo'! Come fo'!"

"DAR now! Done cotch 'im."

As she heard her own husband's voice Selina's face turned blacker than the night, with snarling teeth that gleamed like the pickets of a whitewashed fence. She halted in her tracks, head high amongst a dense growth of weeds—stopped to listen with foot half lifted, as an elephant pauses while trampling his path through the jungle. Now she clearly caught the mumbling that came from a deserted shack in "The Bottom" just below her house, and saw a chink of light flickering underneath its door.

"My gal wears nines." Distinctly Selina heard Zack's very words, and every muscle began to stiffen. Unfortunately for Old Reliable, this weedpatch had once been a garden, and Selina need only reach out to grab a bean pole. It was rotten. Selina didn't crave a rotten bean pole. The next pole was sound.

"Two dollars I shoots!" Old Reliable's tone was a challenge which Selina promptly accepted by breaking the pole across her knee, and converting it into a homerun bat.

"Huh!" she snorted. "Dat's my two dollars what I give him to pay de rent." Then Selina tightened the cord about her waist, until two big hips bulged out like a bolster tied in the middle.

"Huh," she snorted. "Dat's my two dollars what I give him to pay de rent."

"Now, den, I'll collect more'n two dollars' wuth outer Zack's hide. Shootin' craps wid a gang o' roustabouts! Jes lissen to dem niggers. Lissen!"

Out from the shack came a medley of guarded exclamations, "Ten's my p'int!" "Big Dick from Boston!" "Come ten! Come ten! Build de ten." "Ugh! Throwed seben, an' fell off!"

Selina put one wrathful eye to a crack and glowered upon the group inside, a group that crouched on all fours in a circle surrounding the nubbin of a candle. Zack's face she could not see, for he had his back toward her, watchful at his front, but with his rear inviting a kick where it would do the most good.

Old Reliable's turn came again with the dice.

"Gimme dem bones," he demanded. "Two bits I shoots."

"Got you faded."

"Dat's bad!" Zack showed disappointment at his roll. "Come out on a fo'. Fo's my p'int. Little Joe. My baby wears fo's. Come fo'. Come fo'."

Again and again he rolled the bones, but a four never turned up, for Selina turned up first, breaking through the flimsy door. The startled negroes glimpsed her club, the kneeling and squatting gamblers, with tense black faces and white eyes, like marbles in a bucket of tar. Unanimously they rose, a covey of fluttered partridges; stumpy negroes dodged out of the back door, long legged negroes dived through the windows, slim negroes squeezed past the bulky woman and were gone; gone, all but Old Reliable.

With one powerful hand Selina caught a strangle hold on Zack's collar. His rolling eyes glanced backward, then like a city dog tugging at his leash, Old Reliable's front paws scrambled to pick up scattered nickels and dimes from the floor.

"Come 'long, Zack. I'll larn you how to gamble off my two dollars—what I worked for."

"But Seliny, I ain't——"

"Don't tell me what you ain't did when I sees what you is did."

"But——"

"Shet up! I 'spicioned you from de fust minit you grinned like a crafty ole possum 'cause I trusted you wid my two dollars to pay de rent. So I jes follered an' cotched you. Come 'long."

Zack might have known that it was no use kicking and scuffling, no use clinging to the doorpost as she jerked him loose, no use hanging on to a bench, for Selina dragged the bench with him.

"Lissen to me, Seliny; jes lissen——"

"Huh! I done lissened whilst you ack so nice an' perlite 'bout you'd go an' pay de rent—you'd save me dat long walk 'cause I was plum wore out. Didn't I lissen den? Now it's yo' time to lissen some. An' de neighbors is goin' to lissen a heap at de yellin' dey hears from my house." Selina had snatched Zack clear of the weeds, and now struck the little uphill path which led to home, sweet home.

"Leggo my neck, Seliny! You's chokin' me!"

"Dat's what I figgers."

"Loosen up, Seliny, an' lemme 'splain. I ain't——"

"Hush lyin', Zack. You's goin' to need breff for hollerin', 'cause I 'lows to larrup yo' anatomy all over dat house, an' den some in de yard. I'll fix you so you can't set down till next year at fo' o'clock—an' den you'll need a powerful sof' piller. Gambled away my two dollars! Huh!"

"But Seliny——"

"Hush! Got a gambler nigger for a husban'. Gambler, same as dat triflin' Joe Trimble."

"Joe — takes home — plenty — money ——" Old Reliable caught just enough breath to gasp it out.

"Shet up! I don't care ef you fotch home a million dollars an' six bits ev'y Saddy night—I wouldn't touch nary nickel o' yo' gamblin' money. I b'longs to de church. Come in dis house—come in here, I tell you."

He needn't try to hang back, for Selina yanked him inside, and Zack didn't relish her preparations in locking the door, in placing the lamp on a high shelf, and shoving a table out of the way, so as to allow plenty of room for the proceedings. Old Reliable couldn't defend himself; Selina gripped his right arm, and he still held something tightly clutched in his own left fist.

"Zack, take off yo' coat—quick!"

He wasn't quick enough, and Selina rapped him over the knuckles. A silver dollar fell from his hand, jingling to the floor.

"What's dat?" She stooped and picked it up, then glanced at him with newly aroused suspicion. "What you got in yo' han'?"

"Nothin'."

"Yes you is!" She forced his clenched left hand on the table and raised her stick to whack it, when Zack opened up—showing several dollar bills, and silver, with a handful of smaller coins.

"Zack, whar'd you git all dat money?"

"Winned it."

His ill-gotten gains lay upon the table, and Selina released Zack's right hand to grab the pile. Both of them grabbed together, but Selina hurled Zack aside and flung him across the bed.

"Keep away from dis." She beat him off with the stick, like a calf at milking time, then smoothed out the paper money and stacked the silver—dollars, halves, quarters, nickels, and dimes.

As three dollars grew to four, the grim lines in her face began to relax; five, the puckers softened at her lips; at eight she smiled, at eleven she chuckled, and at fourteen she laughed aloud.

"Zack, you done well."

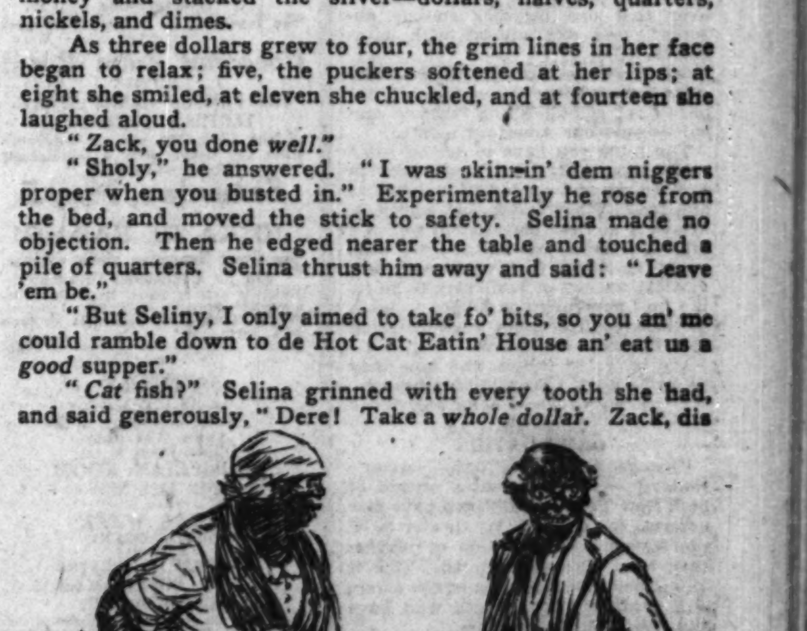
"Sholy," he answered. "I was skinnin' dem niggers proper when you busted in." Experimentally he rose from the bed, and moved the stick to safety. Selina made no objection. Then he edged nearer the table and touched a pile of quarters. Selina thrust him away and said: "Leave 'em be."

"But Seliny, I only aimed to take fo' bits, so you an' me could ramble down to de Hot Cat Eatin' House an' eat us a good supper."

"Cat fish?" Selina grinned with every tooth she had, and said generously, "Dere! Take a whole dollar. Zack, dis money mounts up to eighteen dollars an' sixty-five cents. We'll drap in an' pay de rent; den I'll pay five dollars on my phonygraph, an' buy me a pair o' stockings, an'——"



A silver dollar fell from his hand, jingling to the floor.

"But, Seliny, what dat you say a while ago 'bout you wouldn't touch nary nickel o' gamblin' money?"

"Hesh yo' foolishness! I don't call dis gamblin' money. Gamblin' money is what you fool niggers loses in shootin' craps. Come 'long, honey, less you an' me dress up an' go to de Hot Cat Eatin' House. Zack, you sholy is acted nice dis night."

residence here, and take the Studebaker for the purpose. This he may and may not do. If he does, it should be an interesting experiment.

The Actor's Sabbath.

The agitation against Sunday performances in New York—where there are, in theory, no Sunday performances at all—has spread quietly to Chicago. Entirely aside from the short lived "blue law" bill recently introduced at Springfield, a campaign is under way for what is termed "one day's rest in seven legislation," and a dominant figure in it is the Chicago representative of the Actors' Equity association. He has been in Springfield, sounding legislators on the subject, and has wired his employers that he "will proceed carefully."

Chicago has long been regarded by the players as the city most hopelessly given to the Sunday theater-going habit—they refer to us as "the stronghold of the no-rest territory"—and no doubt, if their leaders impress them sufficiently with the idea that they are fighting for a glorious principle, they will do what they can to close our playhouses on the Sabbath. The Equity loves to fight for a principle.

But if they succeed, it will be more or less of a Pyrrhic victory. Sunday night, in Chicago, is a time of large and enthusiastic audiences, depended on by the managers to recoup losses on less favored evenings and by the actors to build up their records of laughs and applause. (Did you know that, in many companies, the number of laughs at each performance is painstakingly recorded?) Moreover, actors' salaries are paid on a basis of eight performances a week—six night and two matinées. Where Sunday performances are given they mean extra pay for the actor unless a midweek matinée is omitted, which is seldom done.

Thus the Thespians may be at least suspected of not being so unalterably opposed to working on Sunday in Chicago, except perhaps as a matter of gesture. They have lined up, as a body, with the sabbatarians, but there must be some in the rank and file who have their fingers crossed.

News of the Playhouses.

The "bargain counter" playgoing of some thousands of Chicagoans has been ended by the managers, who have decreed that no more authorized cut rate tickets shall be issued. These tickets were not sold to the general public, as in the case of many plays in New York, but were issued to various industrial concerns and welfare organizations, to be used in groups at prices considerably less than the box office figures. Many a long run—for example, that of "The Cat and the Canary"—has been eked out by their use. The ban on them applies to all the downtown theaters except one or two occupied by plays under independent management.

Miss Edith Thayer, an erstwhile protégée of the late Oscar Hammerstein, will replace Miss Laurel Nemith in the leading feminine rôle of "Blossom Time" at the Great Northern tonight. She sang some seasons ago in "The Firefly," alternating therein with Mme. Emma Trentini, and has been more recently of the company which is presenting "Blossom Time" in the east.

Miss Francine Larrimore's new play, which she will try out soon in Cleveland, proves to be the work of Margaret Mayo and Aubrey Kennedy. They call it "The White Way" and have propounded in it some salutary observations as to the wicked lure of Broadway—which sounds a bit like Mr. Shipman's thesis in "The Crooked Square."

Miss Constance Binney, by the way, has abandoned "The Crooked Square" and its future, and will not appear in it when it reaches New York. Those who know her best suspect that she is contemplating matrimony and possible retirement.

The eastern company playing "The Cat and the Canary" has returned to New York and established itself there for a second run. A similar maneuver will be executed soon by Al Jolson, who plans to restore "Bombo" to Broadway when "The Dancing Girl" leaves the Winter Garden to come to Chicago.

"Sally," however, will not visit Gotham again, Mr. Ziegfeld having changed his mind about that. Instead of going east when they leave the Colonial, the players will have a week in Milwaukee and will then disband for the summer to reassemble in September for an invasion of Washington.

Richard Bennett, through with "He Who Gets Slapped," will appear next month in "Chivalry," a new play by William Hurlbut, whose "Lilies of the Field" is a matter of recent memory here. Miss Irene Fenwick, who acted vividly in "The Claw," will have an important part.

The New Plays

First Aid for First Nighters on Attractions Scheduled for the Coming Weeks in the Theaters.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"Why Not?" (Powers)—A comedy of matrimony by Jesse Lynch Williams, produced as one of the ventures of the Equity players, an energetic offshoot of the Actors' Equity association. Miss Estelle Winwood and Ernest Glendinning, capable artists both, will have the leading rôles for the Chicago engagement. Of the New York cast there remain Miss Margaret Mower, Miss Norma Mitchell, John Cromwell, Thomas Louden, and Raymond Guion.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The Cleanup" (Central)—A new comedy by Barry Connors, to be given some trial performances at special matinées soon, with Miss Helen Gahagan heading a cast composed otherwise of members of the "Up the Ladder" company.

"Lady Butterfly"—A musical comedy made from the farce called "Somebody's Luggage," written and once played by James T. Powers. Coming on or about May 13, probably to the Studebaker.

"Rolling Home" (May 20.)—A play by John Hunter Booth, with Donald Brian in the leading rôle. Coming to a theater as yet unannounced.

"The Dancing Girl" (Apollo, June 3)—Another Winter Garden entertainment, now being performed in New York by Miss Marie Dressler, Trini, a beauty from Spain, and many others.

Voice of the Playgoer

SOME REACTIONS ON THE RUSSIANS.

APPRECIATION.

Chicago, April 23.—[To the Dramatic Editor.]—Recently I have read some awful stuff about these Russian players, and I think you are the fellow who wrote it. Anyhow, it won't do you any harm to read what an American woman who cannot understand a word of Russian thinks of them after seeing them in two plays.

It is very evident to me that our theatrical mind is positively infantile and very probably will never be anything else. We have nothing in any way, shape, or manner to approach these players. It is not only that they select material well worthy of presentation but they know how to so put it over that one becomes sheerly absorbed, and sits almost with open mouth.

Of course I am now supposing a really truly human being as auditor, and not one of our self-glorifying business machines—not our American robots.

You think you have to get off some critic lingo. Bah! All you need is eyes to see and a mind to understand and feel. What I saw was sufficient. We have no such players, but we have critics, God be praised, and we need be in no doubt just what nice new musical comedy or thrill-play to go to. If I go I generally am obliged to leave at the second act, not possibly being able to stand any more.

We have the critics, and how they do write copy. Poor wooden-heads!

JANE PEYTON.

OBJURGATION.

Chicago, April 24.—[To the Dramatic Editor.]—The dramatic critics of both New York and Chicago have pronounced the Moscow Art theater to be the foremost organization of players they have ever encountered. This is an opinion in which most of the actors and producers of America who have seen these players concur.

But why should the average playgoer be expected to be thrilled by these performances? The primary function of the theater is to tell a story. Now, unless you can understand the language in which the play is given, you will see it as in a glass darkly. Only a fraction of the public is interested in the technique of acting as such. To the rest a play in an alien tongue is tantamount to a performance of grand opera without music.

To me it is deplorable that the critics should so disparage American art—for in rhapsodizing over the Russians they have ignored the peculiar merits of our own theater. Any penetrating observer can see that the Russians have a style and a method that is peculiarly their own. But a Russian critic—at least, a critic who was really qualified for his work—would be quick to see that American and English actors (comparing our best with the best of the Russians) have qualities indigenous to us and a method of attack which would be a revelation if some of our best actors appeared in repertory in Moscow.

The important thing for us is our own theater—to encourage its development; not to discourage it by running after strange gods.

National Theater Is Opened with "As You Like It"

association. And collectively they are about as deeply interested in a national theater as I am in the Valley of Kings. But they have been convinced by Mr. Thomas, and sincerely convinced in some instances, that it is only through the indorsement and backing of this and similar enterprises that they can hope to put themselves right with the better, if not the best, people.

There are many fine plans back of the movement, supplied in the main by Mr. Thomas and those who have been working with him. These include the establishment of contacts with certain outlying stock companies to be chosen by the directors. These stock companies will then represent the National theater in their respective territories, as a federal reserve bank represents the government. And as a National theater offspring, broadly speaking, each company will be aided in the selection of at least one current Broadway success a season, which it will be permitted to play ahead of the play's appearance on tour, and to the proper study of which it will be privileged to send on its stage director.

This, it is hoped, will help to establish the National theater as a model institution, and also serve to assist both actors and auditors in the correction of that faulty diction which is a common sin of the American theater.

But fundamentally the purpose of the National theater, as it appeals to the men who have financed it, is to prove to the world that the so-called sordidly commercial theatrical manager has a soul as well as a pocket, and that he really had much rather make money with Shakespeare than with Avery Hopwood.

Tries Flash Back Melodrama.

Glen MacDonough, who deals usually in librettos for musical comedies, has tried his hand at writing a flash back melodrama with a serious theme. "Within Four Walls" it is called, and it is one of those studiedly quaint plays of old New York that shows the ladies returned to the bustle and the Grecian bend and the gay sparks wearing gaitered trousers and getting squiffy making New Year's calls. It is rather labored as entertainment, always promising to achieve a definite charm, but never quite making it.

The theme, though, is rather interesting. Every man, declares Mr. MacDonough, being a mixture of many ancestries, lives again the lives of his forebears, both good and bad. Or is so impelled, whether he gives way or not.

His particular example is young Gerrit Minuit of the old New York Minuits. Gerrit has been a little of everything in the man line and not much of anything. A good deal of a waster, like his father before him; something of a brawler, like his uncles; a luckless, dreamy, lovable bum, if the truth were told. In him the once noble Minuit family has gone to pot. Yet he is still, as he admits, a gentleman. And sentimental. So he comes to have one last look at the old Minuit place in Greenwich village the night before the day the wreckers are to begin tearing it down.

Varied Character Portraiture.

Outside the lovely old door—and if you ever walk through the village note the doors—Gerrit finds an Irish caretaker and gossips a little with him. Then he meets a newspaper girl, come to get a human interest story of the old house's passing. She is an old acquaintance who has given him up as hopeless, though she is still enough interested to be thrilled a little at this unexpected meeting.

Together the three of them, Minuit, the watchman, and the sob sister, go into the old house, sit themselves down before a rickety fireplace, and begin reading some of the writings that Gerrit's grandfather had left behind. Follow the flashbacks that show what was happening to the Minuits within these four walls in 1820, 1852, 1867, and 1872. They are pretty as to pictures, these scenes, and touched here and there with interesting drama. But they gather little interest.

The principal actors play two or three roles each. Helen Ware is a murderous octoroon in one scene and tries to roast an early Minuit in the fireplace—to make a steak Minuit of him, as you might, but I hope would not say—because he had first deceived her, the dog, and then tried to kill her son. Next she is a simpering flirt who loses her garter in a four-wheeler, and finally she is a bibulous lady of little character but considerable charm in 1872.

Here is a varied and skillful exhibition of character portraiture after the Russian manner. Anne Morrison, Leonard Doyle, and Walter Lawrence also do well.

OPTIMISM

We should all work toward normal conditions with a smile, a pleasant word, a hopeful view, and a prayer of thanks for all our blessings.

Let us be rational and unselfish. If we work our way through the remainder of our periods of adjustment and with it all maintain a feeling of solicitude for the other fellow, it will be all the greater credit to ourselves.

Benefits come with a hopeful spirit. Hurry, worry and anger means waste. Let us cultivate the one—eliminate the other. By so doing, the American nation, now standing so high in the eyes of the world, shall furnish another splendid example—that of serene ability to face and make the best of any situation.

In the final results the "cards" usually show that insistence on the "best of it" usually makes for the "worst of it."

One Good Film After Another, April's Record

good supporting cast, and the story, while not anything to rave about, provided good entertainment. It had spots that made you want to register a kick in the Kick Korner, but—not many at that. Good program offering.

"SUZANNA," with Mabel Normand, was much liked by Mrs. Krum who saw it. She was thoroughly in favor of the cast, costumes, and atmosphere, though the painted drops didn't make much of a hit with her.

"THE TIGER'S CLAW," with Jack Holt, was good, all around entertainment. It had some thrills, clever scenes, and fine scenery. Mr. Holt did splendid work.

"THE BRIGHT SHAWL," widely heralded for many months, proved itself worthy of the things producers have been saying about it. It was made from the story of Joseph Hergesheimer, and Richard Barthelmess, ably supported, was the star. That monkey, Dorothy Gish, in a dark wig, did a lion's share toward making the film enjoyable.

"PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS," a 1923 exposé of perturbed, old fashioned fathers and speedy daughters, who have their own latch keys and stay out until 3 o'clock in the morning, was snappy. It presented Gloria Swanson in a new rôle—flapper, instead of vamp. She got away with it splendidly. Theodore Roberts was the anguished father in the case. Funny and clever, as usual. Everybody who had anything to do with the film seemed right on the job, including the director.

"ENEMIES OF WOMEN", made from the story of Blasco Ibanez of "Four Horsemen" fame, was one of the most brilliant offerings the screen has seen in many a day. Lots of money must have been spent in making it. Well spent, too! Two words to the wise are sufficient—See it!

"POOR MEN'S WIVES" may be described as a comfy picture, that makes itself at home with you and you at home with it. In other words, it comes right down to the ground and gets clubby with you.

H. A. Snow's Wild Animal Pictures was one of the best educational films ever put out. The scenes on the African veldt alone were well worth the price of admission.

Many people will be indignant that "The Covered Wagon" is not listed as a "best." Well——? ! ! !

So much for April! Wonder what the flowers of May will be like.

See you tomorrow!

Wampas Frolic and Ball Draws Gay Ten Thousand at Hollywood

Starke as a Hawaiian, Patsy Ruth Miller as the old fashioned girl in "The Girl I Loved," and little Mary Philbin as she will appear in "Merry Go Round." There were many other celebrities there, Maude Wayne, Art Acord, John Sainpolis, Conway Tearle, Guy Bates Post, Bert Lytell, Mildred Davis, Mabel Julienne Scott, Bessie Love, Sid Grauman, Alan Hale, Ernest Torrence, Valentina Zamina, a Russian warrior—that is, she was a member of the Battalion of Death—and Thais Valdemar, her chum, whose father was an officer in the royal guard and whose mother is a bolshevik.

Others in attendance were Lionel Belmore, Mabel Condon, William Russell, Charles De Roche, Bryant Washburn, Vola Vale, Johnny Hines, Walter Hiers, Wesley Barry, Mickey McBan, Anita Stewart, House Peters, Clara Horton, Irene Rich, Warner Baxter, Colleen Moore, Gaston Glass, Larry Semon, Cyril Chadwick, Stuart Holmes, Percy Marmont, Priscilla Dean, Kid McCoy, Adolph Menjou, and Craig Biddle. The Duncan sisters, Frisco, and Dorothy Jardon did their stuff. A Wampas special was a huge typewriter. The stars stepped through a door under the carriage and came down over the keys as they were introduced.

Birthdays Bring Surprises.

Ella Hall, who is the wife of Emory Johnson, presented Mr. Johnson with a third prospective star. The daughter was born last Friday.

Marjorie Daw, a protégée of Geraldine Farrar, was married to Eddie Sutherland, Charley Chaplin's director, at Pickfair on the 20th. Mary Pickford was maid of honor and Charley Chaplin was Mr. Sutherland's best man. The honeymoon has been postponed due to screen schedules. Mr. Sutherland is a nephew of Thomas Meighan.

Three famous stars had birthdays this week and were fêted by their friends. Constance Talmadge walked into a barrage of gifts sent by members of her family while she was filming "Dulcy." The 18th was Harold Lloyd's birthday, too; and Mildred Davis, his bride, surprised him with a party in their new Irving street home. Hal Roach was master of ceremonies.

Pola Negri entertained at a dinner party on the 20th for Charley Chaplin's birthday. She had told "Sharlee" it was to be a "leetle" dinner, but when he arrived there was a host of their mutual friends—Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Lehr, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Turnbull, Charles De Roche, and others.

Mary Astor and Theda Bara have arrived in Hollywood from the east. Theda Bara was met at the train by her husband, Charles Brabin. Dagmar Godowsky has gone to Honolulu to join her father, Leopold Godowsky. Marion Debeck, wife of Teddy Debeck, cartoonist, has left for the east, where it is understood she will accept an offer to appear on the stage.

Kick Korner for Movie Fans

Its Object—Objection

Dear Miss Tinée: This should hold the foremost space in your Kick Korner. Why all this fuss about Pola and Charlie, when we all know he has been engaged to 198,000 different girls since his debut on the screen? If they really intended marriage, they would have had the knot tied long before this, for what's stopping them?

I might also say here that if Pola ever saw Charlie in "The Pilgrim," she'd never speak to him again. Wasn't it a silly picture? Give us more like "Dr. Jack" and "Fruits of Faith," and leave this would-be comedy stuff out of our leading theaters.

I'm surely glad that's off my chest. I didn't think it was in me, but I'm glad it's out of me now. SPARKIE.

Dear Miss Tinée: I thought I could at least refrain from registering a kick, but the powers that be have ordained it otherwise. I have for the last few days been reading Hall Caine's powerful story, "The Christian," and although I have not as yet finished it I have read far enough to enjoy it thoroughly and to realize how completely the producers of the picture

Ask Me! Ask Me!

MRS. A.: Johnny Walker is with Robertson-Cole, Los Angeles. Going to write to him? Mighty glad you like the column. And much obliged for the pleasant words.

F. L. C.: Address Ralph Graves, Universal City, Cal., and Marion Davies, in care of International, 127th street and 2d avenue, New York. Entirely welcome.

ZUZU: Kenneth Harlan's picture has appeared in the rotogravure section. A letter addressed to him either in care of Robertson-Cole or Warner Bros., Los Angeles, will reach him. Do I think he's adorable? Well—you do, so that's all that matters, isn't it? Yes, he has been married before.

C. L. B.: You're not quite so astute as you think, for this column is conducted by one of the feminine gender. I knew you were going to be pretty crazy about Jacqueline Logan. What do you want to know about her. Ask us, ask us, in your next letter.

KENTUCKY KID: You're right. The mistake was all mine. Malcolm MacGregor, and not Walter McGrail, played in "Broken Chains." Thanks for catching me up. One must learn to be careful.

COUSIN: Didn't know it, but if it's true how happy I should be! Here's one time in "two thousand years" when you get something addressed to you. I'm terribly sorry you have "lost your way and strayed to the Isle of Lost Souls." If you have—you've plenty of company. I mean plenty of company of people who consider themselves lost souls. There's really no such thing, you know. It's all in the way you look at things. Write to me any time you wish. I'll always be glad to receive and answer your letters.

S. C. S.: You bet I know how the opening lines of the song go. And you can't think how good it makes me feel to know that you really missed the corner as you say you did. Never mind—we can't all like the same things. For instance, you like me and I like you. What possible difference can our opinion on a photoplay make? Thanks for your letter, and I hope you won't forget to make it one of many.

ANXIOUS: Theodore Roberts hasn't been smoking much lately, has he! Perhaps his doctor told him it wasn't good for his heart—or perhaps he got tired looking at himself with a cigar in his mouth. Shall you write to him or shall I, and ask the reason for his recent nonsmokiness?

G. J. S.—I wish you could know how happy your brief note made me. Thanks, with all my heart, G. J. S.!

EDNA—A letter will reach the lady.

REMOVAL NOTICE!

Dr. Pinkston, the Eminent Foot Specialist, announces his removal to the Capitol Bldg. This Removal Notice has a double meaning.

Dr. Pinkston makes a special reduction on removing corns and calluses. For the next 30 days you can have every corn and callus removed by the roots without pain for $5.00 and without making the feet sore and no chance for infection.

This offer is to acquaint his many friends and customers with the new address.

Dr. Pinkston can stop a new bunion that is just starting and can reduce an old bunion or an enlarged joint half to three-quarters its size.

Dr. Pinkston's method of relieving and restoring broken down arches to normal has yet to fail.

Pus in corns, calluses and bunions is absorbed by the blood and causes pains often diagnosed and treated as rheumatism, neuritis and orthritis. An impinged nerve or an impeded artery or vein will make you extremely nervous and will cause your feet and legs to swell. Regardless of the nature or condition of your foot troubles or whom you have consulted or what you have tried, do not be discouraged for Dr. Pinkston's method has yet to fail. A free Examination will convince you of the cause and cure of all foot troubles. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Many so-called "extravagances" make North American food the finest you can buy—for instance:

We use real whipped cream: Never do we use any "fluff-fluff" powder which looks like whipped cream and tastes something like whipped cream but isn't whipped cream at all.

No "cooking" butter: Even in our cooking and baking so-called "cooking" butter is taboo. Instead we use pure creamery butter—the same fine butter used on our tables.

No cheap lard substitutes: Even in some of the best kitchens various cheap lard substitutes are used. But that never happens at the North American Restaurant.

And these are only a few of many "extravagances" which give North American food a flavor that can't be beaten even in the most exclusive and expensive restaurants and hotels.

Other good restaurants and hotels tell us we give too much for the money. They wonder how we can do it. They know that although their prices are often twice ours they must practice many economies which are scorned here.

And yet in spite of the fact that we go to lengths which others call extravagance to make our food the finest in the land, our prices are just about half what other good dining places must charge to include "service" to your table.

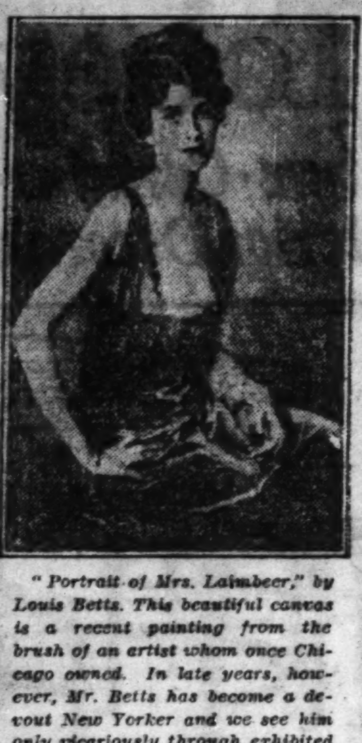
ART AND ARTISTS

Architectural Exhibit Opening at the Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.



"Portrait of Mrs. Laimbeer," by Louis Betts. This beautiful canvas is a recent painting from the brush of an artist whom once Chicago owned. In late years, however, Mr. Betts has become a devout New Yorker and we see him only vicariously through exhibited portraits at the Art institute or Arts club.

TUESDAY will see the opening of the annual architectural exhibition at the Art institute. This exhibition is one which seems to grow in interest and excellence from year to year. Etchings, photographs, water colors, drawings and miniature models of houses of varying types make an emphatic appeal to the imagination of all of us—whether we be actual or prospective house owners.

The exhibition is to be installed in the spacious east wing galleries, and will enjoy borrowed splendor from the fact that the twenty-first annual exhibit of applied arts, with its countless colorful and attractive objects for home use and decoration, will be found in the same galleries. In this latter exhibition are handsome panels for wall decoration, murals, pottery from the studios of the leading American potters, furniture, lamp bases and shades, door knockers and hinges, jewel boxes, embroideries suitable for table sets, vases, luster ware, pewter ware, baskets, bookends, woodblock prints and countless other art objects too numerous to mention.

The architectural exhibition will not confine itself to the work of American architects. A peculiarly interesting feature of the show is the work exhibited by a group of British architects. While the difference in the nature of the two countries forces a difference in the types of building indicative of each, yet there is much of good to be learned by us from our brothers across the sea, and—we hope—vice versa.

At all events, whether you are interested in a cottage or a mansion, the detail of a gate or the massive beauty of a stone entrance, an apartment building, bank, or school, the simplicity of a garage or the continuity of a garden, there will be something to satisfy each of your questions in this truly inclusive architectural show.

The two exhibitions will remain on view until June 1.

The twenty-seventh annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture, by members of the Palette and Chisel club, is open and may be enjoyed until May 31. There are some forty canvases hung. The landscape by James Topping, "Wind Among the Trees," won the Municipal Art league prize for 1923. Among the other paintings of interest are "Winter Afternoon" by Karl Ouren, "Manana Espanol" by Arthur G. Rider, "Falling Snow" by Frank J. Gavencky, "At the Ghetto" by Oskar Gross, "Old Mill" by Fred T. Larson, and "We Are Three" by Roy C. Keister.

King Tut is much alive today in the eyes of the world, even though he be dead a few thousand years to the knowledge of his contemporaries, as may be witnessed by the stories and pictures relating to him and his treasures that are being broadcasted over the earth. The latest exhibit tinged with Tut's personality is an exhibition of water color paintings of the Nile near his tomb, by A. O. Lamplough. The exhibition is temporarily in New York, though it may be shown here later.

"Autumn Fantasy" by Dorothy Visju Anderson was one of the canvases sold in the recent exhibition of the Society of Independent Artists held in New York. There were more than a thousand paintings in the exhibit, and Chicago may count it a distinct triumph that the work of one of her artists met with the financial success of a sale there.

Irving K. Manoir has been invited by the Milwaukee Art institute to hold an exhibit of his paintings in its galleries through the month of May. For the past three months he has been busy getting his group of pictures together. Last Tuesday afternoon he showed them in his studio. The paintings are decorative, and undoubtedly will obtain much appreciative criticism when they are placed on public exhibition.

A memorial edition, limited in number to 250 copies, of the excellent book by the sculptor, Solon Borglum, "Sound Construction," is to be published this year. For the student of sculpture or painting the work will prove invaluable. In it the pupil is given a knowledge, first of the bones (in the anatomy of man or beast), next the muscles and attachments, and last the skin or surface. This method of instructing from the interior to the exterior differs from the more customary outside to the inside method of etaching in vogue in most schools.

Among the sculptors who cannot praise this book too highly are Lorado Taft, Daniel Chester French, Frederick W. MacMonnies, James Earle Fraser, and George Gray Barnard.

For further details about the publication one may write to Raymond V. Ingersoll, secretary, the Solon Borglum memorial fund, City club, 55 West Forty-fourth street, New York.

An oil painting, "Te Burao," by the French artist, Paul Gauguin, has just been purchased and added to the permanent collection of the Art institute. It is a landscape with decidedly impressionistic features. A sunny, sandy beach, with its suggestion of tropical palms, is brilliantly conceived. Evidently the picture represents a scene on the coast of Tahiti, a French island possession, to which Gauguin went in search of health and new subjects for painting in 1891.

The Sunday afternoon concerts given by the Art institute ensemble, George Dasch, conductor, will close with the two concerts to be heard this afternoon, the first at 3 o'clock and the second at 4:15, in Fullerton hall.

William Clusmann has sold a painting to the Eugene Field school for its art collection.

At the Stephen F. Gale school may be seen the group of paintings collected by the commission for the encouragement of local art. These pictures are sent from school to school, so that the children in various parts of Chicago may have equal pleasure in them. It is hoped Mayor Dever's administration will renew the fund for this public spirited work.

Sidney Laufman, a young American painter of promise who has received much favorable recognition for his work in Paris, is having a one-man show at the Blackstone hotel. It opened last Thursday, and will continue for ten days.

The fifteenth season of the summer school of painting at Saugatuck, Mich., will open on June 25 and close on Sept. 1. It is under the auspices of the Art Institute Alumni association. Frederick F. Fursman will direct the classes and Edgar A. Rupprecht will assist, as he has done during the last two years.

The exhibition of paintings held recently in the Palette and Chisel clubrooms, and consisting of a one-man show of the work of the Viennese artist, Hans Larwin, was a great success. Some eighteen of the pictures were sold, totaling between $7,000 and $8,000.

Adame Emory Albright has returned from California and is again in his studio-home in Hubbard Woods.

Muirhead Bone, the Scotch etcher whose exhibtions are the joy of London art lovers, is coming to the United States with Joseph Conrad, the novelist. It is the artist's first visit to us. He is expected sometime in May.

An exhibit of student work is to be sent by the school of the art institute to the meeting of the Western Arts association which will be held in St. Louis for four days, beginning May 1. All departments of the school will be represented, though special emphasis will be given to the work of the students of the normal department.

Carl R. Krafft has been secured to take charge of the classes in landscape painting during the summer session of the Art institute art school.

Advanced students in the school of the Art institute in the departments of painting, illustration, and sculpture are now busy with work for the annual scholarship competition. Four prizes are available this year, totaling $2,675.

The annual exhibition by students in the school of the Art institute will be held from June 8 to July 9. At the same time the Art Students' league exhibition will be seen.

A painting depicting a snowy Alaskan landscape, by Rockwell Kent, has just been presented to the Art institute by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney of New York.

The portrait of Thomas Kite, by Sir William Beechey, has recently been presented to the Art institute.

From the middle of July to the first of September an exhibit of the work of three of our best known Chicago painters will be hung in the institute. The men whose paintings will be exhibited are Charles W. Dahlgreen, Anthony Angarola, and William Owen Jr.

A curious and interesting muzzle for a horse has been purchased for the children's room in the Art institute. It is dated 1572, and was made at a time when the craftsmen of Europe were putting all of their artistic abilities into creating gorgeous equipment for horses.

One of the most important lectures on art to be given this season is announced for Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in Fullerton hall, Art institute. It will be given by Miss Florence Heywood, who is the American art lecturer in the Louvre, and who has just returned to America after an absence of twenty years abroad. The title of the lecture is "The Book of Hours."

What the Chicago Newspapers Say:

Chicago Daily News—One moment you're plunging perilously through the 1923 maze of traffic in Randolph street and the next you're figuratively seated in a covered wagon out on the rolling prairie, living again and seeing again a stirring drama of the days when "Westward, Ho!" was the battle cry of the nation and the trail blazers of civilization were pushing their picturesque way towards the golden west . . . Time and again the opening audience burst into applause out of sheer tribute to the picturesque hugeness and reality of some spectacle, which is unusual for any movie audience.

Chicago Herald-Examiner—All the while you are watching "The Covered Wagon" you have a feeling that you just want to stand up and sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee." You want everyone to know how proud you are of being an American and a descendant of those rugged, brave people who were willing to endure such hardships and such terrifying experiences to populate this great country of ours.

Chicago Evening Post—"The Covered Wagon" is a production which thrills by what it suggests almost more than by what it contains. It is as though we looked through and beyond the pictured scenes to the splendid, tragic past. . . . Immensely effective are the scenes of the long train of covered wagons winding its way across the lonely prairies. . . . It is a picture you will want to see and one which you will enjoy.

Chicago Evening American—"The Covered Wagon" at the Woods opened auspiciously; its size, its advance notices, its audience, lent a thrill to the air but over and above all else broods the noteworthy fact that a Western picture, a film of the romantic, wild and pulsating frontier, was attracting this attention. . . . It will reinaugurate the iron strain of American history in its place once more. It is a big, bold thing, done with a marvelous feel for the wild, jesting, human side of the gypsy life of pioneers.

Chicago Evening Journal—Row by row last night the people came under its spell until they were laughing and crying all together, and so proud of their ancestors, they were telling each other all the saints of history had lived right on our western prairie. . . . James Cruze, director of "The Covered Wagon" has done a compelling piece of work. He gets to the heart and spirit of what we like to believe our country is. The picture should be Paramount's pride.

Chicago Journal of Commerce—But more than an inspiring, enthralling and entertaining drama, "The Covered Wagon" is a visualization of a noble chapter of American history, caught by the myriad-eyed moving picture camera, and etched in the finest detail by severe attention to historical accuracy. It defies every previous dramatic endeavor, on the stage or screen, in the magnitude and deft contour of its visualization of history.

Chicago Daily Tribune—I'm going to be exceedingly anxious to hear how those left of the brave pioneers of the '40s will receive "The Covered Wagon." In the meantime here's luck to it—if it's deserving of luck! See you tomorrow!

Ravinia Sends Word of Coming Summer Season

an organization which has managed thus far to keep away from here while incidentally serving as a practical school for some artists who have made a place for themselves in the more pretentious companies.

Such an artist, if you care for an exemplar, is Mr. Ballester, who made a special success for himself on the occasion of his debut with the Chicago Opera late in 1921, and a number of like successes when he was a Ravinian in the summer of last year.

Elisabeth Rethberg (note it is "s" rather than "z") is from what importing managers like to refer to with a mistaken sense of euphemism as central Europe, meaning, nine times in ten, Germany. She is dramatic in her tendencies, is high in favor at home, spent part of the season just ended with the Metropolitan, and is happy in possession of a new contract which will keep her with that establishment for the next five years. Frederick A. Stock, who heard her abroad, is among the good musicians we know who are enthusiastic in praise of her voice.

Florence Easton you know, of course, for her singing in the Auditorium under Campanini and at Ravinia in 1919, as well as in a recent recital in Orchestra hall. These columns contained at the time much in praise of her. She has been a member of the Metropolitan since she left Chicago in 1917.

Graziella Pareto was imported for the Chicago season of 1921-'22, but did not get her first hearing in this neighborhood until June of last year, when Mr. Eckstein made her known at Ravinia. She was well liked there throughout the summer and took a place in the affections of all who care for coloratura singing in alliance with good looks.

Josephine Lucchese also is of the coloratura persuasion. What singers call "good notices" have strewn her pathway wherever she has journeyed with the San Carlo company.

Margery Maxwell has been new and again, since her debut with Galli-Curci in "Dinorah" back in 1917, an Auditorium singer, developing with each season, and now to be entrusted with a long list of important rôles. She has had an earlier Ravinia experience.

Bourskaya Replaces Gentle.

Those of you who, like myself, were won to admiration for Ina Bourskaya in her several manifestations of the last fourteen months in this neighborhood, will be glad to know that she will take over Miss Gentle's rôles, or most of them, in the Ravinia season to come. Bourskaya has already been heard here [1] with the Russians in their commonwealth nights at the Olympic theater, [2] with the Ravinia forces of 1922, [3] with the Chicago Opera of last season, and [4] with the Russians in their well fed, salaried nights in the Auditorium, two months ago. Incidentally, her Carmen has been one of the season's "raves" at the Metropolitan.

Miss Telva is decribed as young, as talented, and as a popular singer of the several rôles she has so far undertaken with the Metropolitan. She is, like the Misses Rethberg and Lucchese, a total stranger in this neighborhood.

None of the men engaged by Mr. Eckstein calls for special biographical words at this time if we except two of the five principal tenors, Lauri-Volpi and Tokatyan. The former, Italian, was taken into the Metropolitan fold last winter and is reported to have registered a sound success in all his rôles. He classifies as lyrico-dramatic. Mr. Tekatyan, race unknown to us as yet, also has been making some hits for himself with the New York organization. Schipa we all know and all admire: there is nobody else quite his equal in the romantic parts of the general répertoire; and the name Morgan Kingston, from manifold exploits of the past, is well nigh synonymous with the very fact of opera at Ravinia. Mr. Ananian returns for the buffo rôles after a year's absence.

"If we sang each opera in the ready list twice only," explains Mr. Eckstein, "we should not have enough nights in the season to exhaust the répertoire. But we hope to make additions—for one, 'Tristan'; for another Giordano's 'Andrea Chenier'; also Massenet's 'Sapho,' and, possibly, John Hugo Adam's 'The Temple Dancer,' if I can persuade Miss Easton to restudy the title rôle, which she originated when the little opera was done in the Metropolitan some years ago."

Looks as if we are to have a brilliant summer at Ravinia!

A Contest Early in the Day.

Judicial and musical temperaments, frequently reputed to be in conflict, will come into collaboration this morning at the Chicago theater. At 11 o'clock—new daylight saving time, remember—there will be a performance of five of the orchestral scores held to be the best in the Balaban & Katz prize contest. After the performance, the music critics of the daily Chicago papers, also those of the four weekly music papers, likewise Conductor Nathaniel Finston of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra, Felix Borowski and Adolph Weidig, noted composers and pedagogues, will vote on the best of the five, whose composer will thereupon be awarded a prize fee of $1,000.

Works in the contest were submitted last fall, a total of eighty-nine having been received. Out of these the five of this morning's performance were selected after a preliminary reading. The prize winner and the four other honorable mentions will be featured in future Sunday concerts by Mr. Finston and his orchestra. Announcement of the findings will be made as soon as the judges have had an opportunity to tabulate their votes.

Civic Music Annual Festival.

The Civic Music association will hold its annual festival this afternoon at Orchestra hall. Watch the clock again, for this event will also be on daylight saving time, 3 o'clock. It is a matter of invitation, the audience being those who in the past have contributed to the cause.

The combined children's choruses of the association will sing, and if they are anything like what they have been in other seasons, they will be well worth attention. They are listed for folk songs from Italy, Russia, Lithuania, France, Bohemia, Alsace-Lorraine, and Switzerland. Herbert E. Hyde, who will conduct, has made orchestrations of the accompaniments for the Civic orchestra.

The Civic orchestra, by the way, is as great an achievement of its kind as anything the United States has been able to produce during its time. Really a student orchestra, it has developed under the training of Frederick Stock, Eric DeLamarter, and George Dasch into an altogether astonishing playing organization. It will have numerous numbers of its own in the concert.

At the end there will be community singing led by Frederick C. Carberry.

Mostly About Music.

News from the Chicago Opera, though having more to do with the immediate past than the future, tells that upon the invitation of Felix Weingartner, Giorgio Polacco conducted an "Aida" performance at the Vienna Opera; also that Edith Mason, his wife, has been invited by Arturo Toscanini to sing Mimi in "La Boheme" at La Scala, Milan.

Irene Pavloska, a much better singer and operatic figure than the rôles allotted to her in the Chicago company always indicate, had her chance in the name part of "Carmen" in Cleveland a few nights ago. She would seem to have been a good bit of a hit. One critic refers to her as being a high light and having a professional air that gave quality to her performance and concludes that both vocally and histrionically she gave a splendid performance. Another says: "Miss Pavloska was vivid and infectious; her intensity seemed to influence the whole cast—she provided thrill after thrill in the tragic moments of the opera."

There is talk, although it has by no means reached the official stage, of Edgar A. Nelson as the new conductor of the Apollo Musical club. He is at present its organist. Just when Harrison M. Wild plans to lay down his baton and thus close a long and honorable career with the organization is not included in the rumor.

The week of May 20-27 has been chosen as Schubert week for the Chicago public schools. Among matured plans for the celebration are the announcements that the Sunday Evening club choir, directed by Edgar A. Nelson, will feature Schubert's music May 20, and Bertram Peacock, who impersonates the composer in "Blossom Time," will visit some of the high schools and give an address on Schubert's life.

James Goddard, once an important figure in the basso section of the Chicago Opera, has been wooed away from art by commerce. He is now an associate of a La Salle street bond firm, and his entire vocal powers are being devoted to that end.

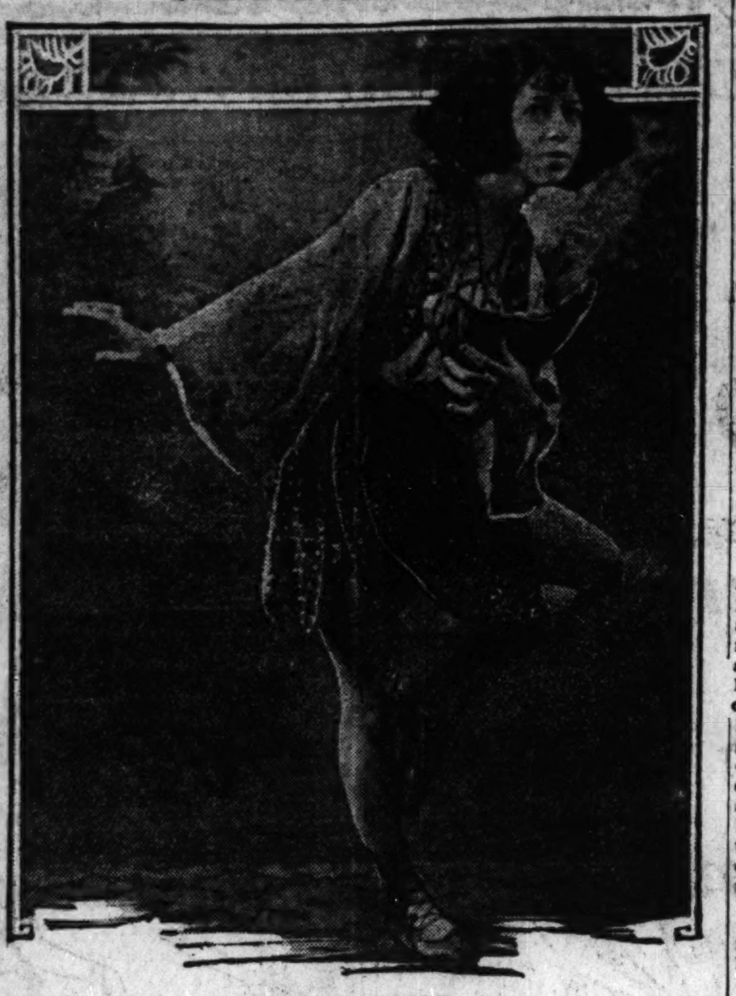
Walter Spry, 509 South Wabash avenue, sends word of an appeal being made through the Austro-German musicians' relief fund to send help to the suffering musicians of Austria and Germany, many of whom are reported to be in destitute circumstances. Mr. Spry is a member of the committee and is thereby empowered to collect funds for the purpose.

SHE DANCES TODAY.



MADELINE KEEFE.

She will take an important part in the dance program to be presented at the Illinois theater this afternoon.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Rosalurda.

DELICATE hands and feet, fine bones, fine hair, and a soft skin denote a sympathetic disposition. Sympathy is one of woman's chief charms. No woman can be beautiful without it.

Rosalurda has a complexion of white and pink. Her hair has an old gold glint in the sunshine. Her features are delicately chiseled. She has sympathy. She could not be made the way she looks, and not have sympathy. Yet her sympathy is of a peculiar kind, characteristic of her race.

Rosalurda is Nordic. Her heritage stamps itself on every thought she thinks and every deed she does. Her thoughts are tender and spontaneously sentimental. Her love, like all her other emotions, requires little external stimulus to set it moving. It is a highly ideal love, a kind that builds itself about mind rather than about matter.

Rosalurda's anger blazes fiercely for a moment, then passes like a cloud, leaving her tranquil again. But when her soul meets an emotion, it may throb for days. She does not hold resentment. This is a peculiar mark of all the women of her type.

Rosalurda will never get ugly, even if she lives to be a hundred. Ugliness is due to lack of sympathy. Women who have no sympathy for others can count on losing their beauty as surely as they can expect the sun to rise. The reason is simple. All beauty is fundamentally a quality of mind.

Every thought has a characteristic expression in the face. Think one thought enough, and your face will set in its expression, so that you look that way all the time. Women whose minds are ruled by the fear moods—jealousy, anxiety, and worry; by the anger moods—envy, spite, hate, sourness, and shrewishness; or by the selfish moods—self-seeking, pleasure seeking, cupidity, money loving, and praise hunger, cannot hope to keep their beauty. Each one of these moods has a disagreeable facial expression.

Rosalurda holds no resentment; therefore, both fear and anger are foreign to her, and at one sweep two-thirds of the causes of ugliness are removed. This is why Nordic women are known, the world over, for their beauty. In addition, she is delicately built, and has little strength for grabbishness. The third cause for ugliness is absent. All her thoughts are pleasant. Threfore, she will always be beautiful.

KICK KORNER FOR MOVIE FANS

have massacred it. It was disgustingly weak, and to me the cast seemed poorly chosen. I do not like a picture the general theme of which is hopelessly different from the theme of the book.

In "Lorna Doone" the plot on the screen is perhaps better for the average audience than the exact copy of the original, but not so with "The Christian"—that was ruined.

In closing let me praise to the skies your excellent column. Your work is a joy to your readers—and delightfully accurate.
BEE.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am a man of great patience—I can endure much. But there is a limit to all things. I am not given to wasting time and energy writing to newspapers, but occasionally some great moving force impels me to exhaust.

In this case I think it is your constantly reiterated "Good Morning" and "See You Tomorrow" which are the underlying causes. Why say "Good morning" to me when you do not know me? Why tell me you will see me tomorrow when you will not see me tomorrow or the next day and no doubt never will see me? It begins to irritate—it is getting on my nerves. These ingratiating phrases cause me to become suspicious. It smacks too much of a confidence game. Perhaps you want me to like you personally.

Perhaps you are trying to bribe my friendship. All this may be necessary, for to judge you solely by what you write I am forced to believe you are sadly in need of stanch friendships in goodly numbers. Friends will forgive much. The question that arises in my mind is, How does she hold her job? But a still deeper mystery is this: How did she ever get it in the first place?

I have always been under the impression that the office of a dramatic critic was to give the public an inkling of what to go and see and what to avoid. In order to do this the critic, in the first place, must or should know his or her business. After reading your meaningless chatter I am forced to one conclusion: you must have inhaled your art through correspondence school literature. When I finish reading your silly mouthings I am just where I started. You tell me nothing. If I want to find out where to spend my money I must go and spend it before I know whether I should have spent it or not. A dependable critic could save me considerable money.

Why must you waste so much good newspaper space telling me the scenario? I can learn all about the story if I think it worth while to go and see the picture. Ninety per cent of your criticisms are devoted to scenarios, 8 per cent to Mae Tineeisms [terrible, trite, boresome, nauseating comedy attempts], and 2 per cent to acting, photography, direction, etc. The general atmosphere you create is that you are writing exclusively for children under 15, whose collective mentality stopped growing at the age of 7. Did it ever occur to you that mature men and women occasionally read THE TRIBUNE?

Another irritating expression of yours is "awfully good." By referring to your dictionary [if you have one] you will find the word "awful" defined as meaning "appalling, terrible." Please tell me, then, how anything can be "awfully good"?

On top of all this you must then wail about the organ. Bless the organ. Many times the organ has made me feel I have not paid in vain.

Now, Mae, I think you have possibilities. Just devote a little time to self-analysis; try to learn what is and what is not good acting, good direction, and what in general constitutes a good picture, and I think in time you may be able to serve a useful purpose in your little sphere. In the meantime let me suggest that you take Sheppard Butler's review of "Peter Weston" to some quiet spot away from the loop, analyze and dissect it, and perhaps you will have the intelligence to grasp what I mean.

A word from the wise may make you efficient.
LITTLE LILAC.

Winning the Fight Against "Social" Diseases

One of the most eminent authorities on the subject in this country, Dr. E. R. Vedder, Lieutenant Colonel, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, declares that "the remedy for the venereal disease problem lies in publicity of the proper kind" and that "our future progress in the control of these diseases must come through systematic treatment."

This is precisely the opinion held by the public spirited Chicago citizens who organized the Public Health Institute.

Publicity of a kind that would uncover the true facts and the imperative need for supplying the most efficient medical treatment possible to those afflicted were their impelling motives. There was no thought of financial gain although the Institute is not operated on a charity basis. The fees, however, are very low and liberal terms are arranged when desired

Continuous and intelligently directed effort extending over a period of three years has accomplished much in checking the spread of these diseases. The Institute is winning its fight and there is reason to hope that, by keeping the public informed as to the true conditions, enlisting its cooperation and urging upon individuals who are afflicted the necessity of securing proper treatment these diseases may be brought under proper control.

The continued growth of the Institute has led to intensive specialization on the part of its physicians. The services of these highly trained men are at the disposal and within the easy reach of every person in need of them.

No one need feel the slightest embarrassment in coming for consultation or treatment. There are forty treatment rooms. The patient, therefore, has the assurance of the utmost possible privacy.

Women and children are treated in a special department of their own, located on a different floor from the men's department. It is equipped to meet the special requirements of women and children patients, and trained nurses are in constant attendance to minister to their increased comfort.

It is the earnest desire of the Public Health Institute to impress upon the mind of the individual who is infected that in the vast majority of cases these so-called "social" diseases are readily amenable to proper medical treatment, and are curable; also to bring home to the public consciousness that these diseases are exacting a needless toll of thousands of human lives and the financial loss of millions of dollars to industry through decreased efficiency every year.

The only way that these scourges can be wiped out is through publicity and systematic treatment. The Public Health Institute is effectively employing both of these agencies in its fight.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. Address Best Joke Editor The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Mary Ellen, a country girl, on her first visit to London, got into an omnibus.

Presently the conductor came up to her and said: "Your fare, miss."

The girl only blushed. The conductor repeated, "Your fare, miss," and the girl blushed more deeply.

By this time the conductor began to look foolish. After a pause he again repeated: "Miss, your fare!"

"Well," said the girl, "they do say I'm good looking at home, but I don't see why you want to say it out loud before all these folks." G. B.

Cause for Anxiety.

A wedding party in the northwest was bound for a church where the ceremony was to be performed. Arriving at a river, a ferryman stood ready to take them over in his unsteady boat. As they were embarking the bridegroom lost his balance and fell into the river.

"O, save him! Save him!" shrieked the elderly bride, who was not older than her intended but was reported to have been the one who did most of the courting.

"Calm yourself, dear," her father said soothingly; "he's an excellent swimmer."

"Yes, I know," she replied hysterically, "but save him! Catch him and pull him out. Look! He is swimming hard away from us." A. T.

Begging His Pardon.

An excited military looking man entered the editorial sanctum one afternoon, exclaiming, "That notice of my death is false, sir. I will horsewhip you within an inch of your life if you don't apologize in your next issue."

The editor inserted the following paragraph the next day: "We regret to announce that the paragraph which stated that Maj. Blazer was dead is without foundation." A. C.

He Obeys Orders.

The well dressed man was in a hurry. There was no doubt about that.

As he jammed down his hat, dashed down the hotel steps, and jumped into a passing taxi he yelled to the driver: "Drive like the dickens!"

The driver, manipulating various levers and clutches, made the car shoot forward as though alive. They went around corners on two wheels, just grazing lamp posts, and among other exciting incidents knocked down a traffic policeman, a maid with a perambulator, a sandwich man, and a pushcart man.

After ten minutes of this wild career the passenger's head appeared at the window and he shouted to the driver: "Are we nearly there?"

"Dunno!" answered the driver. "You didn't tell me where to drive to!" W. R.

Here are two members of the men's glee club as they recently appeared in an aria from Donizetti's "La Favorita." The "lady" is L. T. Johnson, the man C. S. Bassett. The number, which was in no way burlesqued, is reported to have made a hit.

See these lovely Rugs priced amazingly low*

Special Displays This Week in All the Better Stores

The Keynote of a Charming Living Room

It is amazing how completely Kimlark Rugs meet the requirements of a living-room rug. They offer something more than mere prettiness of design; it is rather an elusive charm that you associate with only the highest-priced rugs. Warmth you find in the rich, subdued tones; dignity in the unbroken expanse of their plain centers; friendliness in the light accent of their border designs. Yet, withal, there is a quiet restraint that brings these qualities together in a delightfully harmonious whole.

A Pretty and Practical Dining Room Rug

Kimlark Rugs, with their happy combination of soft colored ground and discreetly gay design; are equally appropriate for sunny breakfasts and candle-lit dinners. Moreover, they withstand wonderfully the day-after-day scrape of chairs, the scuff-scuff of restless childish feet, the unavoidable disasters of spilled food. As for spots—a quick rub with art gum removes them. And an occasional cleaning with soap and water keeps the rug bright and fresh as new.

Thick, Soft and Pliant—Ideal for the Bedroom

Soft and pleasant underfoot—smooth and grateful to toddling baby feet—Kimlark Rugs are just the floor covering for bedroom and nursery. They are wholesome and cleanly, charmingly decorative, long-wearing. And their colorings, light and gay, or discreetly subdued, form the basis of rooms of endless variety and charm.

Delightful Patterns for Sun or Breakfast Room

For these informal rooms, where a gayer note is wanted, Kimlark Rugs offer a wealth of charming designs and happy colorings. They have other pleasing qualities which you do not expect to find in as inexpensive a rug as this. They are soft and noiseless; lie flat without curling up at the edges; do not bend or break when bent, crushed or folded; withstand the action of sunlight; and wear remarkably well.

Until you have seen them, you cannot realize how wonderfully pretty Kimlark Rugs are. Their fascinating patterns, their lovely, soft colorings, their smooth, fine weave, are a genuine delight to every woman who appreciates beautiful floor coverings.

Not alone are the designs unusually attractive; the quality of the rug itself is exceptional. A remarkable, new method of production has given to Kimlark Rugs certain features that you do not expect to find combined in any one rug—features that give them great durability as well as lasting beauty.

The smooth, soft surface of the rug, the firmness and pliability of the fabric, the thick, three-ply weave, make the rug noiseless, soft and pleasant underfoot, and give it a sturdy resistance to hard wear that is really amazing.

You can afford Kimlark Rugs for every room in the house

Though Kimlark Rugs have the charm of a high-priced rug, they are priced unbelievably low. You can, in fact, get two Kimlark Rugs for about what you expected to pay for one. And every rug gives double wear, because it can be used on both sides.

If you have only $20 or $30 to spend for a 9 x 12 rug, or if you must make $30 or $35 cover the cost of one large and several smaller rugs, Kimlark Rugs will meet your needs perfectly.

Price them this week

Just now all the better stores have special showings of Kimlark Rugs. Be sure to see them, and learn how much farther Kimlark Rugs will make your rug money go.

Manufactured exclusively by NATIONAL FIBER TEXTILE COMPANY
NEW YORK CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO MILLS: NEENAH, WISCONSIN

Soft

Made of a smooth, soft, pliable material. Free from harsh surfaces, wiry barbs or broken strands. Noiseless, thick, and soft underfoot.

Pliable

Can be bent, crushed, folded or twisted without cracking or breaking. Lies flat without curling. Does not slip or creep.

Durable

Withstands remarkably the wearing action of feet and chairs, of dirt and grit, of sun and rain.

Washable

Easily cleaned by washing with soap and water. Spots can be removed by rubbing with art gum. Closely woven, so that dirt does not sift through.

REVERSIBLE

Reversible

Finished on both sides, with a design on one side and the other side plain, with solid or variegated colors—giving double wear.

FIRE RESISTING

Fire-Resisting

Tests have proved that Kimlark Rugs will not ignite. The carelessly dropped cigarette or lighted match does not harm or burn holes through them.

In Halls Where Hard Wear Comes

Here it is that Kimlark Rugs demonstrate their remarkable sturdiness. The soft, pliant surface of the rug little suggests the tough, hard-finished fabric which composes it. Only time can show how firmly Kimlark Rugs resist the steady wear of passing feet, the ground-in dust and grime of all outdoors. Kimlark Rugs are unusually closely woven; dirt does not readily sift through. Yet they are easily kept clean. For halls Kimlark patterns include some very attractive neutral toned designs and plain bordered rugs that do not show soil.

You Can Afford Kimlark Rugs for the Porch

Because they are such good floor coverings, some women think that they are too expensive for the porch. Not at all. They are surprisingly low in price. And, because of their sturdier quality, they stand up better under the severe outside conditions than cheaper rugs do. They are waterproof and washable; their colors are specially treated to last indefinitely. Moreover, they offer two wearing surfaces. Both sides are finished—one in an attractive design, the other plain, in solid or variegated colors.

Not Too Costly for the Summer Cottage

You can even afford Kimlark Rugs for the simplest summer home; equip the cottage throughout at an amazingly small expense. There are gay, colorful designs that seem just made for the holiday spirit of the summer home; or, if you prefer, quiet, neutral patterns or plain bordered rugs. Sand and water have little effect upon them; moths do not attack them; they can be rolled up and put away for months at a time without harm.

*KIMLARK RUGS

in standard sizes, are priced from $2.50 to $27.50, depending upon size.

Apartment Life Has No Room for Good, Old Ways

By Mme. X

THE continuing upward flight in rents is still more evident this spring than last. It is shown in the exodus of tenants from flats which they have occupied for a long enough term of years to have become thoroughly identified with their domicile. In one building in which a household has held forth for nigh onto fifteen years and which shelters twenty-four families, some eight or nine of these are planning to seek other abodes either this season or next autumn, for purely financial reasons.

The scarcity of attractive homes for the hapless mortals who are neither rich nor poor, and the increasing difficulties of the domestic problem are forcing a new mode of living on folk who were born and reared in the belief that a home was a moral as well as physical necessity, the word home meaning a place where you lived separated from your kind, and where there was enough space in which to receive your friends with an equipment adequate for their entertainment. Landlords and wages are driving this ideal out of our modern scheme of things.

As always, however, the remedy follows close on the heels of the evil. Like many remedies, it is not a complete cure; it only patches up the trouble. For homeless, cookless people there is arising a multitude of apartment hotels offering contracted quarters, either furnished or otherwise, and with the modern substitute for the kitchen that former altar of the home, the kitchenette.

All Is Imitation.

Those who are obliged to take shelter in these caravanseries have to forego the old fashioned standards of hospitality; they have to forego raising a family of youngsters; they have to forego the joy of spacious rooms; they have to learn the resources of bakeries, delicatessen shops, and other places where cooking is done in large quantities; they have to be content to invite their friends to restaurants or clubs if they want to entertain more than two or three at a time.

In return for such renunciation they have free heat, light, gas, hot water, ice. Sometimes, in the more expensive of these cliff dwellings, they have service included. It is not that old brand of service where the human relationship is established and the server and served share a pride in household achievements and triumphs. It is the mechanical, impersonal service that one gets in a hotel run for transients.

Often there is a restaurant attached to this modern substitute for a home. To the real epicure the average American restaurant is neither exhilarating nor interesting. Imitation meals in an imitation home are not unlikely to produce an imitation human being. A country composed of imitation men and women might possibly turn into—if imagination leads the vision on till one is confronted with that emanation of a Czecho-Slovakian brain, Karel Capek's Robots, in the gloomy drama, "R. U. R.", now being put on here. Those Robots look as if they had been born and reared in a kitchenette flat.

MISS HELEN SMITH.

[Moffett Photo.]

Announcement was made recently of the engagement of Miss Helen Smith, daughter of Mrs. Henry A. North of 1347 North State street, to Mack C. Wylie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Howard Wylie of Paxton, Ill. No date has been announced for the marriage. Miss Smith made her debut in 1919.

MISS DOROTHY MERIAM BUTTOLPH.

[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Buttolph of 5423 Cornell avenue announced the engagement of their daughter, Dorothy Meriam, to Warren Hines Clarke of Cleveland, O., on Friday. Mr. Clarke is a son of the late Warren Hines Clarke of Bowling Green, Ky., and Mrs. R. Procter Barclay of Baltimore, Md.

The wedding is planned for October.

MISS GERTRUDE BISSELL.

[Moffett Photo.]

Miss Gertrude Bissell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Bissell of 5725 Kimbark avenue, will be graduated from the University of Chicago in June, and will go east shortly after the exercises to attend a house party. Miss Bissell made her debut last Thanksgiving day at a reception at the residence of her aunts, Miss Georgene and Miss Elizabeth Faulkner of 4746 Dorchester avenue.

Race of Cliff Dwellers.

Do you suppose Theodore Roosevelt's vigorous personality would ever have developed within the narrow confines of an apartment hotel? Can you see Abraham Lincoln stepping forth from a home with a kitchenette into the great place he filled in our history? Not that it would be safe to undertake to outwit exorbitant landlords and to raise a race of Lincolns by living in log huts.

A remedy for the situation is yet to be found. But until it is discovered the writer watches the swift growth of this year's crop of soaring apartment hotels on the one hand, and notes the still more aspiring rentals asked for simple and once inexpensive flats on the other, and wonders what will be the ultimate outcome. Will it be possible for such a mode of living to escape breeding a new race, a race of childless, self-indulgent, pleasure seeking folk, men and women who avoid and sidestep responsibility of all kinds? It rests with you, O landlords. Have a heart!

Finance for Women.

There is one manifestation of our modern way of doing things that is especially interesting and significant, and that is the class in finance for women which had its last meeting for the season on Thursday morning at the Hotel La Salle. This is a course of instruction offered women free wherein they may learn the a b c of finance. It was founded under the auspices of Federal Securities corporation at the suggestion of Mrs. Jacob Baur, herself a trained business woman.

Mrs. Baur was impressed during the Liberty loan campaigns (in which she worked hard) at the widespread ignorance on the part of women as to the simplest, most elemental facts connected with the ownership and administration of property. The majority of them did not know what a bond was. As to stocks and mortgages and other forms of investment, they were totally in the dark. Many of them did not know how to make out and sign a check. Often they thought—many still do for that matter—that as long as there were checks in their check books there was money at the bank.

The inevitable consequences of such ignorance was and is a serious percentage of losses of property for women who are alone in the world. Many a wife at the death of her husband does not know what is the first step to take to find out where she stands as to money. Such helplessness makes her and her kind a prey for the numerous band of shyster lawyers and their ilk.

Learning to Do by Doing.

The need of such a course was demonstrated by the fact that every one of this year's series of talks on finance has been crowded with women of all ages, classes, types, 400 or 500 at a time. They come and listen and ask questions, and often tell of their own personal experiences. At these lectures they learn the rudiments of the science of how to handle money, how to invest it, how to make out their income taxes, how to make wills, how to read them, what investment means, and all the other preliminaries to the proper handling of property. Some of the most able men in the financial world are among those who address this eager and interested audience. David Forgan, George M. Reynolds, and Charles W. Folds were on the list of speakers this winter.

The final meeting was a general quiz, which Mrs. Baur directed and managed and which aimed to assemble in the minds of the women in an orderly sequence what they had learned this winter. Chicago is the first city where such a course has been tried, but other communities are copying it. In Des Moines, Ia., a similar class has been formed. Mrs. Baur gives to women her motto: "Learn to do by doing." In other words, do not delegate to agents or male relatives the care of invested property without informing yourself as to every step they take. In spite of Carl Marx and the bolsheviki, there are still many who believe in the wholesomeness and necessity of invested property, and as women are usually the heirs of those who leave property, they should know what they own and assume responsibilities, not "leave it to George."

Raising Ravinia Guarantee.

Last Thursday the various committees working to raise the Ravinia opera guarantee fund met at a get-together tea at the Arts club, and gave reports as to their success so far. They also listened to an informal talk from Louis Eckstein, the well known impresario and pillar of Ravinia, in which he told of some plans for the coming season, of his difficulties in engaging world famous song birds, and the necessary orchestra and chorus.

About fifty people met on this occasion, ardent champions of this, one of Chicago's most distinguished institutions. Wandering Chicagoites are surprised to find how widely the fame of Ravinia's open air opera has spread over there in Europe. It is greatly discussed and praised as a unique enterprise without its like either here or abroad. And yet these hardworking and devoted men and women are finding it a by no means easy task to raise even half the sum required to run this summer opera.

As an example of the impossibility of making opera meet expenses, the Ravinia officials say that even if every seat were filled for every performance, there would still be a deficit of $2,000 for each presentation. Mr. Eckstein hints as to the engagement of one of the great sopranos of Europe, an artist who has not yet been heard in this country, but who is already engaged by the Metropolitan for next winter. Ravinia opera is to open on Saturday evening, June 23. Whether this is to be Ravinia's swan song or just merely the best season yet in an undertaking that has a brilliant future before it rests with the response of the public to the requirements of the guarantee fund.

Difficulty Has Precedent.

To comfort those who are working for this I should like to recall the difficulties and indifference encountered by that valiant band who twenty odd years ago fought and won the battle of the Chicago Symphony orchestra when this famous organization acquired a home and a financial basis in the Orchestra building. At that time the usual chorus of criticism and lack of understanding met those who worked for this achievement. At times it seemed as if they were going to fail, but it takes more than a slow going, heavy minded Chicago public to dismay and discourage a band of real Chicagoites when they are going after something that will be for the benefit of the community.

So those who have not as yet answered the call of Ravinia will have another chance to do so before the campaign is over. The story of the establishment of the Chicago Civic opera is a similar one, but its stanch promoters, headed by Samuel Insull, put it over.

The list of those composing the committees working for the Ravinia guarantee fund is too long—it numbers 129 people—to give here in full, but we venture to jot down a few names of those whose activities have been most conspicuous. Among those who have been devoted to this task for years are the Mesdames William Sutherland of Glencoe, George Lytton of Highland Park, Frank R. Greene of Winnetka, and Ralph H. Poole of Lake Forest. Besides these are the Mesdames Leeds Mitchell, C. G. Alexander, A. A. Carpenter, A. F. Byfield, Alfred Oppenheimer, Howard Fenton, A. W. Shaw, Annette R. Jones, O. S. Pitcher, Frederick Fechheimer, Harry Holloway, Dwight Orcutt, Max Epstein, Gerhard Foreman, W. F. Peter, Edwin Cassels, Frank Harkness, Theodore Robinson, and P. L. Smithers.

The Ravinia opera opens on Saturday evening, June 23, and lasts ten weeks. The Chicago opera has had up to now a ten weeks' season. Mr. Insull, in spite of a pathetic appeal from the editorial columns of this newspaper, is planning next autumn and winter to prolong the Civic opera engagement to eleven or twelve weeks. The Metropolitan company in New York presents opera for twenty weeks each year. This is merely a statement of operatic plans.

To this writer one of the chief claims Ravinia has on public attention and support is its work through weekly free concerts for children who are among its most enthusiastic supporters and attendants. If a child can learn early to know and love good music, it is an equipment of inestimable value for the rest of that child's life. Such a taste well directed, gives its possessors a possibility for enjoyment not duplicated by anything else offered in this life. It takes those who are so blest into realms not shared by the rest of us, realms where all else is forgotten but the esthetic pleasure at the gorgeous combinations of sounds, measures, melodies, rhythms, which salute their ears in quite different fashion from that wave length which beats upon the eardrum of the uninitiated.

Even the uninitiated become sensible after acquaintance to the enjoyment sensed by the real music lovers. The Chicago Symphony concerts prove that. They have been a wonderful education to thousands of unmusical people, teaching them discrimination and the difference between good and bad music.

The Civic opera is performing a like mission.

On the Road to Lake Forest.

Summer migrations are beginning unusually early this year. The highroad to Lake Forest, for instance, was clogged the latter end of last week with trucks bearing the lares and penates of the A. A. Carpenters, the Charles B. Pikes, Mrs. C. M. Ely, the William P. Martins, the Hugh J. McBirneys, the Graham Aldises, and many other regular summer residents of that cheerful suburb.

Lake Forest will have some new recruits this summer from Chicago's winter colony. Mr. and Mrs. Hale Holden have taken the Clifford Barnes place on the lake side of the town. Lake Foresters are divided into two classes—those who live either east or west of the tracks. Like a huge spine the Northwestern tracks lie along the populous north shore, a spine utterly important to the anatomy which it endows with life as it provides it with all the things needed to live in that district. There is a silent controversy (not so silent perhaps) between those who inhabit the lake side and those who dwell on the west side of this spine, as to the respective desirability of these divisions. Each side considers that it takes the palm for attractiveness, the Skokie sunsets being held to offset the iridescent loveliness of the lake. Each to his taste!

Other Chicagoites, not habitués of the nearby summer colonies, who are also to be in Lake Forest are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson, who have leased Mrs. Mark Morton's house; Mr. and Mrs. William McCormick Blair, who will be in Dr. Samuel J. Walker's house on Telegraph road, and Mr. and Mrs.

Mr. and Mrs. Noble Judah are moving this week into their new home overlooking the Skokie and opening by a lane off Green Bay road. They are moving not only their furniture and other belongings, but are taking with them the sweetest little twins ever seen, whom they have just adopted. It is not uncommon for warm hearted folk to adopt one child, but to undertake the responsibilities of a pair of youngsters who entered into this mortal existence practically simultaneously is unusual and the opposite of cruel. The Judah twins are only a few months old, and their adopted parents are said to be delighted with them.

Another instance of recent adopting of a child is that of Mrs. Emmons Blaine Jr. who has lately adopted a little boy a year younger than her only child, a 5 year old little girl. Mrs. Blaine lives in Hubbard Woods, and has many friends in that part of the north shore. Her undertaking has aroused the sympathetic interest of all who know her.

In Honor of the Princess.

The 160 guests who attended the dinner given by the Italy-American society at the Casino on Wednesday evening in honor of the Princess Santa Borghese were much interested in this remarkable representative of modern Italy. After dinner she gave a careful description of the Fascisti movement and its origin. She is quite unlike what we have become accustomed to expect from Italy. She is all that is modern. Her hair is what we would call bobbed, except that the term does not describe its soft, yet chic charm. She is young, good looking, and dresses in full, flowing garments which are extremely becoming. Her English is amazing because of its excellence. It is no barrier in her addresses. Her voice is rich and rather low pitched. She is decidedly serious in her manner and general effect.

In fact, this quality of seriousness is evident in all of the people who come to us from Europe. The young Swedish countess, Ellen Douglas, had it to a marked degree. Mrs. Strachey, who was here lately from England, was noticeably grave. Lord Robert Cecil was quiet and earnest, making his points without a smile or lightening of his rather melancholy expression. We Americans, with our cheerful exuberance and animation, must strike these visitors from those unhappy and stricken lands as strange and out of the picture. Europe will not learn again to smile, I fear, for the rest of this generation.

The Princess Borghese is going to speak on several occasions both here and in Milwaukee. On Tuesday evening she will be the guest of the Cordon club. She will speak to its members in the Assembly rooms in the Fine Arts building, and a reception for her will follow in the club rooms. What a phantasmagoria of faces and still more faces she will take back to Italy with her!

Club Women Here Organizing for Better Homes Week

By Kate Webber.

"A HUNDRED years from now your descendants will still be reaping the harvest of your labor for better homes in America."

These words, sent out by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce for the United States, to workers for the Better Homes in America demonstration week, to be observed June 4 to 10, summarize the object for which the work is being done. It is a national movement, and is to be carried on in each community with the coöperation of many civic organizations interested in better homes for the community, better health, greater thrift in the management of the home, and greater general community welfare.

Mrs. Russell Tyson has been appointed by the national advisory council to be chairman of the Chicago council, and will have on her council Mrs. Charles S. Clark, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Mrs. Bertram W. Sippy, and Mrs. Parmelee McFadden. Headquarters for the preliminary work will be at 1730 Stevens building. It is to be educational.

The methods to be followed include (1) an educational campaign conducted with the assistance of the press, stores, factories, churches, settlements, schools and clubs. (2) a demonstration of model home or homes to be selected, completely furnished and equipped for inspection by the public. An interesting program of lectures, cooking demonstrations, and other exhibits of interest to the homemaker will be arranged.

It is expected that business will be greatly stimulated by this demonstration week, as well as wholesome living and civic pride.

The governors of thirty states have indorsed the movement, and the national advisory council consists of many authorities on the subjects of public health, home economics, civic building commerce, education, labor, construction, agriculture, and other related subjects. Among these council members are Calvin Coolidge, vice president of the United States; Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce; Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture; James John Davis, secretary of labor; Julius H. Barnes, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; John Barton Payne, chairman of the general committee of the American Red Cross; Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Lena Lake Forrest, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and many others.

Among the local organizations coöperating are the Chicago Woman's club, the University of Chicago settlement, the Chicago Housewives' league, the Association of Housekeeping Centers, Chicago Commons, Hull House, the School of Domestic Arts and Science, Eli Bates settlement, the Chicago Church federation, the Board of Education, the Young Women's Christian association, the Parent-Teacher associations, the Associated Jewish Charities, and the Catholic Women's league. Frequent meetings of the group are being held at headquarters.

ROME De Luxe QUALITY

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Physicians Work With Nature

Successful physicians recognize that Nature is their greatest aid in restoring health. Restful sleep is the greatest builder and restorer of energy ever discovered. But unfortunately the ordinary bed spring is not designed for rest. It exerts heavy pressure where it shouldn't and fails to support where it should. Thus the spine is distorted and the body held cramped and uncomfortable, thus absolutely preventing relaxed sleep.

The Rome De Luxe Bedspring is designed and built to correct such evils. It flows about the body curves, supporting each part equally. It does not sag, and two persons can lie comfortably upon it side by side each on his own level. Nervous diseases and lassitude induced by an uncomfortable bedspring will disappear when a Rome De Luxe is used.

Ask for Rome Quality De Luxe at your dealer's today: It is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds. Write for our book "Sleep and Its Relation to Health." It's free.

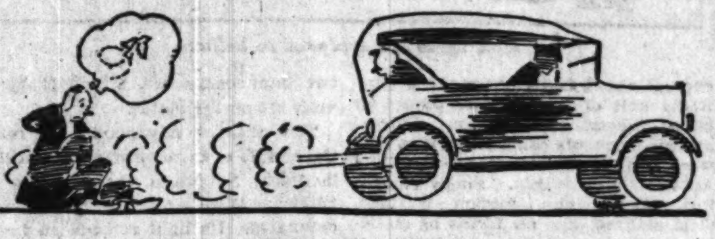
Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

"SAY IT WITH BRAKES AND SAVE THE FLOWERS."

"Say it with brakes and save the flowers,"
A pretty good hunch for this world of ours,
Where every one whizzes and rushes by
With a sneerful snort and a raucous cry,
Where no one's supposed to be doing well
Unless he is riding for leather'n' hell—
Step on the gas, boys . . . into the grave,
Think of the flowers a feller could save!



"Say it with brakes and save the flowers"—
Good for the peoples, good for the powers;
Good for the man in the buzzing bus;
Good for the birds on the curb who cuss;
It's good for you and it's good for me,
One smack of a crack of a fine idee
For this speed-mad crazy old world of ours:
"Say it with brakes and save the flowers."

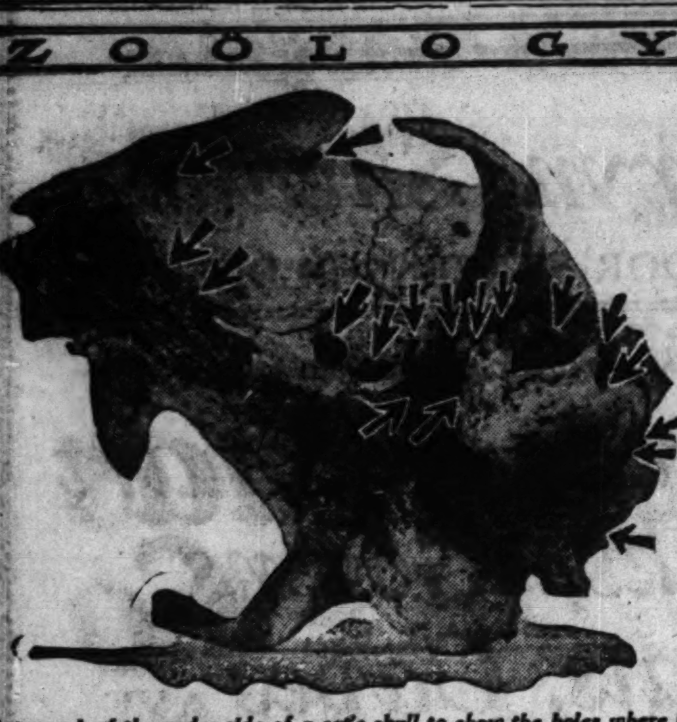
ZOOLOGY



Photograph of the under side of a cat's skull to show the holes where the nerves leave the skull. The upper jaw has been removed.

NERVES REVEAL EVOLUTION.

THE ditch is dried up now, for the deluging rains of late spring have not yet filled it. A flat, muddy bottom is exposed. On either bank grass is sprouting with little blades, but in the ditch itself there is a desert, a soil on which no verdure can take root.

Among the sticks and rusting cans there lies a shapeless scattering of fur and bones. It has lain there for at least two years, for the roots of last year's water plants are twined about the ribs. Here is the creature's skull, half buried in the clay. We turn it over with a stick.

The animal was a cat. What an exceptionally large and savage feline he must have been, to judge by his long white fangs. He was an old cat, too, for his bones are deeply ossified, and the skull has not disintegrated the way a young animal's skull would have done.

Do you see any epic of the race of vertibrates, any history of the evolution of animals written in that skull? No, you confess. I see only a shape of dirty bones, with some fur still adhering.

But you should be observing. Here is a hole.

Yes, that is the foramen magnum, where the spinal cord enters the skull. And here are some more holes.

Yes, where nerves came out, no doubt.

And see these tiny holes.

These were, no doubt, nerve holes, too. We will connect this mute testimony into an account of why those holes are there or why the nerves came out from the brain as they did.

In past ages, many millions of years ago, the ancestors of cats, men, and all vertibrates lived in the water. They looked something like worms, although they swam like fish. Their bodies were made of rings, or segments, like an angleworm's, and each segment bore two rays, or arms.

The rays near the head in time developed into jaws, eyes, nostrils, and other features of the skull. Other rays made fins and, later, arms and legs.

Each ray, from the first, had a nerve to guide its movements. When the front part of the body grew hard with bone the stony tissues hardened around the existing nerves. The nerves were the real living tissues. The bones around them were always merely adjuncts. These holes in this cat's skull reveal the ancestry of the feline race. If you were to look at the underside of a human skull you would see identical holes. Anatomists believe the skulls of all vertibrates in the beginning contained at least nineteen segments, for nineteen pairs of nerves are found emerging through the bones.

CHEMISTRY

HELIUM BASE OF MATTER.

IT NOW appears probable that the transmutation of metals, the dream of the alchemists, will be realized in the next few years. The olden time scientists, who worked in darkness and trembled for their lives whenever an officer of the law passed, did not work in vain. They did not live to see the final triumph, but their labors may make it possible for us to see it.

The alchemists mainly sought a way to turn cheap metals into gold. When they began working they had only the haziest notions about what matter is made of. In addition to wringing unwilling secrets from ores and rocks, they ran great risks of being arrested and executed, for it was long the fashion to consider heretics, wizards, blasphemers, and natural philosophers as the special servants of the powers of darkness, and to root them out wherever found. Many of them were burned at the stake. Paracelsius was thrown over a cliff and Lavoissier had his head cut off.

Science differs from the arts. When a great artist dies, his power for deeds ceases, and those who come after must in a fashion begin afresh. Science does not have this limitation. One man can use another's man's work, a third use the work of the two, and so on.

The arts are still personal and disassociated, but science is a well knit whole that any one can contribute to or derive profit from. The chemists of today do good work because they have the discoveries of their predecessors to work from.

After a while the alchemists learned enough about matter to make a creditable unit of science; and then they called themselves chemists. Peoples and governments came to see that they were useful. Modern war is largely a fight with chemicals. Photo engraving, photography, motion pictures, steel making, and all forms of metallurgy, artificial textiles, and industries without number, are based on chemical reactions.

From being poor, chemists have grown rich. The science now often returns good profits. These enable chemists to buy more and better apparatus, and conduct their investigations with a degree of refinement that the alchemists never dreamed of.

The original substance which is contained in all matter has been found It is helium. The way it was discovered is interesting.

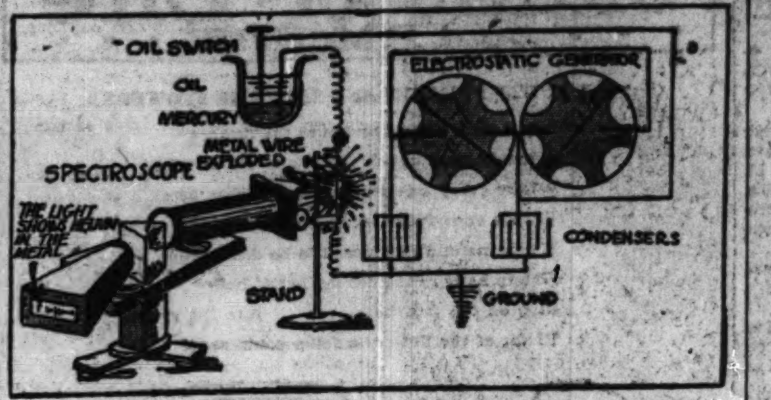
The laboratory is darkened. On the table in the center of the room stands a spectroscope, among a tangle of wires and lenses. Sitting apart by itself is a stand in whose rigid jaws is held a fine metal wire, no larger than a hair. The spectroscope is trained on the wire, and a photograph plate is open, ready to take a picture.

The wire is to be exploded. Its atoms are going to be torn to fragments by a heat one hundred times as great as that of the sun. A current of electricity is to be shot through the metal, so far beyond the latter's capacity to carry it that the molecules will be dissipated instantly.

The wire in this case is made of tungsten. In a corner a huge electrostatic machine is purring, charging two giant condensers. Thirty thousand volts are on the plates.

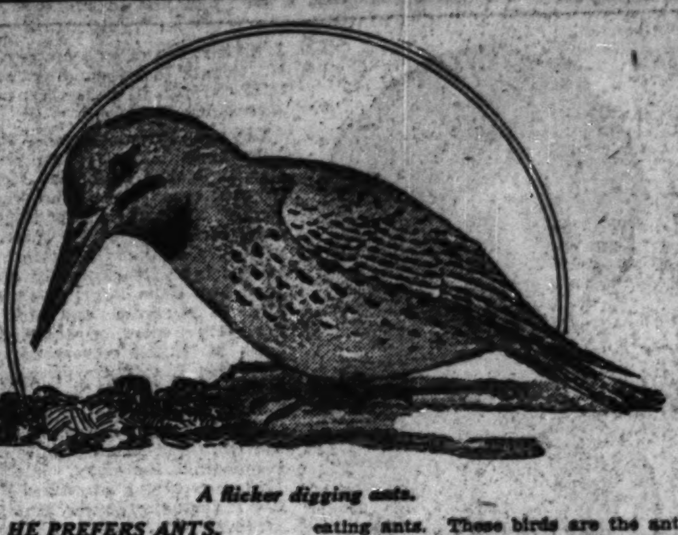
The chemist advances. He seizes the handle of the oil switch. He pushes it down; he snaps the contacts together. With a burst of fire the wire detonates. Its light records an image in the spectroscope.

We push the plate into a developing bath. An image comes up. But it is not that of tungsten. At the temperature of the flash, the metal was tungsten no more, but helium gas.



How wires are exploded to helium.

Birds



A flicker digging ants.

HE PREFERS ANTS.

"WHICKER, whicker, whicker, whicker!" A harsh, loud cry rang through the trees. A flicker!

We approach him. He sees us. In alarm he flies, crying, "Whick! whick! whick!"

Sometimes we come upon a flicker eating ants. These birds are the ant eaters of the feathered world. They were evolved to dig grubs out of hardwood, like the other woodpeckers. But once the flicker evolved a long beak and a sticky tongue, he found it was much easier and also better fare to dig up ants' nests. Of course, a flicker is not averse to pecking at a tree when he is hungry, but he would much prefer to dig in the soft ground.

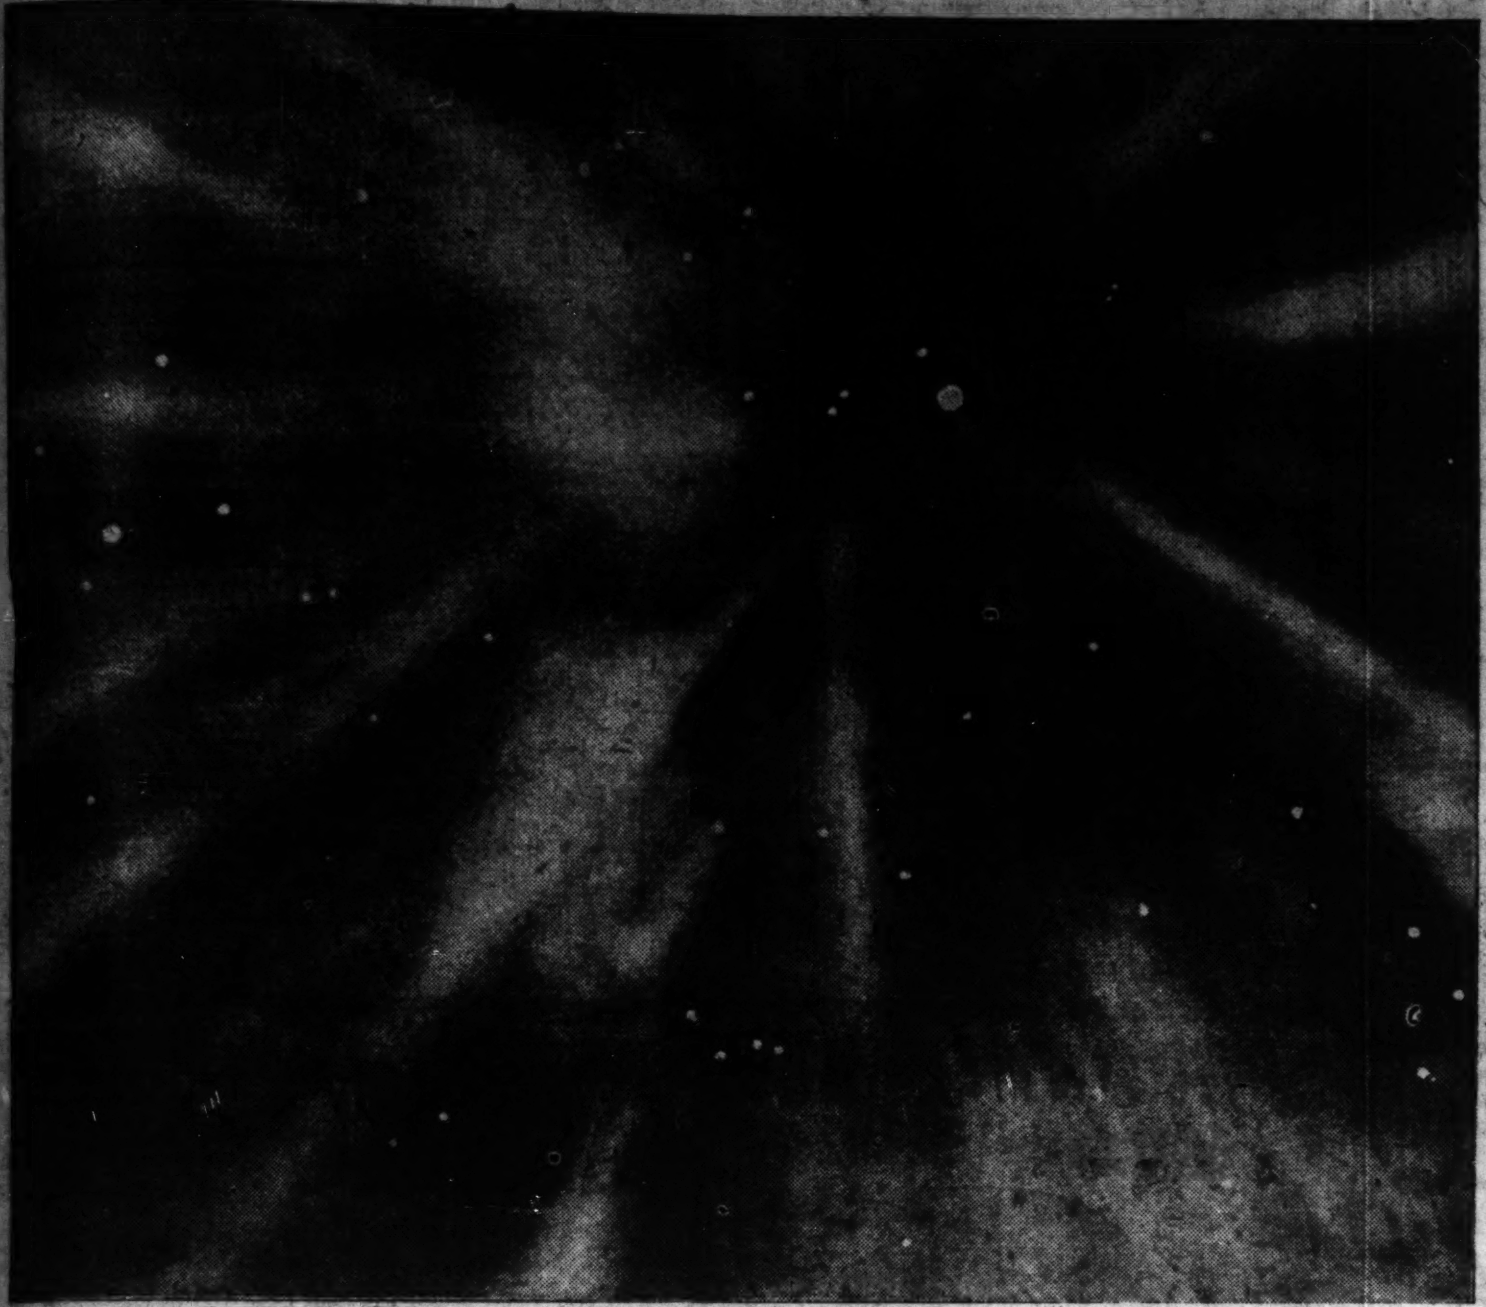
ASTRONOMY



Looking overhead, we see the streamers of the aurora meeting at the zenith.

By Selby Maxwell.

THE telegraphers sit at their desks, helpless. At the hour when traffic as a rule is heaviest, they are idle, and the sounders are silent. No messages are coming over the transcontinental wires, nor can any be sent. The wires are dead. Outside, in the starry sky, an electrical storm is raging. The air is quiet and peaceful, as though nature were tranquil and slumbering. The night air is balmy, but the stars shine wanly, as though through a veil of light. Arching over the heavens' dome, like the ribs of a great umbrella, pulses the aurora.

The northern sky is glowing with a soft green light. Three arches span the horizon, one above the other, while from far down long streamers, like tongues of light from searchlights, weave and play upon the upper air.

Above, the vault pulses with fitful sheets of gossamer, so rapid and elusive that we can hardly mark their place. They weave and dance in awe inspiring majesty, without a sound, in the silent darkness. At times the whole sky lights up, with patches flitting like puffs of breath upon a frosty window pane.

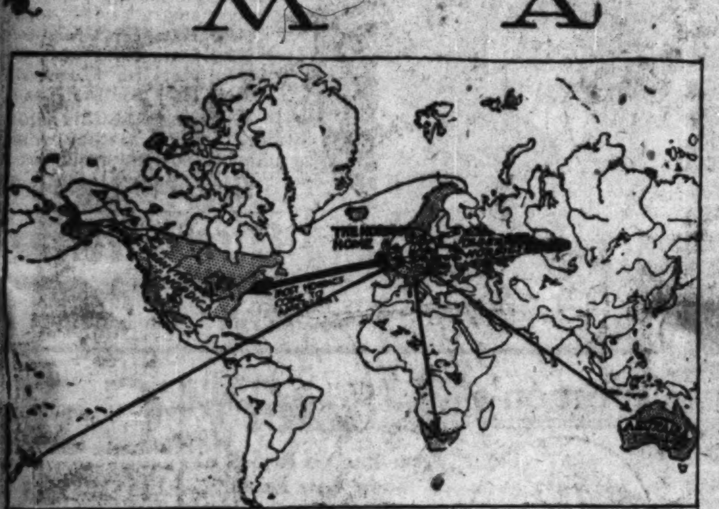
The earth is being bombarded with electrons. Celestial electricity is pouring in upon us. Its currents wrap themselves around the telegraph wires, they enter the ground that would be the wires return circuit, they produce such strong induced currents that no telegram can make the line.

The storm and the aurora keep on all night, and into the dawn. The sun comes rising. On its face is the black sunspot that produced the storm.

In a telescope this spot is a veritable inferno of motion. Sheets of flame as big as the United States flicker about its edge. The gases are whirling downward, as though into a funnel. Round and round they go. The fires on the sun are not flames of carbon gas, as most combustions are on the earth, but white hot vapors of metals, iron, calcimu, magnesium, calumenuin and sodium.

The sun itself is made mostly of iron. It is a magnet. When these electrical conductors whirl in a magnetic field, they create a gigantic dynamo. A stream of electricity pours out from the vortex. When the earth encounters it, we have an electrical storm and flashing northern lights.

MAN



Where Anglo-Saxons come from.

BLONDE people might almost be termed blood kin when looked at in the light of humanity as a whole. Nine-tenths of the blondes in America belong to one family, and within the last thousand years have come from within a circle whose center is Schleswig-Holstein and whose radius is 500 miles. This little spot on the globe is the homeland of the northern Europeans, or the Nordic race.

Look at this small circle on the map. From this little spot has come all the good government in the world today; all science, all military power, most of the literature, most of the modern inventions, such as labor saving machinery, electricity, engines, and the like. Most of the wealth of the world is concentrated in the hands of people from here. It is amazing to think that this small spot and its outpourings could so completely dominate all the other peoples in the world in one thousand years.

But the really amazing part is still to tell. Three thousand years ago the spot was smaller, and included little more than Schleswig-Holstein itself. There were few Nordics then, and what there were were for the most part savages. Or should we call them that?

There is a distinction between ignorant and uninformed. The black savage cannot learn because he lacks power of perseverance. Our Baltic ancestors knew little of the arts of civilization, for the same reason that a child knows little of them; they were not grown up yet. Do not think that the Nordics of olden times were lacking in keenness of mind or fierceness of spirit. All contemporary historians speak of them with a shudder, so irresistible was their earnestness once they undertook a venture.

There are many proto-Nordics in eastern Europe, in Russia, Poland, Hungary, and the Balkans. They have Nordic teeth, eyes, noses, hands, heads, and, to a certain extent, minds; but withal they are different from the fiery Teutonic Nordics, or, as we would say, Anglo-Saxons.

RADIO

SUNSHINE KILLS RADIO.

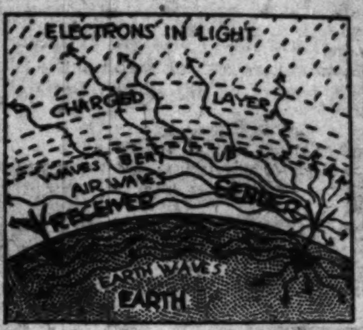
RADIO waves travel better in winter than in summer, and better at night than in the daytime.

We are now approaching the season when broadcasting will be difficult, and when only the best radio sets can be expected to give satisfaction.

The reason why wireless waves cannot pass strong sunshine is interesting. The sun pours forth prodigious quantities of electricity every day, in the shape of fine, flying particles, or electrons.

The daylight side of the earth is constantly bombarded by electrons. They penetrate our air to within about fifty miles of the ground, and are there stopped by friction.

An electron is a particle of electricity, and it carries a negative charge. In fact, it is the negative charge itself. The zone where electrons are stopped by the air becomes strongly charged soon after the sun rises.



A charged air hinders radio.

Wireless waves do not run altogether in the air. They are really double, with half in the earth and half above it, at no great distance. The waves hug the ground, and go around the bulge of the earth, instead of straight out into space. The reason for this is simple.

The air near the ground is a fair conductor of electricity, compared with the vacuum of space. The waves stay close to the earth because ordinarily there is nothing to carry them away. But where the upper air is ionized by sunshine, the case is different. Then the upper air is a better conductor than the lower air. Wireless waves at once leave the ground, and travel into space, and because they miss our aerials we say they do not carry.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Chicago Temple Ready for Church Offices This Week

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

MAY moving will change the location of the headquarters of several denominations. The largest group will move into the Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets, which is still in process of building but will be ready for the new church offices this week. Those changing are the Presbyterians, together with the Presbyterian book store; the Chicago Church federation, and the western office of the Federal council of the Churches of Christ in America; the Disciples of Christ and the offices of the district superintendents, the bishop, Chicago area office of conservation and advance of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the book store of the Methodist Book concern.

The Congregationalists will move the Pilgrim book store to the eighth floor of Association building, 19 South La Salle street. The various offices of the denomination will occupy the entire eighth floor. There will also be a rest room and a small auditorium for the regular weekly meetings of the ministers.

The Baptist executive council, the Baptist Young People's Union association, and the literature department of the general promotion society have already moved to the Bishop building, 1?? North Wabash avenue.

The United Lutheran church organizations of various kinds have moved into temporary quarters in the Capitol building, and within a few weeks will move to their new headquarters building, 860 North Cass street.

The gift of $500,000 for education and philanthropy in connection with Catholic charities in memory of his wife and daughter is announced from Frank J. Lewis, chairman of the F. J. Lewis Manufacturing company. Mr. Lewis was the first, it was said, to establish a standard of liberal giving for the Catholic Associated Charities by a regular donation to the fund of $10,000. The foundation will be named the Alberta E. and Charlotte Lewis foundation, the interest of which will be devoted to the continuation of charities in which the mother and daughter were so much interested, as evidenced by previous gifts of Mrs. Lewis while living of $10,000 to Rosary college, $10,000 to Visitation school, Rock Island, and many similar gifts.

Watch your step! Churches—except those whose pastors forget—will observe daylight saving hours today. If you didn't set your clock back one hour and you follow the old time, you will probably be going to church when others are singing the doxology ready for the return home.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America will meet in Indianapolis on May 17. The Presbyterian home board is making a vigorous appeal for $200,000 to close the year without debt. The total debt was $460,000. Two hundred thousand dollars has been obtained by special subscriptions. One donor promises $60,000 if the general church membership will give the $200,000.

The Rev. Leslie Willis Sprague, former pastor of Wellington Avenue Congregational church, will preach there today at 11 o'clock.

Delegates and friends attending the Bahai convention at the Auditorium hotel will visit the Bahai temple, called Mashreq'ul Azkar at Wilmette, this morning. At noon a dinner will be served in the foundation room of the temple. At 3 p. m. an open meeting will be held at the Auditorium, Chi-

THE REV. NORMAN HUTTON, S.T.D.

Dr. Hutton is rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, which will dedicate today at 3 p. m. the new parish house, 1414-1424 North Dearborn street, near Schiller. Dr. Hutton has been rector of the church fourteen years. The new parish house is of stone, cost $250,000, and is the first unit in a plan which provides for the future erection of a stone church which will be one of the finest edifices in Chicago.

The ceremony this afternoon will be held outdoors in the court between the parish house and the church. The speakers will speak from a stone pulpit which is part of the parish house. The program will be unique in having two representatives of other denominations in addition to the Episcopal bishop of Chicago. A processional of choir and clergy singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers," will begin the ceremony.

Addresses will be made by Dr. John Timothy Stone, Fourth Presbyterian church; Horace Bridges, Chicago Ethical Culture society, and Bishop Charles P. Anderson. The "Hallelujah Chorus" from "The Messiah" will be sung. If the weather is unfavorable, the ceremony will be held in the church.

The Price of a Girl's Ambition!

Mary Ryan must pay the price the woman always pays, says New York's "400"

How many girls—or even women of calculating age—would chance the things Mary Ryan chose to do to gain the goal of her ambitions?

The risks this girl has accepted, open-eyed and informed beyond her tender years, have dragged the social elect of a great city, and all America, into controversy. There are women of the world who coolly await Mary Ryan's day for paying the price; and men of business—and those who play at business—who plan that she shall.

Read just how this price is paid in George Gibbs' great novel, "Fires of Ambition"—and then read the latest stories by Booth Tarkington, Rupert Hughes and thirteen other famous authors in the May issue of,

Dainty Open-work
This exquisite "Sunburst" design is just one of many open patterns by Van Raalte in a variety so great that every woman can find a style suited to the occasion and to her own costume. For evening, ask to see those with lace patterns over the instep. Prices from $5.00 to $6.50.

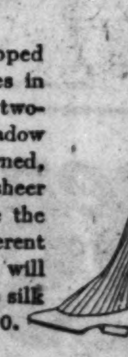
Van Raalte has designed many variations of this popular style including simple side clocks suitable for day time wear and extending to the most elaborate lace patterns covering the whole instep and intended for evening wear. Paris clocks are offered in black, white and colors. Priced from $3.00 to $6.50.



Two-toned Stripes

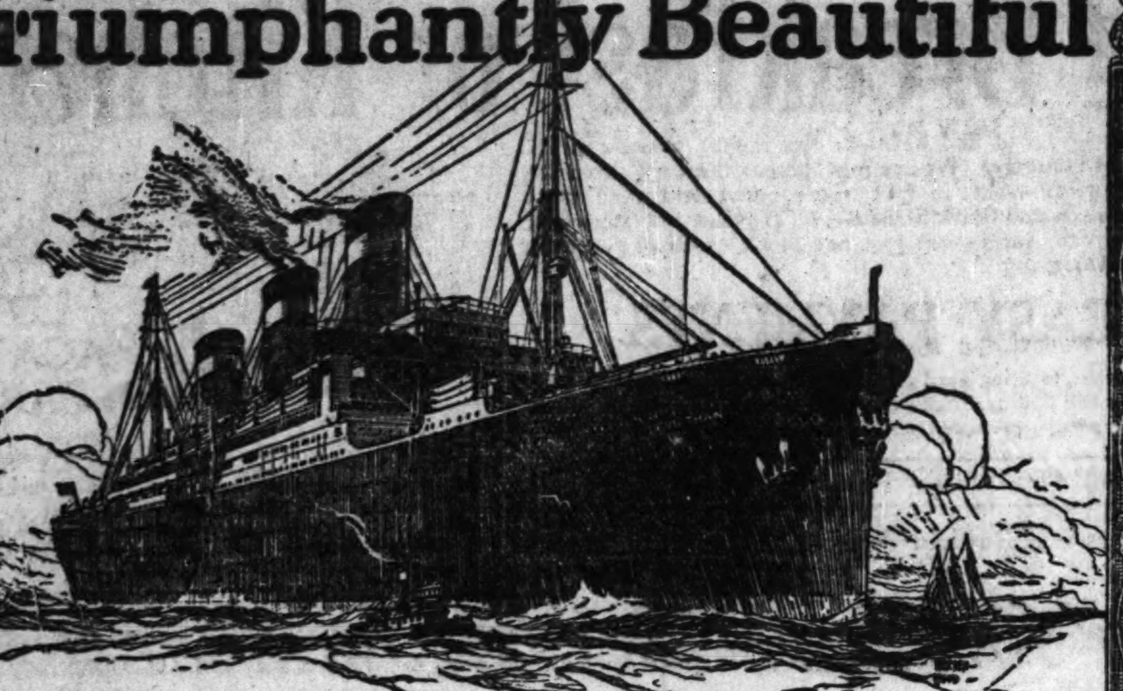
Triumphantly Beautiful



LEVIATHAN

The Largest Ship in the World

THE S. S. Leviathan represents a triumph for the American people—a triumph which will be fully realized with the first great sailing on July 4th. For the Leviathan is not only the largest ship in the world; it is the world's most beautiful ship.

The Leviathan's gross tonnage is 59,956.65. This almost incredible immensity has been used as a huge canvas might be used by a great artist—as an opportunity for harmonious perfection of detail.

In every respect this great vessel is an American ship. The very name Leviathan is vibrant with memories of gallant service during the late war. When the ship was reconditioned for passenger service American hands and brains did the work—virtually made the vessel over. As a result, the sheer beauty and luxury of the Leviathan surpasses anything ever known before. This ship—your ship—is in truth triumphantly beautiful.

Write today for full information. Do not miss the first historic sailing on July 4th. Act quickly. Send in the information blank today.

Swing along with style—— in comfort——you may now!

Shoes of fascinating style and daintiness of line . . . with a new and exclusive arch construction that assures absolute comfort.

Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoes for Women signalize a new era in footwear . . . . here are shoes that finally and successfully combine style and comfort without sacrifice of either.

Wolock & Bauer announce new departments in their three stores, to be devoted to the sale of these shoes . . . Wolock & Bauer commend and endorse this footwear as the ideal style and comfort shoes for the woman of today.

Women who have found difficulty in securing shoes that look right and feel right . . . . women who require smart shoes but whose feet have revolted through lack of proper and adequate arch support . . . are definitely certain of style and comfort satisfaction when they wear Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoes.

That simple, wonderfully effective device in the illustration at the left is built right into the shanks of the shoes . . . and does its work perfectly, without the slightest disparagement to the appearance of the shoes.

The ultra-smartness and the quality leathers and fabrics of Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoes will infinitely satisfy your requirements of style and value . . . . while the Feeture Arch will make walking an indescribable delight.

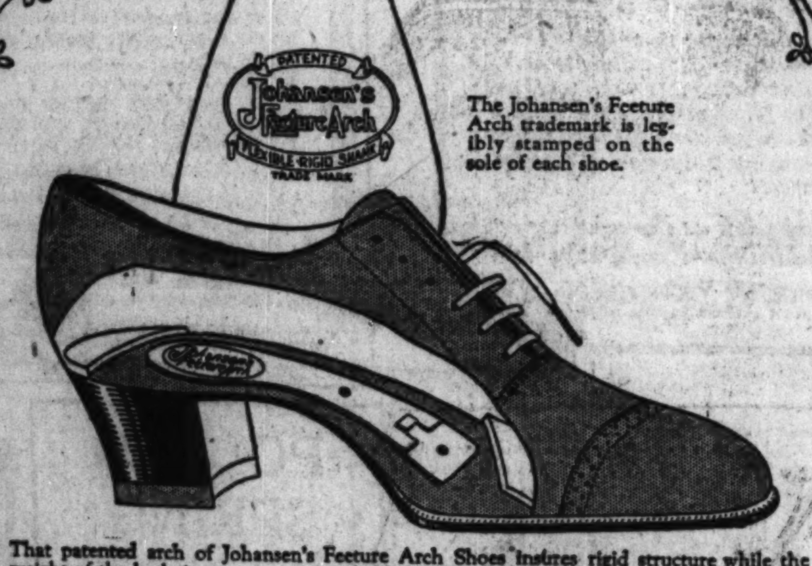
See These Wonderful Shoes at Your Earliest Opportunity!

Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoes for women are sold exclusively in Chicago by Wolock & Bauer. The three convenient W & B stores on the north, west and south sides make it possible for any woman in Chicago or Chicago's suburbs to possess a pair of these wonderful shoes . . . .

Shoes of Superior Style and Solid Comfort!

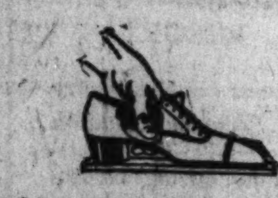
Orders by mail will be given prompt, careful attention

JUST FIVE OF THE VARIED STYLES ARE ILLUSTRATED BELOW



The Johansen's Feeture Arch trademark is legibly stamped on the sole of each shoe.

That patented arch of Johansen's Feeture Arch Shoes insures rigid structure while the weight of the body is upon it . . . yet pliable and flexible the moment the weight is lifted. The Feeture of the Arch is the hinge-like part that yields to the natural movements of the foot muscles and yet provides staunch support to the arch.



Johansen's Feeture Arch resists the direct downward footpressure, yet——is flexible enough to allow the natural walking movements of the feet.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN ADVERTISING.

To a college trained man, one of our clients offers a very attractive opening in its advertising departments. The opportunity is twofold: 1st, to gain a sound knowledge of effective advertising; 2d, to combine with it a broad understanding of general merchandising as practiced by one of the largest, most successful organizations of its kind.

Responsibility will be given as rapidly as the individual proves himself ready to accept it. Applicants should be young enough to learn readily, mature enough to have sane judgment, willing to start at a moderate salary, but with the capacity to be worth more soon; advertising experience is not necessary, but the ability to write clear, forceful English is essential.

Aply by letter only, giving enough facts about yourself so that we may form some picture of your personality and your qualifications from your letter.

South Shore Drive

We have a few choice 2, 3, and 4 room apartments left in this, the most beautiful and exclusive building ever built in the South Shore district, overlooking the lake and South Shore Country club grounds. With the new motor bus line passing the door and the South Shore station of the Illinois Central only two short blocks away, the location is the most desirable on the South Side. All the apartments have Murphy In-a-Dor beds, all tile bathrooms, and built-in showers. The lighting fixtures are the most beautiful money can buy. These apartments are now ready for occupancy, which means one can save considerable on increased moving costs and also avoid the rush. Only those who can furnish highest class references will be accepted as tenants. Agent on the premises every day.

LESS THAN 1½ MILES TO LAKE; NEAR PROPOSED "L" EXTENSION, NEW McCORMICK-BLVD. AND OTHER GREAT DEVELOPMENTS.

Values Will Triple in 5 Years.

YOU KNOW of all Chicago properties the HOWARD AV. district has made the biggest gains. Lots in the WILSON-AV. and LAWRENCE-AV. districts which 20 years ago sold at from $50 to $100 a foot are now in most cases worth $1,500 to $5,000 a foot. Property on Howard-av. less than a mile east of us, which could have been bought 13 years ago by the acre at any price, is now selling at from $500 to $2,200 a foot.

A BETTER OPPORTUNITY is now offered you, which should be equally as good as the WILSON-AV., LAWRENCE-AV., or other North Side districts. The new proposed surface and elevated extensions which will be built during the first period of construction will hugely increase land values along these rights of way.

Many people who followed our advice on the ROOSEVELT-RD., LAWRENCE-AV., and other districts are now independently wealthy.

SINCE JAN. 1 WE HAVE SOLD OVER $500,000 OF THESE APARTMENT AND BUSINESS SITES TO THE BEST CLASS OF BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE. 80 PER CENT OF THEM NOW LIVING WITHIN A FEW BLOCKS OF THIS PROPERTY, IN AND ADJOINING ROGERS PARK. OUR LIST OF BUYERS ON THESE PROPERTIES LOOKS LIKE A LIST OF "WHO'S WHO" IN CHICAGO'S BUSINESS, PROFESSIONAL, AND SOCIAL CIRCLES.

Every property that we have handled in our twelve years' business in Chicago has made money for our clients.

SUNDAY ONLY.
SALE STARTS AT 10 A. M.
COME OUT EARLY.

HOW TO GET THERE:

Take any North Side car line and transfer to Western-av. Our representatives, wearing RED BADGES, will meet you at HOWARD AND WESTERN-AVS. and show you the property.

NEW SUBDIVISION ON THE LAKE

Just sixteen home building sites, with frontages varying from 100 feet to 130 feet, and with depths ranging from 200 to 435 feet, comprise this little restricted subdivision, for which McGuire & Orr are the exclusive agents. Some of the lots extend to the water's edge, with full riparian rights. All of the lots have access to the lake through a private walk for the perpetual, exclusive use of the owners of this subdivision. Friends desiring to locate on adjoining sites have here a splendid opportunity, provided they act promptly. All improvements, such as sewer, water, pavement, gas, electricity and telephone, will be installed as soon as possible by the city of Highland Park and utility companies. In order to market this property quickly, the owners have authorized very low prices. The object is to dispose of the entire property almost simultaneously. Building restrictions are of a character that will forever insure a high class residential district. Price $75 per foot and up. This property will be shown from our Highland Park Office, 391 Central-av., just northeast of the Chicago and Northwestern and North Shore Electric depots. This office is open daily and Sunday.

HOMESEEKERS, INVESTORS, BUILDERS.

I have subdivided the finest and most desirably located tract in the heart of the most exclusive residential section of beautiful and will immediately offer to those who are looking for a choice, highly restricted homesite or investment, large lots 55x160 ft., at unusually low prices of $495 to $800, and will sell on very easy terms to responsible parties. There is no other property in Wheaton for sale at anywhere near these prices, and adjoining property is now being offered at nearly three times my prices. Each lot has a 40 ft. building line, $5,000 restriction, and is one of the very few places around Chicago where you are absolutely protected in the future against any undesirable element.

To those who are not familiar with Wheaton let me say that it is a completed and restricted community of artistic homes and fine improvements, situated on the very edge of Chicago in the direct path of the city's greatest growth. It is reached by 178 trains daily on the Chicago and Northwestern and Chicago-Aurora electric line, only 45 minutes from the loop and a monthly commutation fare of 14 cents.

In convenience, beauty, healthfulness, social life, and everything that makes a home location attractive this property presents a combination of city and country advantages that cannot be surpassed.

You could want no better, more attractive, more convenient location for a real home, and by buying from the owner you could hardly find a more desirable investment.

Write today for full particulars. Address F J 162, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Indiana.

BUY REAL LAND.

The safest investment in America is in good land.

I have for sale 250 acres of rich, level land 5¼ miles east of the Vanderburgh County Courthouse. Evansville, a city of 85,000, is bursting the traces growing and is the best city in the state. More natural resources than you will find anywhere. A great river at its door, being dammed for a permanent navigable stream from Pittsburgh to Cairo at all times. Big railroad systems and traction lines. A nationally known race course.

This wonderful farm is only ten minutes by auto from this fine city. Rock roads surround it. Loading station, both railroad and traction, within one-fourth of a mile. Land not as good as this near any other city of Evansville's class—sells for $400 to $600 per acre. City rapidly growing towards this. It is ditched and tiled.

Ask any banker in Evansville to name the value of any land in Section 19, where this land lies.

Buy it now at $225 per acre. It will yield you 4% net and should sell for $500 per acre in five years.

No finer place to live in this country.

WE SHOW YOU HOW TO START A STORE

Our expert service men, who cover all parts of the country, are continually learning of locations that offer exceptional opportunities for the establishing of Variety Stores.

Variety Stores usually pay a bigger return on investment than any other kind of a store.

They handle the kind of goods that sell at popular prices to the great big mass of buyers.

They are easy to operate—expert merchandise training or retail store experience are not essential.

We will show you how you can start a Variety Store and build up a successful and profitable business for yourself.

We will show you how to pick the choicest location, help you select your fixtures, your stock, how to mark your goods to make a profit, how to trim your windows, how to advertise, how to get the people coming to your store.

Being originators of the Variety business, we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling Variety Goods at retail.

And in helping others we have gained a vast fund of information which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field.

You can start a Variety Store on $2,500 to $6,000 capital.

Or, if you prefer to take over an established business, we know of one Variety Store on the South Side in Chicago that can be bought for $3,500, one on the North Side for $1,300, one in Michigan, thirty miles from Detroit, for $3,000, or one in a small city thirty miles from Chicago for $1,500.

A visit to our nearest house or inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strictest confidence and will place you under no obligation whatever.

DODGE BROTHERS
TOURING CAR

The car's true worth is never so thoroughly appreciated as during the long sunny days of Spring, Summer and Autumn.

Owners delight then, to answer the call of the open road, because they know that the car will carry them great distances at moderate cost.

They know, too, how dependably built it is, and how much that sort of workmanship means in terms of pleasure and economy.

They particularly value the all-steel body (originated by Dodge Brothers for this car) because it is trim and staunch—and smartly finished in durable baked-on enamel.

Convenient to enter, easy to clean, light, powerful and snugly curtained for winter driving, it would be difficult to conceive a car more perfectly designed for business and family use.

The GREAT CHURCH TRIAL at MOSCOW

THE WORLD PROTESTED THIS COURT'S DECISION in the case of the Roman Catholic priests who were tried for treason. This photograph was taken during the actual trial. The priests were charged with treason for concealing valuables ordered confiscated by the Soviet government. The arrow points out Prosecutor Krylenko. At his right is President Galakin. Bending over at the table to the left is the attorney for the defense, Puschkin, the most famous lawyer in all Russia.

DEATH WAS THE COURT'S SENTENCE for Archbishop Zepliak (1) and Vicar General Budkiewicz (2). The latter was executed by a Red army firing squad, but the archbishop's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. The other clergymen were co-defendants with these two in the Moscow trial.

Only One in Five is Safe

Heed the danger sign—bleeding gums

Just before Pyorrhea strikes—to undermine the teeth and health—kindly, knowing Nature sends a warning: the gums are tender and bleed easily.

Take heed immediately, before it is too late, before the gums recede and the loosened teeth must be extracted, before the germ-laden pus-pockets form, before infection spreads throughout the system.

Better yet, play safe. Don't wait for Nature's warning. Four persons out of every five over forty years of age, and thousands younger, are afflicted with Pyorrhea. This is the immutable law of averages. Your dentist will tell you that.

Go to him regularly, systematically, for tooth and gum inspection. And brush your teeth, twice daily at least, with Forhan's For the Gums. This healing dentifrice, if used in time and used consistently, will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. It will make your mouth clean and healthful, preserve your priceless teeth, safeguard your precious health.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S. It is time-tested, efficient, safe. The foremost dentists recommend and use it.

Be on your guard. Buy a tube of Forhan's For the Gums today. Brush your teeth with it regularly. Remember, in your case, the odds are 4 to 1 in favor of Pyorrhea. At all druggists, 35c and 60c in tubes.

I Still Look 20

after 32 years as a star

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Some of you remember me as a famous stage beauty over 30 years ago. Perhaps in "The Girl I Left Behind Me," in "La Belle Helene," in "Wang," or "Florodora."

Many of you see me now, playing young girls' parts, still looking like a girl in her 'teens.

Thousands of women have asked me the secrets of this perennial youth. I have supplied them to many, and they, like I, have kept their girlish charms.

Now for All Women

Now I am persuaded that I owe this information to all womankind. I have obtained by world-wide search, the best beauty helps in existence. I know they could bring to millions what they brought to me.

So I have arranged to supply these helps to all who want them—as a duty to my sex. I have had them prepared with the utmost skill, without regard to cost. And they are sold at modest prices, with small regard to profit.

Thus I hope to bring to girls and matrons everywhere the benefits I got. And no woman could ask for more.

My Beautiful Mother

My mother died a girlish beauty at the age of 57. From my earliest years she taught me her secrets. Then together we traveled the beauty-loving world in search of better methods.

We consulted able scientists, beauty specialists and famous beauties everywhere. The search cost us a fortune. But it brought to me and mine, and friends of mine, decades of added youth.

Now those helps are yours if you desire—the best that science knows. And I hope that my results will lead you to employ them.

White Youth Clay

I owe my debutante complexion largely to a superclay. Not like the crude and muddy clays so many use today, but a clean, refined clay which dries white. It is based on 20 years of scientific study by the ablest of clay experts.

One who applies it feels the impurities fairly drawn from the skin. All that clogs the skin comes out—the causes of blackheads and blemishes. The blood is brought to the surface. Large pores, lines and wrinkles yield.

Wash it off when it dries, then behold a new complexion, soft and rosy, clear and firm. The results will amaze and delight you. Many women in those 30 minutes seem to drop ten years.

Clay is a beauty essential. No woman looks her best without it, none keeps her youthful bloom. Women who use clay today stand out in any crowd.

Don't use crude and muddy clays, for they will disappoint. Try this supreme creation—the last word in facial clays. It will be a revelation.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay comes in tubes, at 50c and $1.

Facial Youth

This is a liquid cleansing cream which I learned about in France. It contains no animal, no vegetable oil, so it cannot assimilate with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. All the grime, all that clogs the skin goes with it. I use it night and morning, and whenever else my face needs cleaning.

Compare it with any cleansing cream or any cleansing method. You will be surprised at the extra dirt my Facial Youth removes. And a clean skin is essential to beauty.

The greatest beauty experts in the world now advise this formula for cleansing. But they charge a very high price. Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth sells for 75c per bottle.

Youth Cream

This is my cold cream which I apply at night. Also in daytimes as a powder base. Also after every application of my Youth Clay or Facial Youth.

Youth Cream contains both lemon and strawberry. It is the only cream, I believe, which combines these fruit effects.

It softens, whitens, feeds and firms the skin. After its use I awake in the morning blooming like a girl in her 'teens.

In all my many years of searching I have never found a cold cream to compare with this. Nor has any woman whom I know. Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream costs 60c per jar.

Hair Youth

My hair is my greatest glory. It is thick, silky, lustrous, and grows finer every year. Before I bobbed it, it fell below my knees.

I have never had falling hair or dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Nor has any friend who uses my formula. Nor had mother, who found this formula in France. She died at 57 with hair like mine today.

This is due to my hair youth. I apply it daily with an eye-dropper—just enough to dampen the scalp. This method does not muss the hair.

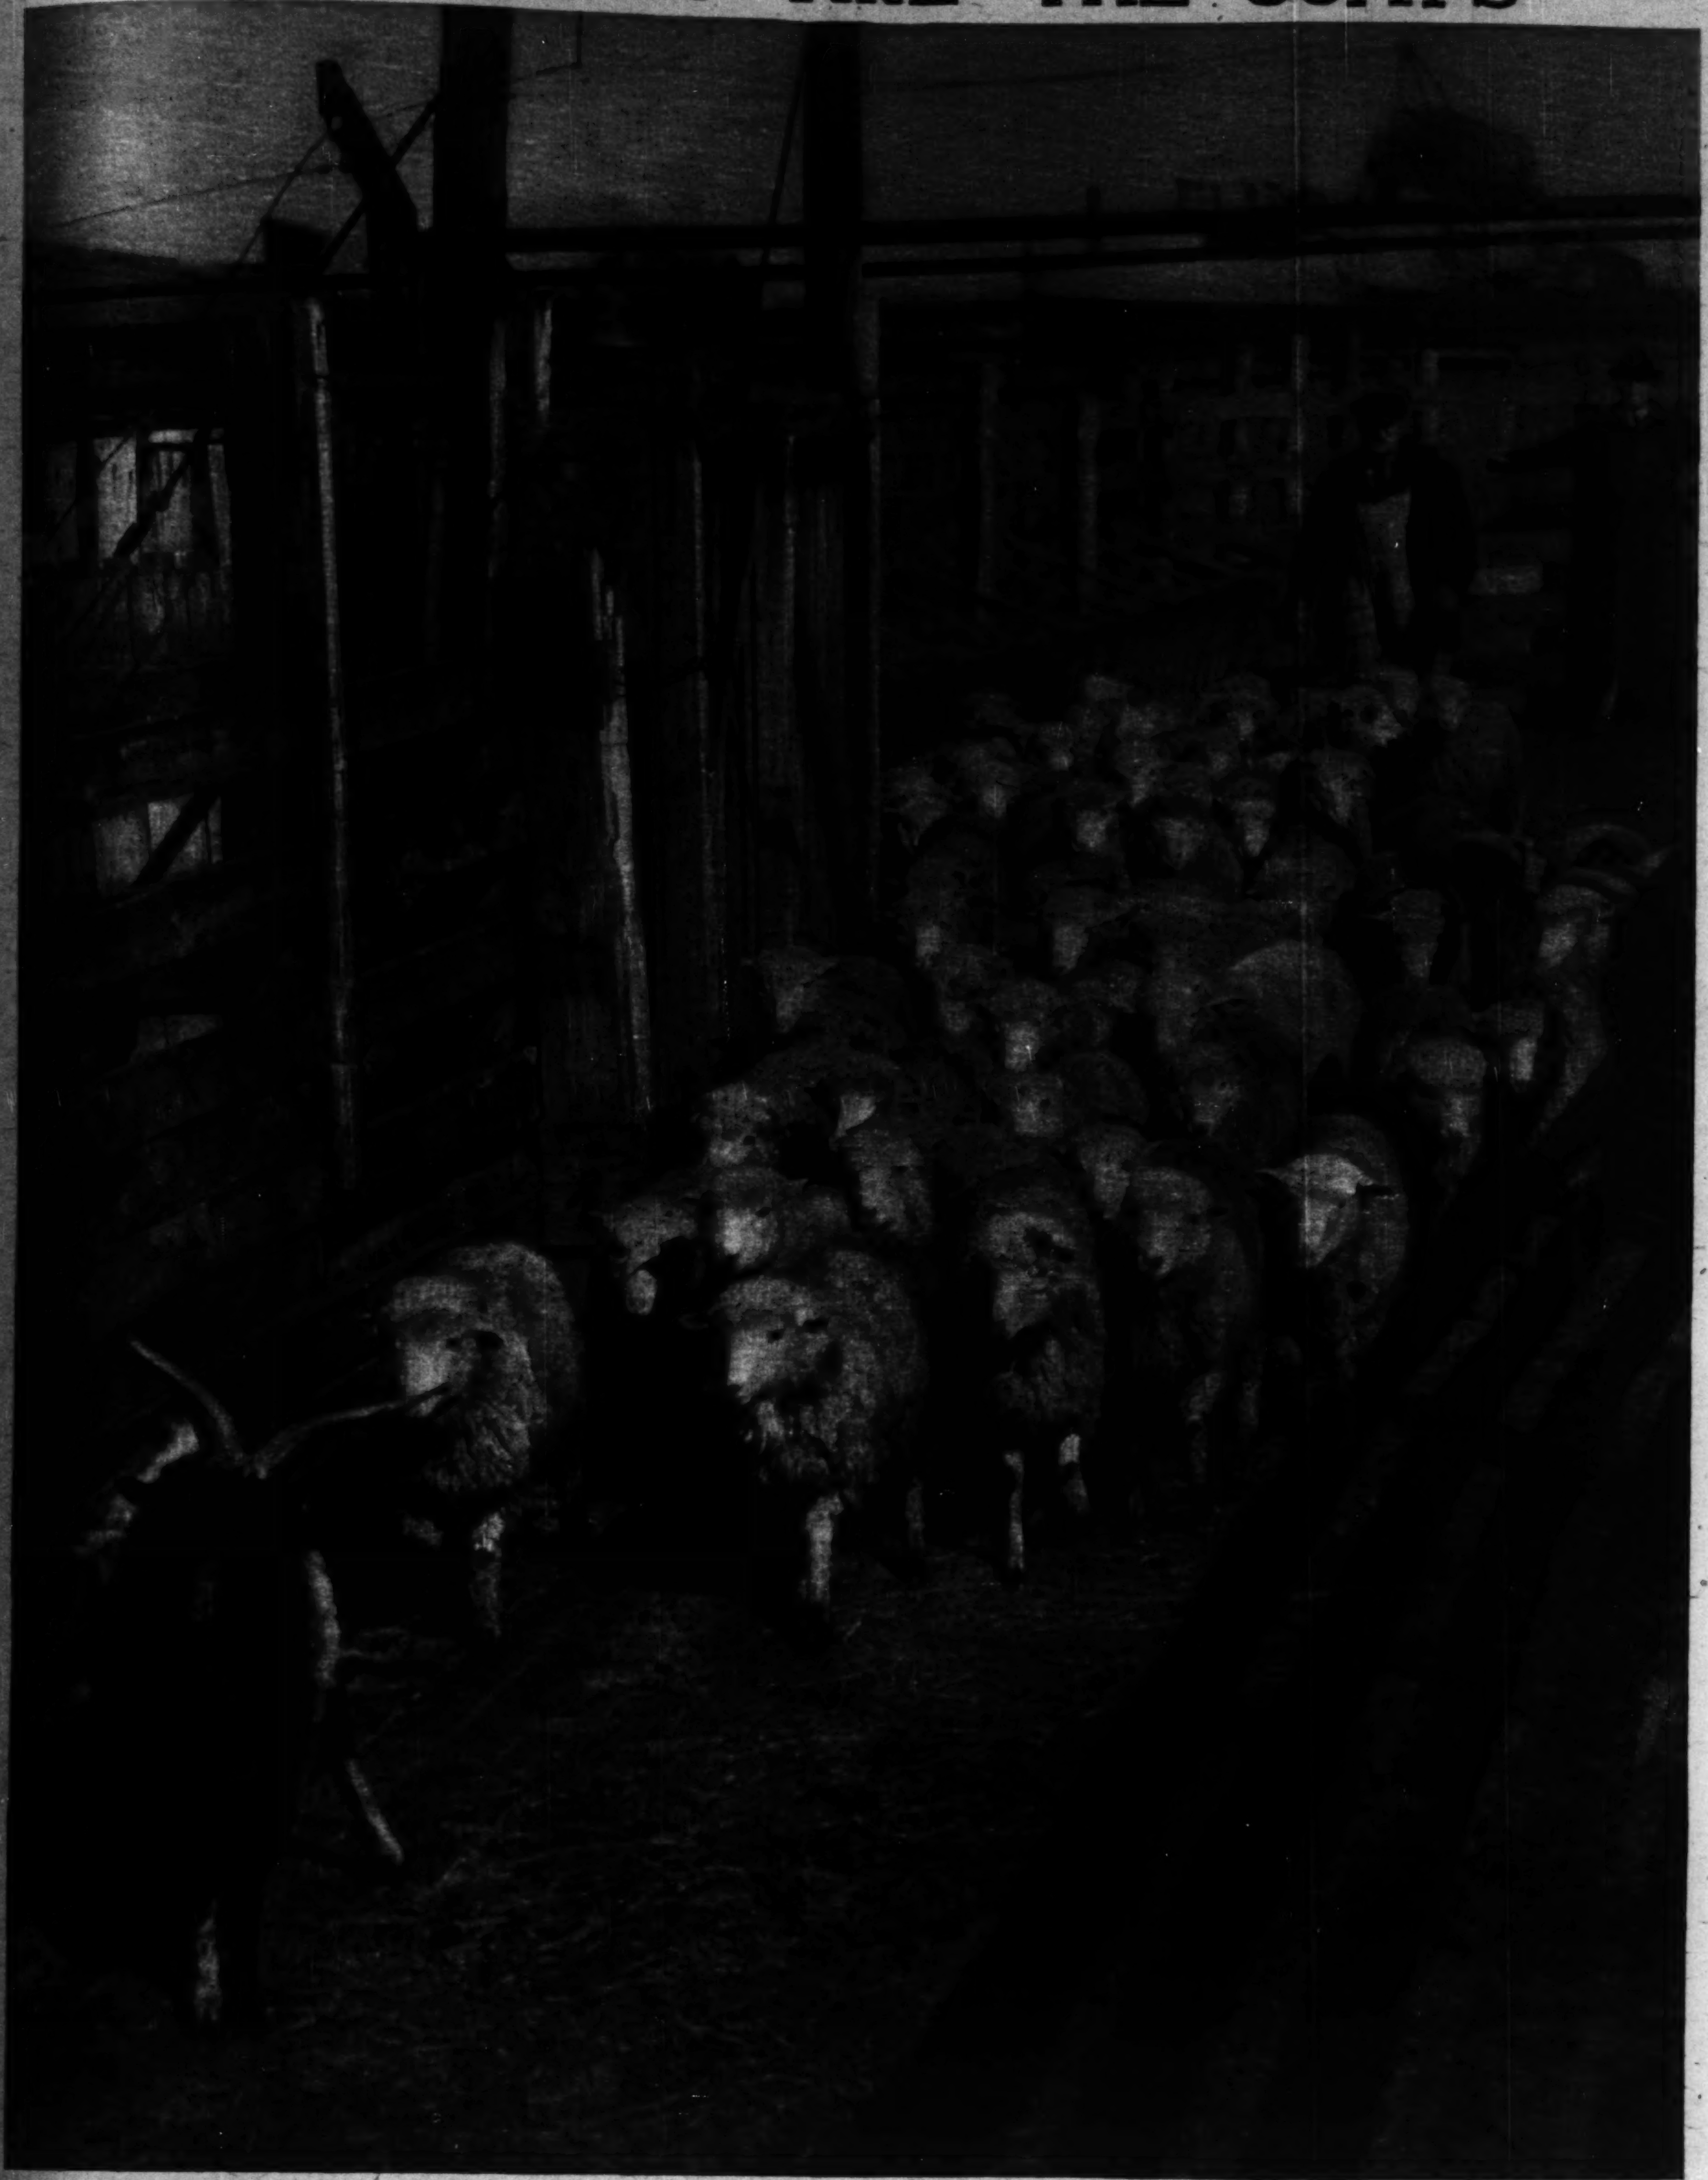
Hair Youth daily combats the hardened oil and dandruff which stifle the hair's growth. It stimulates and fertilizes the hair roots, from which come hair health and hair color.

Look at my luxuriant hair. Then use what I used to get it. Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth costs 50c and $1, with eye dropper.

Every store around you which sells toilet articles, supplies my preparations.

Edna Wallace Hopper, Business Address, Waukesha, Wis.

THE SHEEP ARE THE GOATS



OFTEN YOU HEAR THE EXPRESSION: "As a lamb to the slaughter." Did you ever see just how it originated? Here's a perfect illustration. At every slaugher house there is an old fellow, like the horned villain in our picture, whom the lambs follow without question. This chap works in a Milwaukee plant. He leads his followers to the butchering pen, and soon as they're cooped up he slips out to corral another bunch for the kill. Isn't he the horrid thing?

Super-Giant
Standard Shingle

The upper micrometer tells the story—an average of 185 points of thickness, for the Super-Giant as compared with only 125 as an average for the standard shingle below.

Exceptional durability in this shingle

50% thicker than standards

YEARS of added life for your roof—that's what 60 points more on the upper micrometer means. For they measure a weather armor 50% thicker than that of standard slate-surfaced shingles.

Incidentally, too, this greater thickness casts a deeper shadow line that gives life and interest to the roof.

But thickness is only one indication of the exceptional durability in this unique product—the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle. Just compare it further.

For example, because it is 37% larger than the ordinary shingle, fewer are needed to cover a given roofing area. Thus the cost of laying is 35% less.

Again, because it is 100% stiffer than the ordinary shingle, it remains rigid in the strongest wind, and makes the whole roof twice as firm.

Beauty hitherto unknown

ON this super-shingle exclusively is used a color in slate hitherto unknown—a rich weathered brown, found only in the Richardson quarries of Georgia.

It is as beautiful as the russet of November fields, and with use it mellows and deepens to a shade like the thatch of an English cottage. No stained wood shingles can rival this rare color. You can easily see why when you remember that nature has created it as she does her jewels—by pressing it for ages under mountains of earth and rock.

Weathered brown brings new beauty to the home, architects say, especially when blended with other Richardson shingles of jade green, tile red, or black pearl.

Its inner secrets

BUT, of course, the true measure of roofing service goes beyond the color or size of the shingle to the materials in it. As you know, slate-surfaced shingles are built on a base or core of felt impregnated with asphalt and surfaced under pressure with slate granules.

Exceptional quality in these three materials makes the Richardson Super-Giant the finest slate-surfaced shingle produced.

Take, for instance, the felt upon which depends the very life of your roof. Richardson felt, so architects or roofing dealers will tell you, has for fifty years been recognized and used as the best. The asphalt is refined exclusively by the Richardson process from the highest grade raw materials. And the flakes of slate surfacing, found only in the Richardson quarries, seal the shingle permanently against weather and fire hazards.

Prove the facts yourself

A SUPER-SHINGLE indeed, when you weigh its points one by one! First—unusual dimensions which give you added roofing protection at one-third less in cost of laying. Second—absolutely exclusive color effects. And finally—exceptionally high standards in its three materials; felt, asphalt, and slate surfacing.

Go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building material, or to your contractor, and ask to see the Richardson Super-Giant Shingle in weathered brown. Feel it, weigh it, measure it, note the rare color. Then compare it with ordinary shingles—the difference will convince you.

Meanwhile, send for our beautiful new color chart showing the exclusive color combinations of Richardson slate surfacing, and containing valuable facts on roofing. Perhaps, too, our booklet, "Roofing on the Farm," can help. Just use the coupon below.

For every roofing need, there is a Richardson product—from Lok-Top Asphalt Shingles, to Rubbertex Roll Roofing with Pyramid Kaps. Consult your dealer. If he cannot supply you, write us direct.

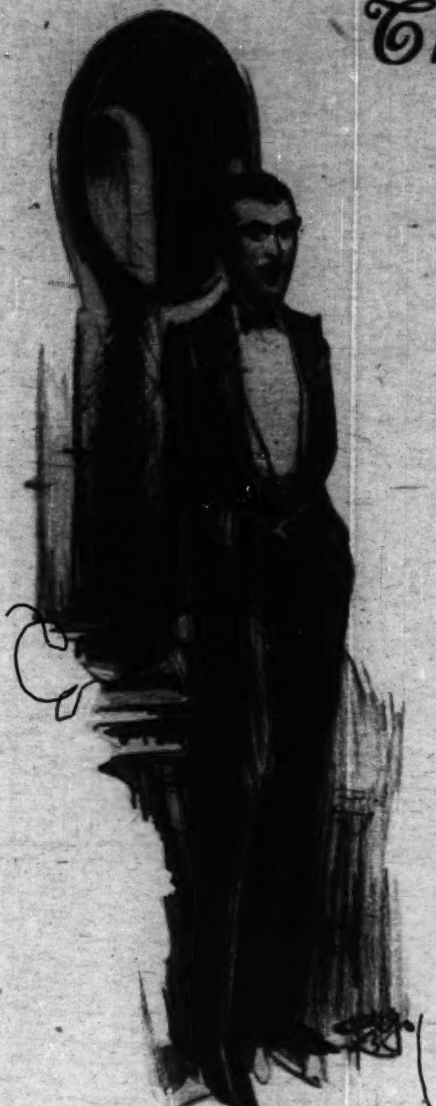
The WRONG MAN'S DAUGHTER

by Edgar Jepson

Blue Ribbon Fiction

Bellamy Neglected Susie to Expand His Emotional Nature in Other Women's Company. You'll Enjoy Reading How Susie's Papa Cured Him of His Failing.



And he had had a fond mother.

IT was no fault of mine that Susie married Bellamy Tong. I was away, doing business in the South Seas—pearls. I came back to find her desperately in love with him—and he with her, for that matter. Love is a ticklish thing; and it is best to leave it alone. It would have been quite different if Susie had been a robust young woman. I should have stepped in briskly. A heart break or two does not seem to do that type much harm. But she was not a robust young woman; she was delicate, almost fragile, and tender hearted and affectionate. A heart break might almost be the death of her. I thought it wiser to sit tight and do nothing and say nothing.

I did not like Bellamy, and I trusted him even less. He was altogether too beautiful to be true. Of course, I knew that a man who is really fond of his daughter is apt to be prejudiced against any one who wants to take her away from him. But Bellamy was most certainly not the type of man I should have chosen for a son-in-law. He was tall and slim and dark and pale, with large brown eyes and black hair, brushed straight back without a parting, and when he laughed he showed a row of long white teeth. And he had had a fond mother.

That was why he had not gone to a public school or to the war. He had spent the last three years of it in Ireland, the home of the safe.

And it was why he was always full of noble talk. It seemed to run out of him; and anything would turn on the tap. And when he talked he used to run his long white fingers through his hair, and his beautifully polished nails used to shine out against the black. He talked and talked and talked mush. But how should a girl know it was mush? Susie thought it the most beautiful talk in the world. I dare say, as talk goes, it was. She couldn't know that you can tell next to nothing about a man from what he says. It's what he does. As far as I could make out Bellamy did nothing except talk nobly.

I hate sentimentalists. At bottom they are generally as hard as nails. I had little doubt that the base of Bellamy Tong's beautiful nature was good hard diamond, for I noticed that if things didn't go exactly his way his eyes would go rather harder than the next man's.

But, as I say, I came back from the South Seas too late to do anything. Bellamy had been talking to Susie for six weeks, pushing his fingers through his hair and languishing at her with his large brown eyes. He could have talked the hind leg off a horse for a small bet, and he had talked the heart out of her. The harm was done.

So I let her marry him. But I gave him his warning. He came to me to ask my consent. He really seemed to like the job, and he did it in many of the noblest words I have ever heard. I did not hurry him. Why should I? I heard him out and gave my consent.

Then I said quite quietly: "From my point of view, you're in the world just to make Susie happy. If you don't, I'll give you hell."

He looked at me hard and with astonishment. He had lived too much in drawing rooms ever to get much straight talk in his young life; and I feared that he did not know it now he got it. Then he looked nobly hurt, and said that it was the one desire of his heart.

"That's all right," I said. "It's the right desire; keep on desiring it."

He said that he would, and he meant it, for at the time Susie's happiness and his own coincided. But, all the same, I had a feeling that he did not really understand me. My guess was that he was marrying the wrong man's daughter.

SUSIE came back from her honeymoon very fit, stronger than she had ever been, and as happy as the day is long—a bit too happy for my liking. It is dangerous to be too happy. You have to pay for it.

However, it seemed to be lasting quite well, so, two months later, I went off on a business jaunt to Mexico—gun running—with a fairly easy mind. I came back three months later, pleased with myself and with a great deal more money. When I set eyes on Susie my heart sank plumb and fetched up with a jolt. She was not happy any longer.

She was fragile again and pale and in poor spirits; and I did not like her eyes. They were large in her face, and frightened. I have seen something like that kind of fright in the eyes of a man devilishly hard hit and hearing the wings of Azrael coming up. Susie was hard hit. I was scared—absolutely scared.

I got busy and made inquiries. Of course, women were Bellamy Tong's weakness, or, rather, not his weakness—Bellamy was that—but his diversion. There were two of them in our own set, a rackety girl and a cultured woman—married and thirty, of course. Probably there were others. He hadn't been careless about his philanderings; he simply hadn't tried to hide them from Susie. Sometimes for a week at a time he would not come home till the small hours. He had told her that he was expanding his emotional nature. Susie, who was much too proud to let on that she minded it, had told my sister that was what he was doing.

I did not need telling that it was a perfectly infernal mess. It is always a risky business to interfere between husband and wife; and this particular husband made it harder. It was my guess that if I made it hot for him the young hound would take it out of Susie. I decided to say nothing. After all, action is my long suit.

But the matter was so important to me that I did not feel quite sure of myself, and I took advice—at least, I asked it. I went to my brother William, who is the parson of one of the most fashionable parishes in London and used to being consulted about just such things, and I went to my brother Tom, who for ten years had been colonel of a crack cavalry regiment and used to handling young men, and asked their advice. They were both of them frightfully sick about the business, for they were fond of Susie; but they were as hopeless as they were sick. Both of them said the same thing in different words—that when a man has once fallen out of love with a woman all the kindness in the world is no use and drastic methods no better.

"DRASTIC methods" gave it me. I had had something of the sort in my mind. In fact, I had been stopping myself from thinking that Susie would be much happier as a widow. It seemed to me that though the base of Bellamy's nature might be good hard diamond there must be softer layers between that and the top. Besides, if his emotional nature could be expanded one way it could be expanded another. Drastic it was!

For most men it is practically impossible to be drastic with other people. But naturally I have not knocked about the bad lands and the Seven Seas for all these years without making some useful acquaintances. Some of the toughest of them live east of Aldgate, and they will do quite uncommon things for surprisingly little money. I thought at once of Billy Pride. What that crinkled old crimp doesn't know about shanghaiing isn't worth knowing. I had him meet me at the Carter's Rest at Shadwell, told him what I wanted, and where to find Bellamy. He did not make any notes in a book. He just nodded. He arranged to hand Bellamy over to me at the corner of Chipperfield Common at 2:45 a. m. on the following Tuesday. I did not bother my head about what measures he would take. But I was pretty sure that from the time Bellamy left home next morning till 2:45 a. m. on Tuesday morning he would not walk twenty yards without Billy's hearing all about it.

For the next few nights I took Susie out to dinner and the theater and on to sup and dance at the Midnight Follies. She did not want to go; she wanted to mope at home. But I put it that I had been having a hard time on the Mexican border and needed refreshment. So she came, and Geoffrey Franks came with us. I thought that he was good for her. He had been in love with her for a donkey's years, and he was still in love with her and showed it. I could have done with him as a son-in-law very well. He is a first class soldier and a great deal more than a soldier. There's a lot of wounded vanity to these broken hearts; and I was sure Susie would find it soothing to have it dinned into her that she was still uncommonly attractive. Geoffrey would din it in all right. He did do her good—a little.

I was shaving on the Monday morning when she came round to the house and burst into my room in a devil of a state. Bellamy had not come home the night before.

That was just like Billy. You could always rely on him to be on time.

"Well, what about it?" I said. "He's probably got caught in a poker or Chemmy game and at it still."

She wouldn't hear of it—Bellamy was not like that.

"Well, do you know how much money he had on him?" I said, seeming to consider.

"Money?" said Susie. "About three pounds. He asked me for some; and he made rather a fuss because it was all I had."

He would.

"Then there's nothing in the world to bother about," I said, with absolute certainty. "He's bound to turn up in the course of the day. A man can't stray any distance on three pounds—not a man like Bellamy."

She said, in a rather heated way, that Bellamy wouldn't want to stray. So I agreed with her; and she said I never had appreciated Bellamy. I agreed with her again, and said that those noble natures always were above me—I was used to coarser types. She looked at me suspiciously. I stood it all right. I was in a good temper. Things were moving.

She stayed to breakfast—for comfort. She always felt better when I was about. She talked all the time about what could have happened to Bellamy. I kept telling her that nothing could have happened to Bellamy. Then I fairly dragged her off for a motor drive in the country, and we lunched at Canterbury. Coming back, we ran out of petrol in an out of the way country lane. I was trying a short cut; and I knew I was short, too, of petrol. It was 8 o'clock when we reached their flat.

SHE fairly dashed into it, asking for Bellamy. He had not come home. She was in a terrible state.

I helped her. I said: "I expect that the silly young ass has been dipping into the underworld—it's the fashionable thing to do, you know—with only three pounds in his pocket and is in pawn somewhere."

She was furious, like a furious sucking dove, and gave me a fine dressing down. That was what I wanted—anger could not do her any harm. I said I would go and find him at once. I went. I drove to my club, rang up Mrs. Clavering-Clayton, the cultured one, and asked whether Bellamy was there. She was rather tart with me, and said he wasn't there and hadn't been. He had been coming to dinner the night before and never turned up. She rang off. I wondered how Billy's friends had culled Bellamy so early in the evening. I rang up Enid Cooper-Calhoun, the rackety one. Mrs. Cooper-Calhoun came to the telephone, and she also seemed peeved by my inquiry. She said that she didn't know where Mr. Tong was in such a tone that I gathered that she didn't care.

"I understood that he was having tea with Miss Cooper-Calhoun," I said at a venture.

"He never came!" she snapped, and rang off.

Another poor parent who had bitten off more daughter than she could chew!

I rang up Susie and told her that Bellamy was not at the Claytons or the Calhouns and had not been there. That, of course, was what she really wanted to know. It did not sound like it, though, for she asked me quite fiercely why I had gone to those horrible women.

"Horrible?" I said. "I thought they were cultured and he saw a great deal of them."

"Cultured!" she said, and rang off.

That was all right. Anger was much better for her than sorrow. Besides, such a blundering effort would get her still further away from suspecting that I had a hand in Bellamy's vanishing. I dined at the club and made an excellent dinner. If I hadn't yet earned it, I was going to—between then and breakfast. After dinner I went up to the cardroom and played poker. The others were rather shirty because I went away as early as half-past 1 with quite a little lump of their money. But I had made up my mind to give myself plenty of time to get to Chipperfield Common. It would never do for Billy Pride to be on time with the goods and me not there to receive them.

It was easy driving. The streets were clear; the road was clearer; and no haze dimmed the November moon. I was at the corner of the Common at 2:35. At once I heard faintly in the stillness the slow beat of hoofs and the creaking of a cart on the Sarratt road. At 2:44 there came round the corner a gypsy van drawn by a fat horse, and driven by a lady. A shawl hid quite as much of her face as my muffler and goggles hid of mine.

She pulled up the horse and said: "Is it Mr. Brown of Islington?"

"Yes," said I.

"I've brought the pritty gentleman," she said, and got down.

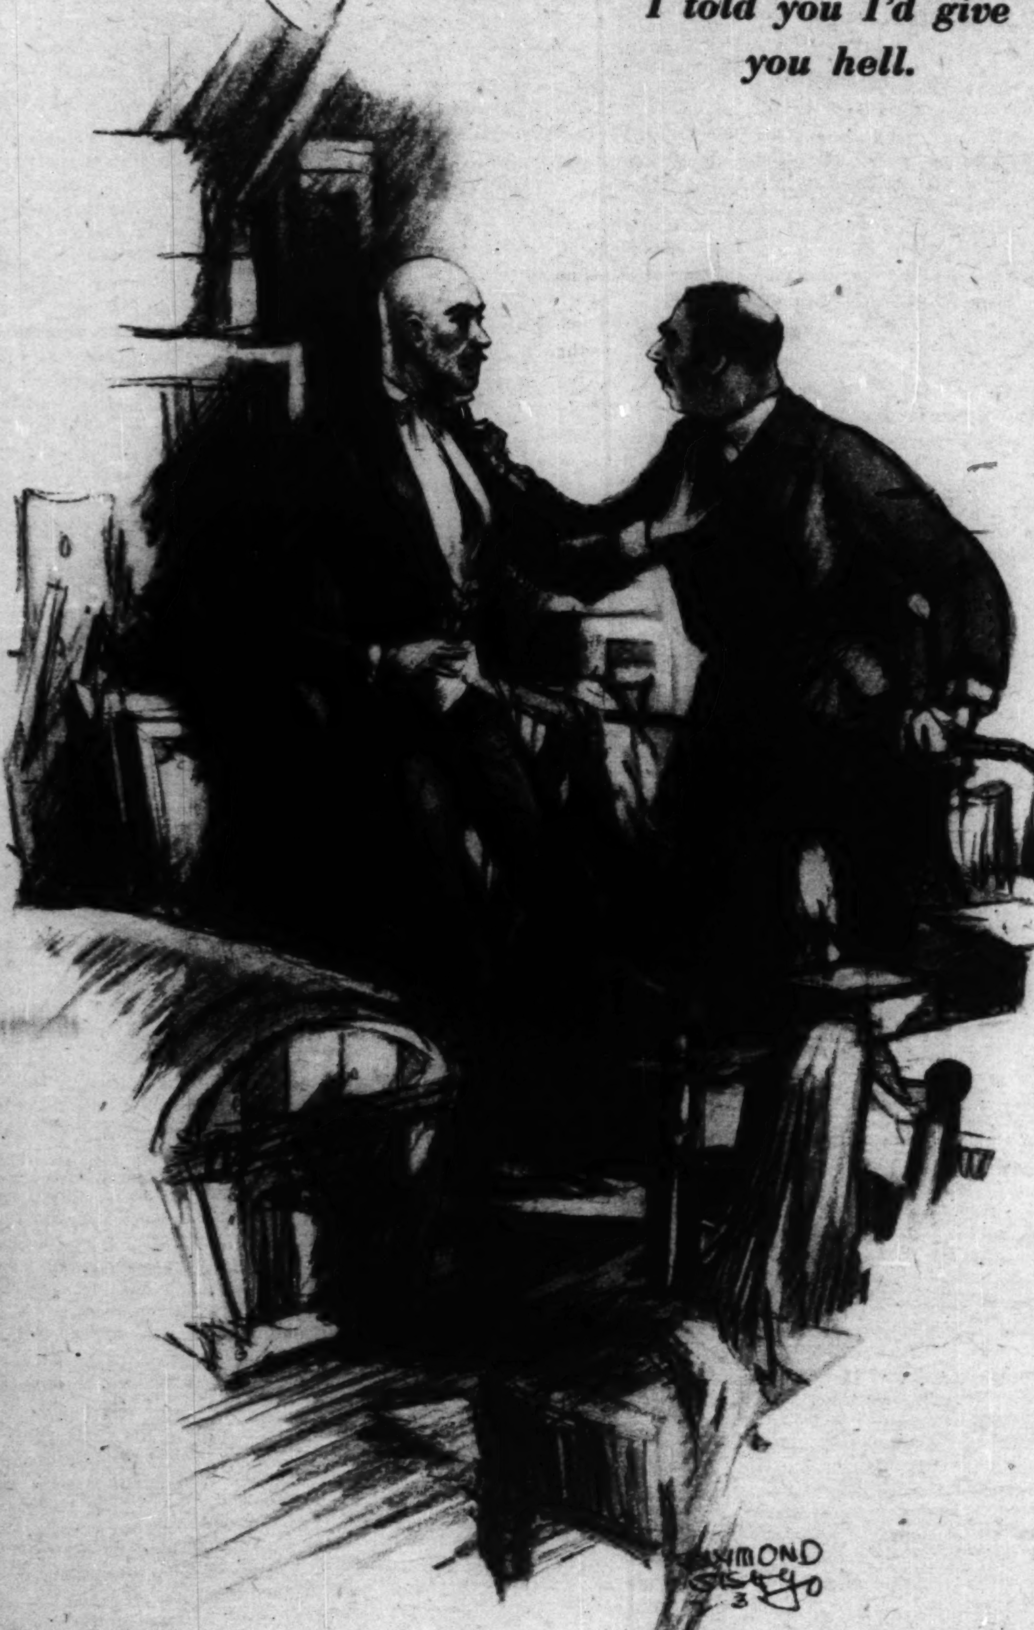
I got out of the car to help her. She needed no help. She opened the door of the caravan, took the "pritty" gentleman by the ankles, lugged him out, snoring, hoisted him on to her shoulder, stepped across to the car, and tumbled him into the tonneau, for all the world as if he had been a sack of potatoes.

"Thank you, my dear. Here's something for your trouble," I said, and gave her a tenner.

She looked at it by the light of my lamps, squeaked, and blessed me.

I said good night and drove off. I had a long run across country before me. I have a country house, Bostocks, on a hill near Pulborough. Sometimes I have a cramped feeling in London; a couple of days under a high sky, with a twenty mile stretch of country to look over, clears it up. When I reached Bostocks I found Mrs. Whitcomb and her son, Harry, who run the house and garden for me, asleep in the kitchen, waiting up for me. They are trustworthy people. Once on a time I had pulled Harry out of a devil of a mess. If he showed his face in the West Riding the police would have him in twenty-four hours. He only shows his face, and that not too freely, on that hill near Pulborough. They did not show any surprise at Bellamy's sleepy condition. He was still snoring, doped with some effective drug I did not recognize, though he smelt of it. Mrs. Whitcomb got to work, making coffee and frying bacon and eggs, while Harry helped me with Bellamy.

Bostocks has a big, high roof. Under it is an attic, the length and width of the house, with sloping walls, lighted by one small dormer window. We carried Bellamy upstairs, hauled him up the ladder, through the trapdoor, into the attic, took off his overcoat, and laid him on a small mattress on the floor in a corner. Then I handcuffed him, and with a safety razor shaved all that fine black hair off his head. Even by the poor light of the candle he did look an extraordinary person. It seemed a pity that he should lose such an amusing sight; and I sent Harry down for a mirror. He hung it on a nail by the window. Then I covered the snoring Bellamy with a blanket and his overcoat and went down to coffee and eggs and bacon. I enjoyed them very much.



I told you I'd give you hell.

I TOLD the Whitcombs not to go near Bellamy unless he shouted so loudly that it seemed likely to attract some one's attention. In that case Harry might go up and gag him. Then I drove home. It was nearly 6 when I arrived, and I had not been in the house five minutes when the telephone bell rang. It was my guess that it had rung often during the night.

Of course it was Susie. I did not wait for her to get in a question. I said in a bitter voice: "I've been up all night looking into the matter of that silly young ass of yours."

She accepted the description and said, meekly, but eagerly: "Have you found him?"

"I've found him," I said. "He has got himself into a devil of a mess, and you won't see him for at least a fortnight. I'm not going to tell you what the mess is, or where he is. But he's quite safe; and not a woman in the world can get at him. Don't come round. You won't see me. I'm going to bed, and I'm not going to be disturbed till 2 o'clock."

With that I put the receiver back. Relieved of anxiety, she should sleep herself till 2 o'clock. At a quarter past 2 she found me at breakfast. I told her that the less she said about the silly young ass' scrape the better. She was not pressing. I think that she had tumbled to it that the one place in the world in which a woman can't get at a man is prison. Shocking, of course; but it couldn't be a serious offense if he would be out in a fortnight, and, after all, no woman could get at him, and that was what she really wanted.

"It's really only a fortnight?" she said.

"Thirteen days now," I said.

"It's terrible," she said. But she did not say it as if she meant it much. I fancied that that complete absence of women had sunk in.

"Not a bit of it. It will do the silly young ass good," I said.

She did not say that it would not. I told her I would call for her at half-past 7 to take her out for the evening and on to the Midnight Follies and she was to ring up Geoffrey Franks to come along with us to dance with her.

She began: "O, I couldn't! With poor Bellamy in——"

"Stop! You don't know where Bellamy is!" I said, sharply. "Bellamy has gone into the country for a fortnight. That's what you'll tell everybody. And you'll go about as if that was all that he had done. If you don't people will guess that something more serious has happened. Besides, he'll be sleeping like a top by 10 o'clock tonight."

She saw at once that I was right and went away fairly cheerful. I was pleased not to have deceived her at all. What Bellamy was exactly getting was fourteen days, without the option of a fine.

I finished my breakfast and drove down to Bostocks. Mrs. Whitcomb told me that the gentleman had made a great fuss for an hour or so that morning, but was quite quiet now. I took a jug of water, a slice of bread, and a cane I had brought with me up to the attic. When I came up through the trapdoor I found Bellamy standing over it, waiting for me.

When he saw who it was he said, huskily: "You? You've found me, thank God!"

"Found you? I put you here," I said.

He stepped back sharply. Then he saw the jug of water; howled, "Water!" and came for it. I took off his handcuffs and gave it him. It was a quart jug, and full; but he drained it. I did not wonder. After that dope he must have had a raging thirst on him ever since he came to himself. He looked sufficiently shaky, an astonishing object in crumpled evening dress with a shaved head.

THE jug of water bucked him up a bit, for he looked feeble murder at me, got into something of an attitude, and croaked: "What does this mean?"

"Well, if you ask me, I should say it meant that you'd married the wrong man's daughter. But I gave you your warning," I said, quietly.

"Warning?" he said.

He had actually forgotten it.

"I told you if you didn't make Susie happy I'd give you hell," I said.

"O—that," he said.

"Just that," said I.

"But it's all nonsense," he croaked, indignantly. "Why can't she be happy? It's these middle class prejudices that rob life of its beauty."

"They've certainly robbed you of some of yours," I said, and laughed.

He was the funniest looking object.

At once he went, croaking, up into the air. He was going to do lots of unpleasant things to me—with the help of the law. I laughed again and took him by the arm. He is taller than I am, but not half as thick. He put up no kind of a fight. I did not mind; I was not there for sport, but to give him the hell I had promised him and expand his emotional nature my way. Then I caned him just as I used to be caned at school. I gave him rather more than the average caning because he was older. I was not afraid of his showing the bruises to any one, not even to the Law. They were not romantically placed enough for a romantic young man to summon me for assault. When I had finished he was blubbering with pain and fury—chiefly with fury—just like a schoolboy new to school and the ways of his young companions. He had never had any chance of developing properly.

He looked perfectly awful with his shiny white skull and dirty, tear streaked face. Unthinkingly, he sat down square on the mattress. At once he shifted smartly on to his side, pulled himself together, and stopped blubbering. But, my word, he did glower! I told him a dozen things about himself he had never before realized. Then I handcuffed him and apologized for leaving him so soon.

"But I'm taking Susie and Geoffrey Franks out to dinner and the theater and the Midnight Follies," I said. "But you can rely on me to come down and cane you tomorrow."

With that I left him glowering. I think if he had had a knife he would have tried to stick it into my back. He did not know any better.

Susie and Geoffrey and I had a pleasant time. I fancied that she felt that she was getting a holiday. She had nothing to be really anxious about—no rackety Enid, no highbrow man snatcher.

The next day I went down to Bostocks and had another painful interview with Bellamy. It began with rather more of a fight. When the more painful part of it was over I repeated a good deal of what I had told him about himself the day before. I wanted to get it into his head.

Then I said: "We had a ripping time last night. I don't think I ever ate better caviare—the small grained kind, you know."

He gave me a murderous look; and I went on: "I didn't bring you down here entirely for the good of your soul. I also wanted you out of the way. I want Susie to see a lot of Geoffrey Franks. He's very much in love with her, you know; and she was very fond of him till you came along. Absence makes the heart grow stronger, and I'm hoping that hers will grow strong enough to appreciate him again. He'll run away with her like a shot—any man in his senses would—if she'll let him. There'd be a devil of a scandal, of course; but it would be worth it to get rid of you. You're pretty well off your pedestal, you know. I've seen to that."

"You blasted fiend!" he said, quite fiercely.

I laughed and said: "I'm taking them round the town again tonight."

With that I left him. I had given him something to think about, and I wanted him to start to think. My guess was that he could be as jealous as the next man. It would be an occupation.

I left him a jug of water and about twelve ounces of dry bread. I was not pampering him; but I did not want him to get too much run down. That attic was devilishly cold. Susie and Geoffrey and I kept holiday again that night. She was looking better and eating more; her eyes had lost that look of fright; and she was not so pale. It is wonderful what a complete change and freedom from anxiety will do. Of course, she must be sorrowing over Bellamy in his cell; but the cell was woman-proof.

NEXT day, after the usual little fight and bamboo formula and telling Bellamy some more things about himself I had thought of, I chatted to him about some chicken Maryland I had eaten the night before and how much better and happier Susie was looking and of my hopes of her and Franks. I said that I thought that in a day or two she would be ready enough to go about with him alone, for all these late hours were not particularly good for me. He took no part in the chat. He was looking most morose.

I kept up that treatment for three more days. It seemed to be having a fairly satisfactory effect on him. He was thinner, naturally, and his face looked to be chiefly eyes, and it was paler and very lachrymose-looking. He looked nothing like so much pleased with himself nor so proud-spirited as he had looked. It was my guess that he had a more accurate idea of his real place in the world. On the fourth day I dropped the caning. But I took the cane up with me and a couple of thick beef sandwiches. After he had eaten them—and he did enjoy them—I set him to run round and round the room. I wanted to return him to Susie in good condition. When he flagged I encouraged him with the cane. After his exercise I chatted with him about an entrecôte of almost prewar excellence I had found at the Café Royal and of Geoffrey's progress with Susie.

I had learned at school that sorrow's crown of sorrow was remembering happier things, and I did not think that it would take any of the crown off his sorrows to know that somebody else was enjoying them. It did not seem to. Also I took it that, when he did come out, he would want, more than anything in the world, to be cossetted—for about six months and hard—and Susie could cosset. I was pretty sure that he was thinking a lot about her—wanting her. I handcuffed him again before I went.

I kept up that treatment — beef sandwiches and exercise—for five days. I had no need to use the cane after the first two days of it; he was becoming quite a sprinter. Also his face was no longer all eyes, but what eyes there were in it were very much clearer and brighter than I had ever seen them, and his lips were thinner and redder and more set. Also I had no longer any need to tell him those things about himself. I had got them into his head. He admitted as much. He did not seem to bear me any more malice than one would expect. But then, I had made a point of always letting him put up a bit of a fight before caning him, so that it was always force majeure and saved his face a good deal. Also I had made a point of feeding him myself. A dog is about as sentimental a creature as there is in the world, and it likes to lick the hand that beats and feeds it. Also I fancied he was far too busy hating Geoffrey Franks to have the time to hate me properly.

On the eleventh day, after he had put in his exercise, I gave him a cup of tea, strong and with plenty of sugar in it. It was almost touching to see him drink it. He made nearly as much noise over it as one of the lower classes.

After he had drunk it I began to talk hopefully about Susie and Geoffrey Franks.

Suddenly his nostrils twitched queerly and he said: "Stop it! Stop it, or I shall try to strangle you!"

"I'm surprised at you," I said in a grieved voice. "You know you couldn't."

"I know I couldn't! But I shall try!" he said, still twitching.

"It's these middle class prejudices that rob life of its beauty," I said. "And I can't, for the life of me, see what is troubling you. You'll be able to spend all your time with Enid Cooper-Calhoun and Mrs. Clavering Clayton now."

"Damn Enid Cooper-Calhoun! Blast Mrs. Clavering-Clayton!" he said.

It sounded harsh, but it was certainly fervent.

"And that's a man's love," I said in a grieved voice.

I left him feeling rather pleased with myself. Evidently his emotional nature was filling out. Also I was pleased about Susie. She was looking another creature. Her holiday had done her a world of good.

ON the morning of the fourteenth day she came round to see me in a state of immense excitement. Her spirits were rather dashed when I told her that Bellamy would not be back till tea time. It would take some time to make him presentable. He was not the extraordinary looking creature he had been; but he still looked odd. The hair on his head was not more than a sixteenth of an inch longer than the hair on his chin; and that was not any length to speak of. She went away to shop to keep herself quiet. I drove round to their flat and got a suit of his clothes and underlinen and his motor coat. Then I chose a black wig at Clarkson's and ordered it to be sent round to his flat.

I got to Bostocks fairly early. Bellamy had no notion that his sentence expired that day. He had the idea that it ran for another three months. I set Mrs. Whitcomb to make coffee and fry eggs and bacon. Then I went up to Bellamy. I was in great spirits. I told him that I was practically sure that Susie had fixed it up with Franks and, of course, there was no need to keep him at Bostocks any longer. He did not seem particularly pleased to be getting his freedom; and his nostrils twitched a bit. But, after a preliminary wash, he did enjoy his eggs and bacon and coffee and a Corona Corona. We started for home.

It was a November day, and a bad one. But he seemed pleased enough to be out in it, though silent—nothing about the scenery. He looked as he had never looked in his life—as hard as nails. Sleeping cold and sprinting hard had hardened him.

As we came near London he grew fidgety. But when I suggested a shave and a Turkish bath he agreed, saying, rather drearily, that, after all, he didn't suppose there was any hurry. He had them; and I drove him home.

Just as we came near the house I said: "Now, don't go and make a silly fuss if Franks is there."

He looked at me and shivered, and his lips and nostrils twitched. "I'll try not to," he said, as if he wasn't sure that he would succeed.

I was quite sure that Franks would not be there.

"And if, by any chance, you and Susie do make it up, don't tell her about Bostocks. If you do she'll never speak to me again, and I shall have nothing to live for but vengeance," I said.

"I shan't," he growled.

Of course, he was loathing me. But I think he realized that I had merely been doing my best for Susie. He had really developed more than a bit.

He had his key; and when we came to the door of his flat I said: "Let's go in quietly. They're probably having tea together."

He seemed to swallow something—quite a lot, in fact—and we went in quietly. There was a smell of muffins on the air. He opened the drawing room door. Susie was sitting in front of the fire, looking at it. She was wearing the prettiest frock I ever saw her in. She looked around, screamed, jumped up, and howled: "Whatever have they done to your poor hair?"

Then she rushed at him; and he made one jump for her.

I went out and shut the door.

I shall keep out of Bellamy's way a great deal for a year or two—as long as he runs straight; and I'm pretty sure he will. He can't like to see me. Susie and I have never spoken of his unfortunate scrape till the other day. His hair explained everything so clearly. And, after all, it is not of any real importance to a really nice woman that her husband has done a paltry fourteen days without the option.

But the other day she said to me: "I really think that—that—little episode has improved Bellamy."

Why not? He eats out of her hand; he talks less; and the fact that she has the most jealous husband in London does not seem to cause her any dissatisfaction. Perhaps, after all, he did not marry the wrong man's daughter.

INDIAN BLOOD?

BY Robert E. Pinkerton

TWELFTH INSTALLMENT.

Nee-tah-wee-gan's Story.

ONCE outside the kitchen door he went to the old cabin, down past the warehouses, in which she lived. He found her squatting on the floor beside her little stove.

"We were both fools," he began. "We may as well leave. We can never win now."

"Why?" she demanded in quick alarm.

"You have always wanted to see Norton driven out of the service, crushed by his own father."

"Yes! Yes! And when that time comes——"

"It will never come," he interrupted harshly. "They are holding a love feast over in the dwelling house now. The 'big trader' said he is not Norton's father and Norton believed him."

"It's a lie!" Nee-tah-wee-gan shrieked. "He is Wen-dah-ban's father! I have the proof."

"You couldn't prove anything to them now. And Corrigal has asked Norton to come back to the Hudson's Bay and Norton will do it. He is stronger now than ever before, and he and his father are good friends."

The effect of his statement was exactly as he had expected. Nee-tah-wee-gan was stunned. All the life seemed to have gone out of her. The eyes that had always blazed were dull. Her thin, bent body appeared to wither and sink into a ridiculously small heap on the floor.

"Your thirty years of hate have all gone for nothing," he taunted.

Instantly she was aroused to such fury as Millington never had seen before. He shrank before its white hot malignancy as if she were some terrible monster. He even forgot why he had come, what he had wished to learn.

"Fool!" she cried. "Do you think I have not saved the best? Do you think I cannot still win, that I cannot make them both suffer until they die?"

"You can't," he declared. "They're friends now, the best of friends, and in a few years Norton himself will be the 'big trader.'"

"Yes, but Wen-dah-ban will always think he is an Indian, and every one else will always think so. He can never marry the white girl at Fort Bruce. People will always point their fingers at him when he turns his back and say, 'He is an Indian.'"

"Don't deceive yourself. Norton may as well be white now for all you can do to him. Corrigal is his friend, and Corrigal is the 'big chief.' No, you are beaten, Nee-tah-wee-gan."

The old woman did not speak for a moment, and then she looked up cunningly.

THE STORY SO FAR:

FOR thirteen years Wen-dah-ban is kept hidden in the forests by Nee-tah-wee-gan. She tells him he is the son of a white man, but will not name his father. Merton Layard takes him into his home, and Mrs. Layard names him Donald Norton after her father. After years Donald wins command of the Hudson's Bay's largest post, Fort James. Donald falls in love with Janet. Dale Millington, a young English post chief, influences Mrs. Layard to let Donald understand he cannot hope to win Janet. Millington raids Donald's district. John Corrigal, the new Hudson's Bay general manager, takes Donald's post from him. Donald accuses Corrigal of being his father.

Donald becomes manager for the Keewatin company and makes great inroads into the Hudson's business. Janet tells him she loves him. He tells her he can never marry her, never have children to bear the burden of the half-breed.

Millington has Nee-tah-wee-gan circulate the story that Donald is a "windigo," a cannibal, and that he will eat them. Terrified, every last Indian takes his furs to the Hudson's Bay office. Millington tries to buy the furs for far less than their worth. When they object, he disappears. From outside come weird sounds, "windigo" sounds, the Indians think. But Donald stalks into the room, sits in the firelight and laughs at them. Dashing out, they find a box with holes for lights, and a horn—the "windigo's" makeup. All go back to Donald's quarters with their furs. Later they start out to burn down the Hudson's Bay buildings. Donald quiets them. Corrigal tells Donald he is not his father, but wishes that he were. Millington, eavesdropping, hears this, and he goes to question the Indian woman.

"And you say Wen-dah-ban will marry the white girl at Fort Bruce?"

Millington was silent, and Nee-tah-wee-gan continued:

"You think I am an old woman, but I see many things. As the traders wish to know the hearts of the hunters, so the Indians know the desires of the white people, and there was not an Indian at Fort Bruce but knew you wished the white girl for your woman, the girl who looked only at Wen-dah-ban."

Millington saw she was trying to taunt him.

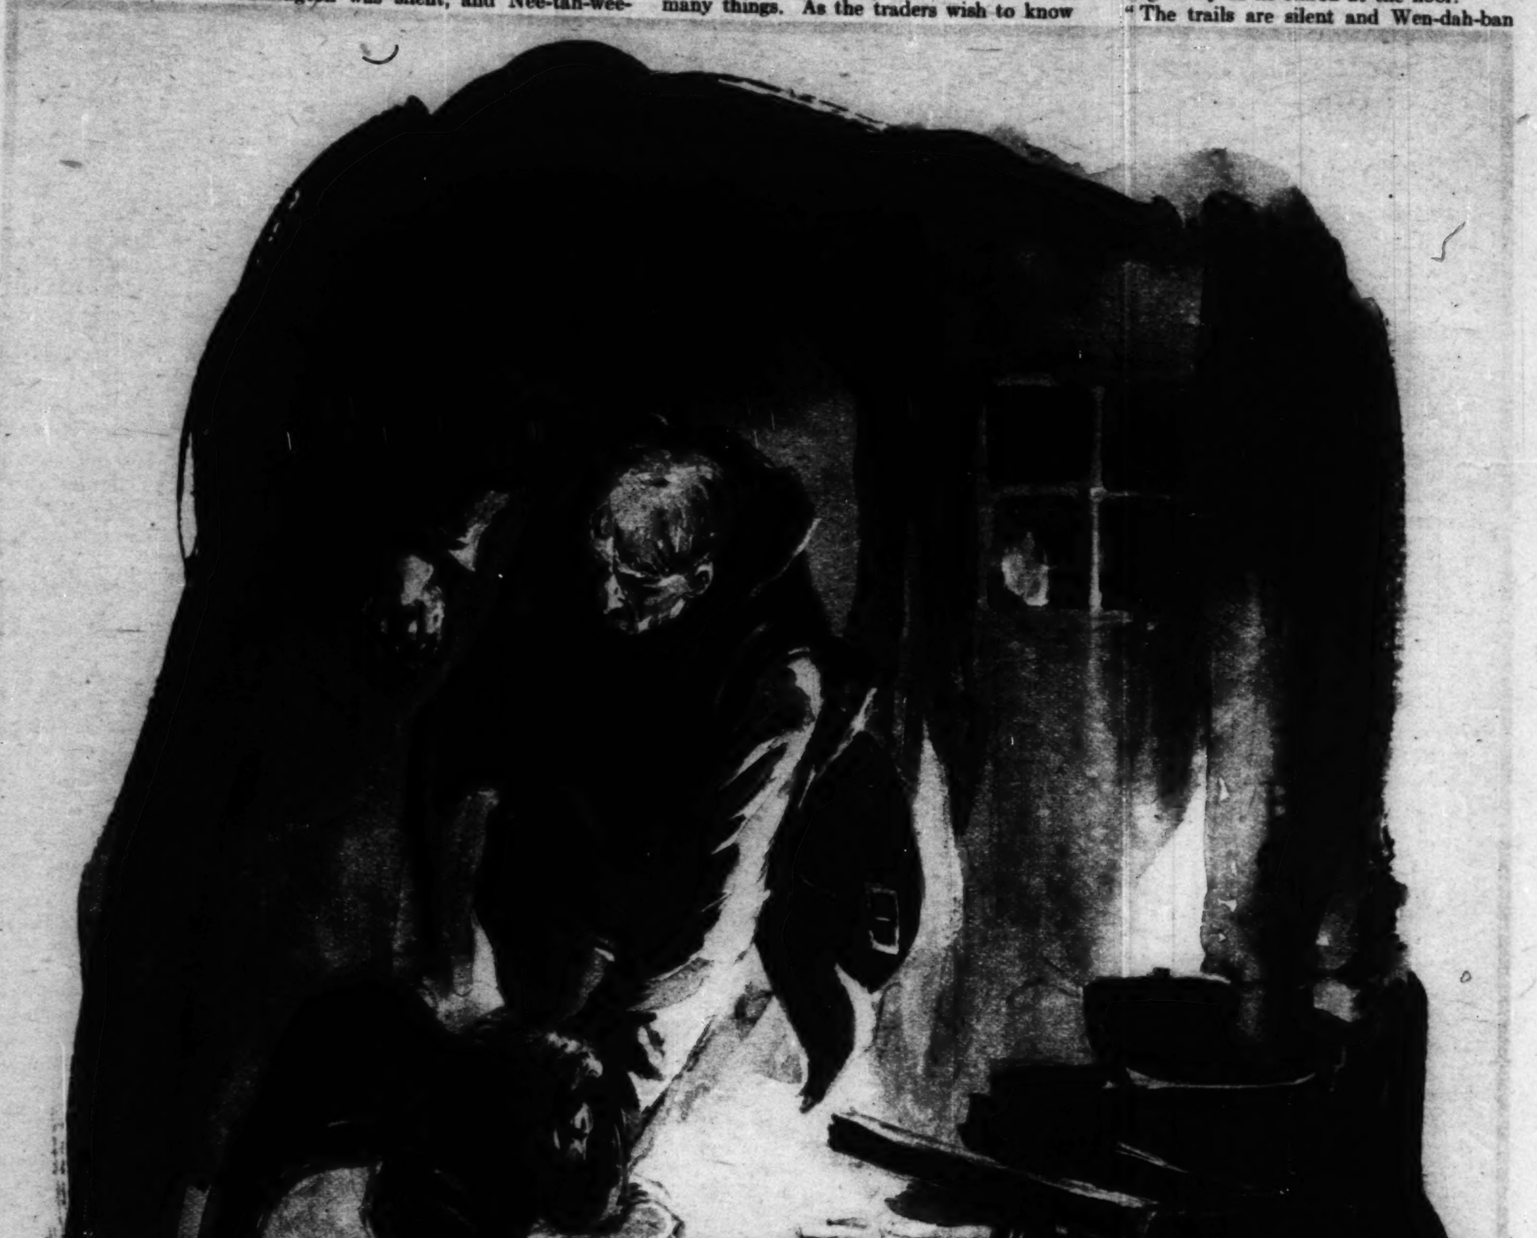
"What do you mean?" he asked.

"That is not the way of a brave man. You say Wen-dah-ban cannot be driven back to a wigwam. Are you going to let him live to win the white girl and become the 'big trader'?"

MILLINGTON knew her suggestion was pure folly. Even if he had the courage, he saw that he could never accomplish it and escape. The whole north would be at his heels in an instant. But he sensed something back of her words, perhaps the very thing he had tried to taunt her into disclosing, the thing he must have.

"Perhaps it could be done," he said thoughtfully as he stared at the floor.

"The trails are silent and Wen-dah-ban



He struggled, but her strength was amazing.

walks alone. I am a poor old woman, weak from many years, but you are young and strong and hate Wen-dah-ban as I hate him."

"Why do you want him killed?" Millington demanded.

"To want is one thing, to do is another," she parried. "Will you, or is it that you are afraid?"

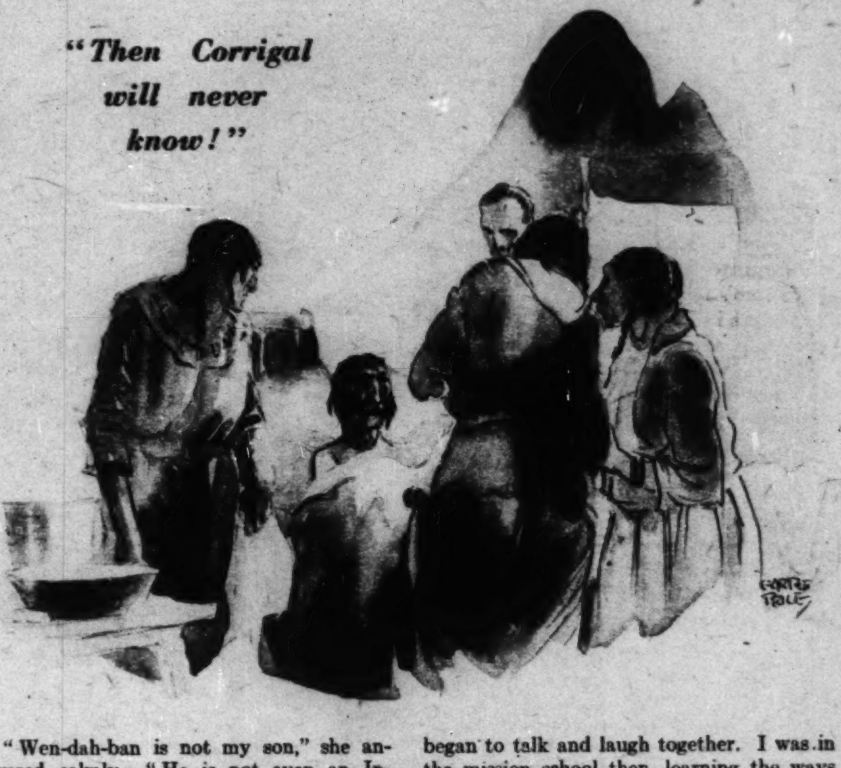
Millington looked down into her evil old eyes. He knew that back of her strange desire for the death of Donald lay the secret of her plan of vengeance.

"I am not afraid," he declared suddenly. "Not if it wins for me what I am seeking. You think I desire to see Wen-dah-ban ruined that I may have the girl. I would not take that which a half breed might have had. Now I only want to ruin Wen-dah-ban and make the 'big trader' suffer."

"You hate John Corrigal!" and there was savage exultation in her voice. "You wish to make him suffer? Then do what I am asking."

"But tell me how it will hurt him. How do I know you speak the truth? You say Corrigal is his father, but Corrigal says he is not, and Wen-dah-ban believes him. How do I know it will hurt him if I kill your son?"

"Then Corrigal will never know!"



"Wen-dah-ban is not my son," she answered calmly. "He is not even an Indian."

Millington, too astounded to speak, stared at her. Of all the facts he had hoped to uncover this was the least expected. Nee-tah-wee-gan, well aware of the dramatic effect she had produced, watched him closely for a moment and then burst into savage laughter.

"You do not believe it," she said, "but if he had been my son would I have wanted him killed?"

"Whose son is he?" Millington demanded incredulously.

"How will you kill him?" she encountered. "And when?"

Millington realized that he was getting close to the story, to the truth which might still save him.

"Tonight," he said. "I will wait for him at the point when he goes back to the Keewatin post. They will talk there a long time. But first tell me how it will hurt the 'big trader.'"

"Because you kill the boy for whom he has wished for thirty years, the son of the 'big trader' and the white woman."

"You're mad."

Nee-tah-wee-gan only grinned evily.

"Your hate has made you believe this"

"Long hating has made me wise. I saw the way when you thought we were beaten. And when you have done it, when there is no hope, I will go to Corrigal and tell him, tell him it is his own son he has lost. Then he will suffer as I have suffered. It is for that I have waited."

She beat her hands together in an ecstasy of delight.

"I don't believe it," Millington declared, and, though he was seeking to drive her to further disclosures, his doubt was so sincere Nee-tah-wee-gan glanced at him in alarm.

"But you will kill Wen-dah-ban? You will do it to make the 'big trader' suffer?"

"I will do it, but I must know you speak the truth."

NEE-TAH-WEE-GAN hesitated a moment, studying his face, trying to read his thoughts, and Millington saw that the time had come, that he was to learn the thing he needed to know.

"Listen, white man," she began suddenly. "I have never told any one for thirty years, and I tell you only because we both hate these two, because you must help me gain my revenge.

"I first knew John Corrigal at Fort Bruce. I was in the mission there and he was post manager here at Fort James. He was big and handsome and always laughing, and the white people said he was a great fur trader and some day would be chief of all the district.

"In the beginning he did not see me. Always he talked to the white men, laughing and joking, and he never seemed to know there were women. One day I saw him alone and I walked to meet him. I smiled and said 'bo' jou,' but he only said 'bo' jou,' and went on.

"But the next time he smiled, and the time after that he stopped, and soon we began to talk and laugh together. I was in the mission school then, learning the ways of the white people. My clothes were well made and clean. I was half white and pretty.

"But he only laughed and joked when he saw me. He never touched me. Yet I could wait. I knew what the long, lonely winters do to the white men. He would think of me many, many times. I would grow more beautiful in his eyes, and when he came back the next summer he would look at me differently.

"It was as I thought. His eyes were not the same and his voice had changed. The long winter had done what I knew it would.

"Still he did not say anything with words. Only with his eyes. Yet I was content. No matter what the color of her skin, a woman always knows some things, and no matter what the color of his skin, there are some things a man can never hide from a woman. Yet a woman knows, too, that words must be said and that the words must be true.

"So one night I walked down the shore just before dark. I knew he would see me go, and I did not have to wait long. He didn't speak when he found me there in the night. He just put his arms around me so that I could not breathe, and he kissed me so that it hurt, and then he let me go and he said, 'Nee-tah-wee-gan, how would you like to go back to Fort James with me and be my woman?'

"It was what I wanted. It meant that I could live in a big house and have servants, that I would not have to work, to scrape hides, or set snares for rabbits, or paddle a canoe, or carry burdens on the portages. It meant that of all the hundreds of Indians at Fort James I would be the highest. I said yes.

"Then we walked back quickly, for I wanted to tell my friends."

She stopped and her eyes blazed with the

Her name is Martha Ryerson; her home, Chicago. But her fame is international—as the girl with the world's most beautiful complexion.

Artists, photographers, stage and movie directors have acclaimed Miss Ryerson's complexion flawless, in color, texture and clarity.

Her skin is typically English—with the creamy purity one sometimes observes among the pretty country girls of southern Wales.

And there, indeed, is the source of Miss Ryerson's matchless complexion.

While touring Wales with her father, she discovered the magic skin-healing and cleansing potency of a rich gray clay scooped from the river banks in the Welch Highlands.

Her father brought this clay to America—and compounded it into a delightful clay emollient and face-pack, called Terra-derma-lax (Earth Skin Laxative).

Twice each week, Miss Ryerson covers her face with a mask of this remarkable English clay. In forty minutes, when the clay is wiped away, her face is as clean as a babe's—with every speck of dirt evacuated from the pores—and the cuticle as smooth and pure as Jersey cream.

Wrinkles, crow's-feet, blackheads, pimples, vanish under the sorcery of this strange and delightful product of Mother Earth. Enlarged pores shrink to normal invisibility—and the skin is bleached to a lovely milk-white.

Terra-derma-lax is today available in 29,000 drug and department stores at $1. An imported clay vastly superior to any of the many domestic substitutes—at no increase in cost. There's a sister product called "Terra-derma Creme" (an English Cold Cream) which is excellent as a daily cleanser to supplement the semi-weekly use of Terra-derma-lax, also $1 a jar.

Get a jar of each from your toilet goods dealer today. If he cannot supply you—send a 25c piece for a trial tube of both clay and cream.

hatred to which Millington had become accustomed. Her voice was shrill as she plunged on with her story.

"That night a canoe came from the great salt sea to the north. In it was a woman from England, come to teach the children of the post manager at Fort Bruce. She was young and she was white, and when Corrigal saw her the next morning he forgot he had ever seen me. He never came near me again. He never saw me when we passed. All the time he was with the white woman, and two weeks after she came they went to the mission and were married."

NEE-TAH-WEE-GAN became speechless for a moment. The blind passion of the primitive overcame her. Hatred flared afresh and she cast aside all restraint.

"I followed them to Fort James!" she cried. "There was a tripper, a half-breed who had come with the Fort James brigade, and my friends were laughing at me. I smiled at him and when he went back I was his woman. The missionary married us. Corrigal knew, but he did not seem to notice. When he saw me at Fort James he smiled like a fool. 'It is best,' he said. 'We will both be much happier.' And I smiled and said yes—and I waited.

"I could speak English then, and the white woman often talked to me because there were no others who could understand her language or teach her Ojibwa. And she made me the cook in the dwelling house, and I lived in the room back of the kitchen.

"Sometimes when I was alone I laughed. I had thought I would go to Fort James and be the chief woman of the post, that I would live in the dwelling house. I went, but I had no servants. I lived back of the kitchen. I was the cook. I worked while the white woman did nothing, and I would laugh, not because of what was but because of what would be.

"A year went by after Corrigal brought his white woman to Fort James and then part of another year. The white woman had a child, a boy. It was Wen-dah-ban, the one you call Norton. At about the same time I, too, had a child, a boy. Because I was an Indian I got up the second day and cooked the meals, but because she was white she lay in bed for days, for weeks. She was very thin, and she suffered, and when I brought her food I smiled and said soft things, but inside I was laughing. For thirty years I have laughed that she suffered so.

"And while she lay there Corrigal had to go to an outpost two days' journey away. It was spring and he said he would hurry back. It was the chance for which I had always waited, to be alone there with the white woman, but when it came I did not see it. I was thinking of something else, of my own child, which had never been well and which now I believed was going to die.

"I asked Corrigal for medicine, but he would not give it to me. He said the baby was too young, that he did not dare give it medicine, that the child might die if he did. He went away, for he was in a great hurry to get back to his wife, and the night after he left my baby died."

Nee-tah-wee-gan ceased talking and her bent body straightened. She stared straight before her, and Millington, awed by her fiendish expression and well aware of what her savage, pitiless spirit may have driven her to, waited breathlessly.

"For an hour I cursed Corrigal," she began at last, and a tigerish exultation forced out the words with an ominous sibilation. "I forgot all I had planned. I knew only hate. And then suddenly I saw that I could do more than I had ever planned, more than I had hoped. I saw that I could make him suffer for a lifetime, and that at the end I could make him think his past suffering had been only joy.

"I took the dead body of my child and went to the white woman's room. She was asleep, and I picked up her baby from beside her and put mine in its place. And then I emptied the oil lamp over the bed and the floor and touched a match to it. I ran to my room back of the kitchen with her baby, with Wen-dah-ban, and got into bed and laid there until I heard shouts. Men came and told me the dwelling house was burning and to take my child and run."

Nee-tah-wee-gan rocked back and forth on the floor as if in ecstasy. The very curve of her bent old back seemed to denote a transport of joy, and a dry, harsh cackle burst from her lips. Millington, horror stricken, did not move or speak.

"Corrigal came back after three days," she continued. "I watched him when his dog team came to the post. He was like a man who dies inside and only his body moves. He did not stay at Fort James. An hour after he came he took another dog team and drove away to Fort Bruce. I never saw him again until he came two winters ago.

"That," and she looked up at Millington, "is what I did to John Corrigal. But it is not all I had planned. I was going to make an Indian of his son, and soon I, too, left Fort James and no one saw that I carried a white child. For I was going to make an Indian of him, and then, when it was too late, when he could never be anything else, I was going to find Corrigal and tell him. Then I would be ready to die.

"But now that Wen-dah-ban is not an Indian, now that he and Corrigal are friends, it will only bring them joy if they know. Yet if Wen-dah-ban is dead, if he goes just when Corrigal has found him, don't you see? It will be as good, when I tell Corrigal."

"The best fiction by the best authors." That is the motto of the Tribune's Coloroto magazine. In keeping with this pledge, we have secured as our next serial this new story by the author of "The Brass Bowl," "The Lone Wolf," "The False Faces," and numerous other best sellers. It is an engrossing story of America's fast set—country club life, society life in New York, the wandering loves of successful business men, the intrigues of the bored wives of fashion, the schemings of the girl who must find a rich husband. But as his heroine Mr. Vance presents a real woman, a woman of rare intelligence, a successful author. His story tells graphically how she meets the great crisis in her married life; how she solves the problem of the eternal triangle; how she sets to rights the tangled lives that are entwined with hers.

SUNDAY, MAY 13 IN THE TRIBUNE'S COLOROTO MAGAZINE

MILLINGTON had recovered sufficiently from his horror to begin to doubt. He knew Nee-tah-wee-gan was capable of such a diabolical act, that the primitive hate and the Indian's lust for revenge would carry her to any lengths, but he saw, too, how thirty years of venom and brooding could have affected her mind and how she could have come to believe something that had existed only in her imagination.

"You have thought of this so long you believe it is true," he said. "You have dreamed it. You can never prove it."

Nee-tah-wee-gan did not speak, but thrust a hand into her waist and drew forth a little skin bag that hung by a thong from her neck. She opened it and took out a gold ring, a tiny baby's ring.

"That was on Wen-dah-ban's finger," she said. "It has the white woman's name inside. It was hers when she was a baby. I took it off Wen-dah-ban's finger and ever since it has been in this bag. I have only to show it to Corrigal and he will know I speak the truth."

Millington leaned forward as she held up the circlet of gold. He knew it was proof, an indisputable bit of evidence, and suddenly he realized that with it in his possession he could save himself from Corrigal's wrath, could make terms that would insure his retention in the Hudson's Bay service.

Slowly he leaned farther forward, staring at the ring but gauging the distance, and when he believed he was close enough his right hand shot out and closed over Nee-tah-wee-gan's.

Instantly she became a raging fury. A shrill scream burst from her lips and she fought to keep the ring. Millington, straining to wrench it from her, struck her in the face. Nee-tah-wee-gan's grip did not loosen, and as he used both hands to pry loose the prize she struggled to her knees. The next moment her teeth had been driven into the flesh of his right hand until they met.

Millington jerked free with an oath, and as he sprang back the woman got to her feet and retreated to a table. He saw her reaching toward a shelf, and then she charged with a long butcher knife. He opened the door and fled.

DONALD had been gone half an hour when Millington returned to the dwelling house.

"Have a team ready and start for Fort Bruce early in the morning," Corrigal said as soon as he entered the living room.

"You mean I'm no longer manager here?"

"Certainly. Those hunters would have burned the post and perhaps have killed you if it hadn't been for Donald Norton."

"Yes," Millington retorted savagely, "and if there hadn't been that one little slip I'd have finished Norton once and for all in this district."

"Only a fool would try such a trick on a man like him," Corrigal answered coldly. "You should have known you couldn't do it. He has enough influence over those hunters to make them walk on their hands the rest of the winter. But I don't want you here in the morning. Norton has them calmed down now, but they may change their minds."

"And when I get to Fort Bruce?"

Millington asked the question deliberately. He had been stung by Corrigal's contempt, but most of all he wanted to make his trade, to sell the information he had gained from Nee-tah-wee-gan for retention in the company's service, to save himself from certain disgrace.

"You can count on going right through to Winnipeg," Corrigal answered quickly. "I put up with your crookedness at Whitefish Lake two years ago because I thought it would be a lesson to you and that you would go straight. But I've been watching you closely this winter and I know how you've doctored your statements just to make a showing. That's why I doubled back tonight. I was sure you would do something like this."

"And I suppose you'll write a letter to the commissioner!" Millington exclaimed.

Corrigal did not deign to answer and, squirming under the contempt of the district manager's glance, Millington rushed on:

"You do that to me and you'll regret it as long as you live!" he exclaimed savagely. "I've been talking to Nee-tah-wee-gan tonight. I've learned something, something I can prove, something that touches you and Norton. And if you send me out, if you blacken me before the commissioner——"

Corrigal had leaped from his chair and across the room.

"Stop it!" he commanded in a tone so deadly Millington drew back. "You blackmailing cur! Do you think there is anything in that I don't know? I've let the north country ring with her story and have never denied it, but I'll drive you out of the service if you try to use it."

"You're making a mistake," Millington sneered. "My information is something both you and Norton would like to have. And the proof is absolute."

"I've heard enough!" Corrigal cried furiously. "Neither you nor Nee-tah-wee-gan could prove anything to me, or to Norton either."

Millington knew he had to make terms then and there, but as he strove to find an opening, some way of hinting at what he knew and yet of holding back its real import until he could extract a promise of immunity, Corrigal spoke again.

"And, as for you, you've decided your own fate with your threats. Out to Winnipeg you go and I'll write a letter that'll make the north country too hot to hold you."

"It's to your own good to listen," Millington whispered in a shaking voice. "You'll regret——"

Corrigal slapped him in the face with an open hand, slapped him again and again, sending his head rocking from side to side and straightening it when he ducked with a slap under the chin. There was something contemptuously deliberate in the way he did it, something so scornful of retaliation and so patently heedless of resistance it was more humiliating than the blows themselves. For a moment Millington staggered away against a wall, and then suddenly he leaped clear and ran out of the room.

HE did not stop until he had reached Nee-tah-wee-gan's cabin. His mind was inflamed with one thought, to obtain the single bit of evidence the old Indian woman had, to render her wild story valueless and ruin forever the one chance of happiness that lay open to Corrigal and Donald.

Donald he had always hated, and since their fight at Fort Bruce he had sought constantly for some means of revenge. Now he hated Corrigal in the same way, for the district manager, with his humiliating open handed blows, had exposed to Millington himself the raw sore of his physical cowardice, a wound that had never closed since the terrific beating he had received at Fort Bruce. In his blind rage he sought only to make impossible the one thing that would bring joy to these two.

When he peered through the small window of the cabin he saw Nee-tah-wee-gan still crouched on the floor before the stove. The room was in darkness except for a thin streak of light that shone from the open draft.

The night was very cold. The post buildings, resting on solid clay, were groaning and cracking as the frost contracted their foundations. Waiting until the sharp sound would drown the lifting of the latch, Millington pushed the door open and leaped inside.

The rush of cold air aroused Nee-tah-wee-gan, but not until Millington's hand had been thrust inside her waist and he had grasped the little leather bag that held the ring. He jerked sharply, breaking the worn thong around her neck, but before he could spring to his feet the old woman had thrown both arms around his legs.

He struggled, but her strength was amazing. She not only continued to hold his feet together but to pull herself upward, clasping him around the thighs, while, with sharp, furious snaps of her jaws, she drove her teeth into his legs.

Writhing with pain, beating her head with his fists, Millington tried desperately to free himself, but to no avail. Then he slipped the leather bag into a pocket and reached for her throat with both hands. As he choked her she became a raging fury, scratching at his face with her nails and clutching his clothing.

In a last frienzied effort he summoned all his strength and hurled her from him. He heard her body strike and then all was still.

For a moment he stood there trying to restrain his heavy breathing that he might catch any sound from the corner. When he heard none, when there was no movement, the deathlike quiet became an ominous thing. In sudden terror he turned and fled from the cabin without closing the door.

Long before dawn the next morning Millington was on his way to Fort Bruce. He did not see Corrigal again or any one except the cook and his half breed drivers. He rode in a cariole, while a second team carried robes and food, and all day he urged men and dogs to a killing pace.

IT was after daylight that an Indian child, playing among the employés' cabins, looked through the open door of Nee-tah-wee-gan's home and saw her body in a corner. He ran to tell his mother, and in a moment the post was in an uproar. But the employés, before they dared enter, went for Corrigal.

The district manager believed the woman was dead when he saw her. Blood had dried below a cut on her forehead and she lay in a little heap on the floor beneath the sharp corner of a bunk. He had been told that the door was open, and it did not seem possible that she could have lived through the cold night.

But when he turned the body over he heard a slight moan and blood gushed from the woman's mouth. Without feeling her sides he knew that a rib had been broken and driven into a lung.

Corrigal had her carried to the warm cabin of one of the employés and then sent a messenger to Donald at the Keewatin post.

Nee-tah-wee-gan was still unconscious when the young man arrived. Corrigal had met him beyond the trade shop and told what had happened.

"Millington did it," he concluded. "He was over there while we were talking, and when he came back he tried to blackmail me with something Nee-tah-wee-gan had told him. He said it settled the question of your parentage, and when he insinuated that I was implicated I cuffed his ears.

"He went out then and I saw him go down to the employés' cabins again. I went to bed before he came back and I did not see him before he left this morning. But he said something to me about proof, and I think he went back there and quarreled with her. I imagine he knocked her down and she lay there all night with the door open."

"There was something between them," Donald said. "I knew they plotted together against me."

"And probably against me, too," Corrigal added. "But this is a plain case of murder and he must be caught. I'll have a team gotten ready and send word out at once."

"Never mind that," Donald said harshly. "I'll get him. After all, it's my job, no matter what sort of a mother she has been. Where is she?"

Corrigal led him to the door of the cabin and then turned away. Donald found that the Indian women were doing all they could. Nee-tah-wee-gan's hands and feet had been frozen and were being thawed out in cold water. Her waist was torn away, exposing a great bruise on one side and explaining, as Corrigal had surmised, the pink froth on her lips.

DONALD stood at the head of the bed for a time. He did not believe she could survive the wounds, the frozen extremities, and the exposure of the long winter night, and as he looked down at the dark brown face, lined and twisted and stamped by a lifetime of hate, he wished that she would not recover consciousness, would not waken to the terrible agony that he knew would be hers when the blood began to force its way into the thawed flesh.

All his life Donald had been mystified by the attitude of this woman toward him. Never had he been the object of the soft endearments and proud glances so universal in Indian homes. In his boyhood he had been tolerated. Later he had been persecuted, and always his success had brought increased venom.

Yet he himself had seldom become bitter. He had looked upon Nee-tah-wee-gan as his one kin, and when he had reached manhood and at last had faced the realities of his hybrid status in the world he realized that she must remain his only kin, the only person to whom he was tied or could hope to be tied.

Now when he saw that she was passing, that henceforth he must swing on through life's orbit solitary and detached, his spirit cut off from intimate contact with any other spirit, he softened toward this woman who had never shown anything except hate for him. He felt that she, too, had been lonely, isolated by her inexplicable hatred, and as never before he wondered what could have been at the bottom of it all, what injustice or ironical fate could have so perverted her.

Then the very thing he had dreaded occurred. The excruciating agony of thawing flesh pierced her dulled consciousness and its very intensity compelled recognition by a numbed brain. Her lips parted, pink froth gushed out, and Nee-tah-wee-gan moaned and opened her eyes. For a moment she looked at the Indian women beside her, and then with a sudden movement of both hands she clutched at her breast.

"It's gone!" she cried in Ojibwa. "He took it! He took it! The only thing I had in the world!"

The harsh features of the ugly old face were grotesque in their unaccustomed expression of hopelessness and terror.

"Where is he?" she screamed. "Go bring him here. Make him give it back to me."

One of the Indian women explained that Millington had departed early in the morning, and, repeating the gossip of a feverishly excited post, she added that he had gone out to Winnipeg, had left the north country forever.

"Forever!" Nee-tah-wee-gan repeated. "Did he see the 'big trader'? Did he talk to him after he robbed me?"

"I heard the 'big trader' say he had not seen him," was the answer.

Despite her pain Nee-tah-wee-gan lifted her head and glared at the women beside her. The terror and the hopelessness were gone and there shone from her eyes a hatred so diabolical because of a mingled light of fiendish joy in victory the squaws drew back in alarm.

"Then Corrigal will never know!" she cried. "Some day I was going to tell him when——"

She had caught a glimpse of Donald standing at the head of the bed, and as she stopped speaking her eyes blazed with a cruelty and a delight so malignant the young man drew back appalled.

SECOND ADVENTURE—GINGER MEETS SOME FRIENDS.

By Raymond Kelly.

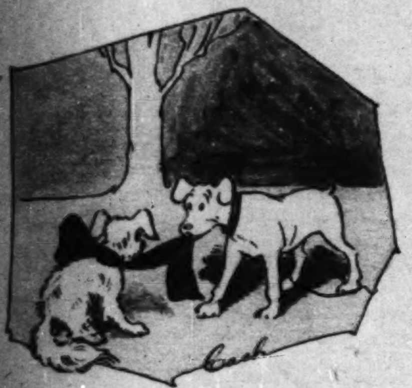
MY, O my, but Ginger, the fox terrier, was a cross dog that morning!

"Wow," he snapped. "I'm sick of grownup humans. Saturday's the only decent day in the week, and they spoil that by making Boy Ted give me a bath. Well, there's no use in sticking around here and waiting for the cook to throw something at me. I'm going to hunt up the gang."

So Ginger trotted down the back wall and out into the nice muddy alley, so blue and grouchy that he never even stopped to run Watson's one-eyed white tomcat up the cherry tree. At the corner he stopped and looked around. Not a dog in sight except Toodles, the fat poodle, and he didn't count as a regular dog. But Toodles hailed him:



Ginger jerked Toodles' ribbon out of bow.

"Hello, Snap."

"Ginger, to you, if you please."

"All right, Ginger Snap."

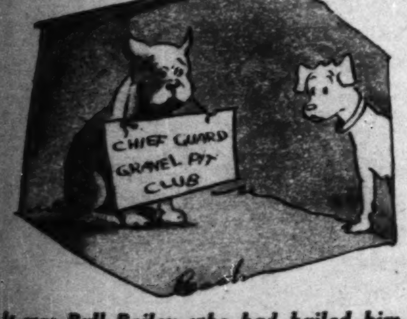
"Look here, Useless," said Ginger, "if grease didn't disagree with me, I'd eat you up," and Ginger gave Toodles a push with his nose that landed him in the mud.

"Ouch," whined Toodles. "You just wait till Bull Bailey gets back from the club. He'll fix you."

"Club? What club?"

"Gravel Pit club. They won't let you join."

So that was where the gang had gone. Ginger jerked Toodles' pretty blue neck ribbin out of bow and trotted off laughing. He felt better already. He cut through alleys and across vacant lots and crawled under fences on his way to the edge of town. It wasn't so very far to the gravel pit and he'd often gone there with Boy Ted to chase rabbits, and so he knew the way well and wasn't long in getting to the path that led down into the pit.



It was Bull Bailey who had hailed him.

"Halt! Who comes here?"

Ginger was so surprised that he stopped stock still in his tracks and almost sat down. It was Bull Bailey who had hailed him. Bull had a cardboard sign hanging around his neck and on it was printed in doggerel, "Chief Guard Gravel Pit club. Member dogs only."

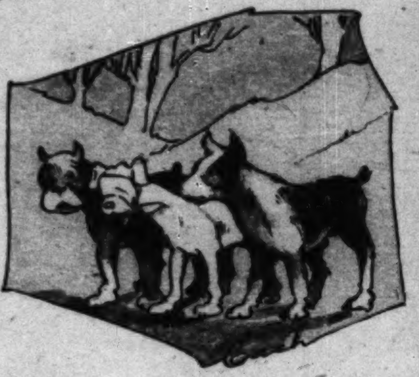
"Hey," said Ginger. "What's the big idea?"

"You can't get in here," said Bull.

"Why not?"

"Because you don't belong to the club."

"Well, I can join, can't I?"



They tied a napkin over his eyes.

"Wait here and I'll see," said Bull. So Ginger sat down and sharpened his teeth on an old shoe by the path, while Bull trotted away down into the pit. Bull came back pretty soon. With him were Granger, the collie, and Wolf, the police dog. They looked at Ginger as though they had never seen him before. Then Granger spoke:

"Dog, are you brave?"

"Certainly, I'm brave," said Ginger. "Why, once I——"

"Never mind telling about that now," growled Wolf. "Are you ready and willing to obey our rules?"

"Yes."

"Then," said Granger, "you may check your collar in the clothes closet and come along. But first you must be blindfolded."

So Ginger let them take off his new collar and pile it with all the others under the hazelnut bush. Then they tied a napkin over his eyes and he walked down the path into the pit, paw in paw with Granger and Wolf, so that he wouldn't stumble, while Bull Bailey went on guard again. Ginger had a lot more adventures that day, but if you want to hear about them you must go right to bed without talking and get one hundred in arithmetic tomorrow.

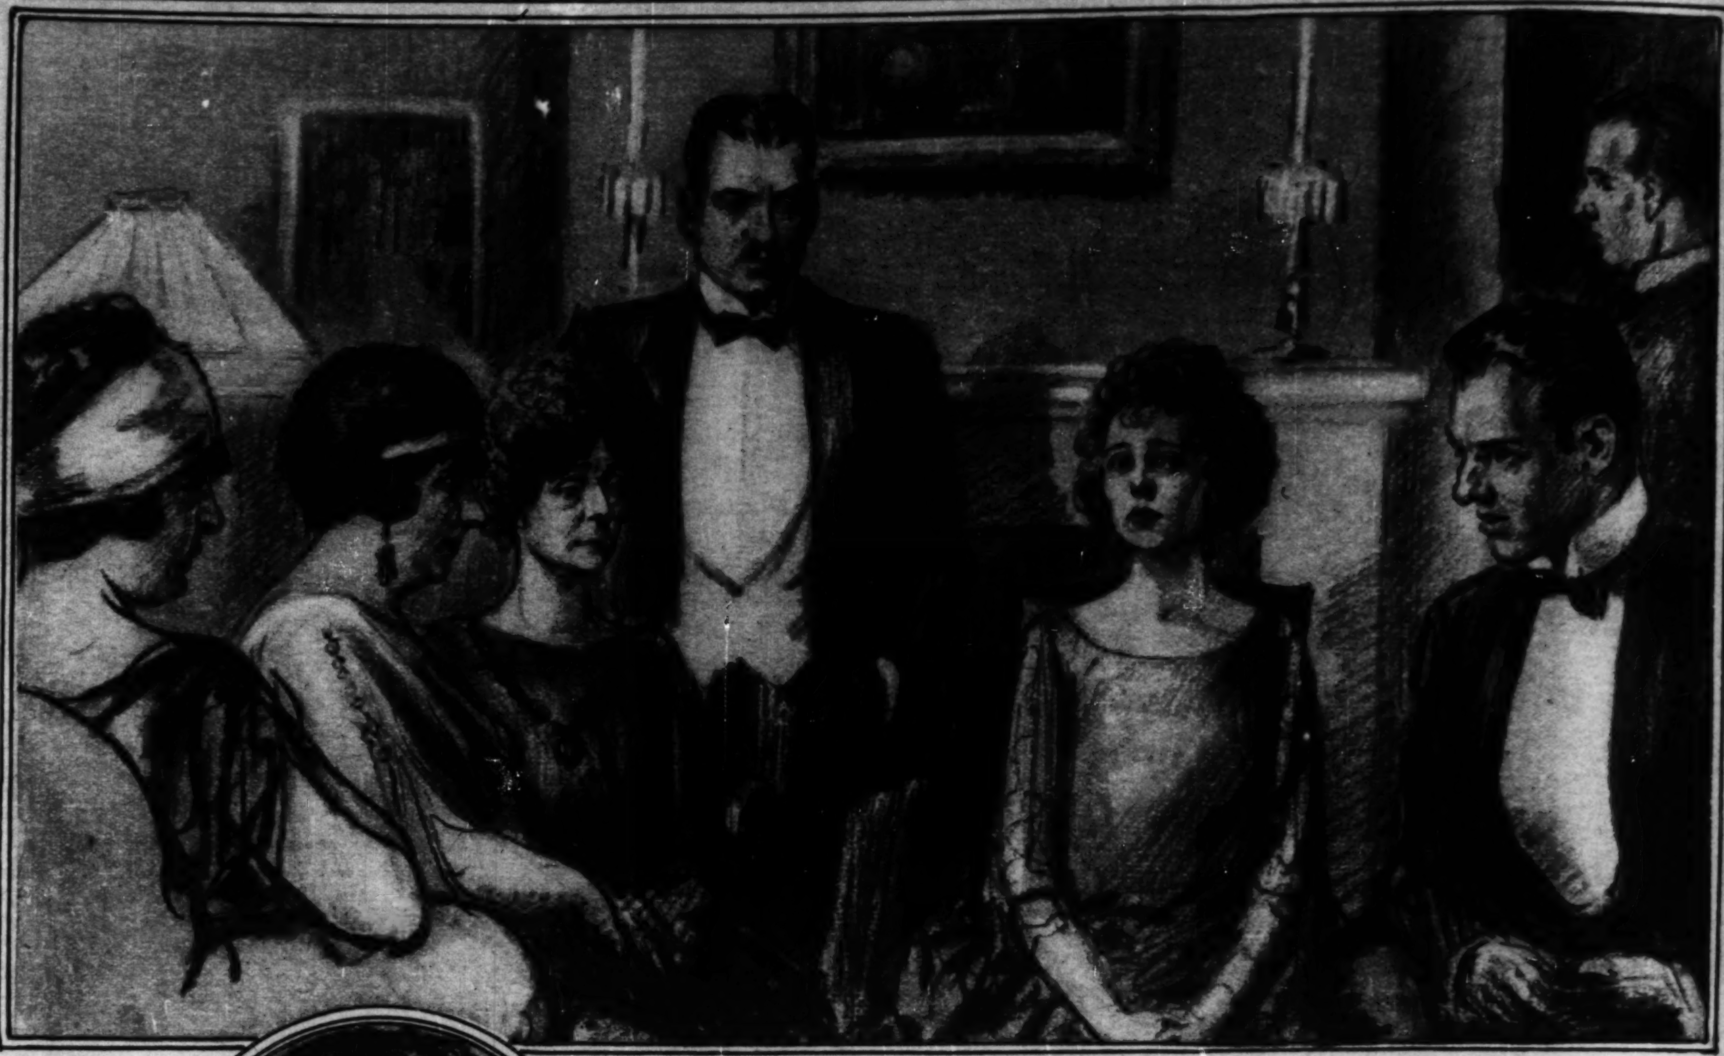
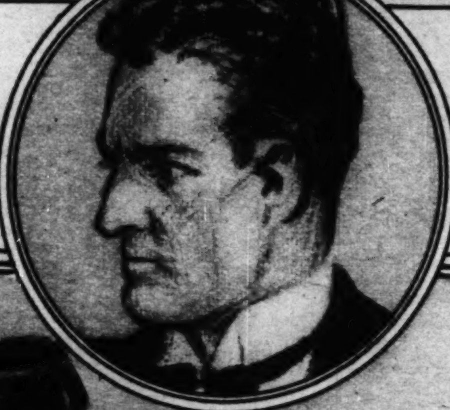
DINING OUT

By W. E. HILL

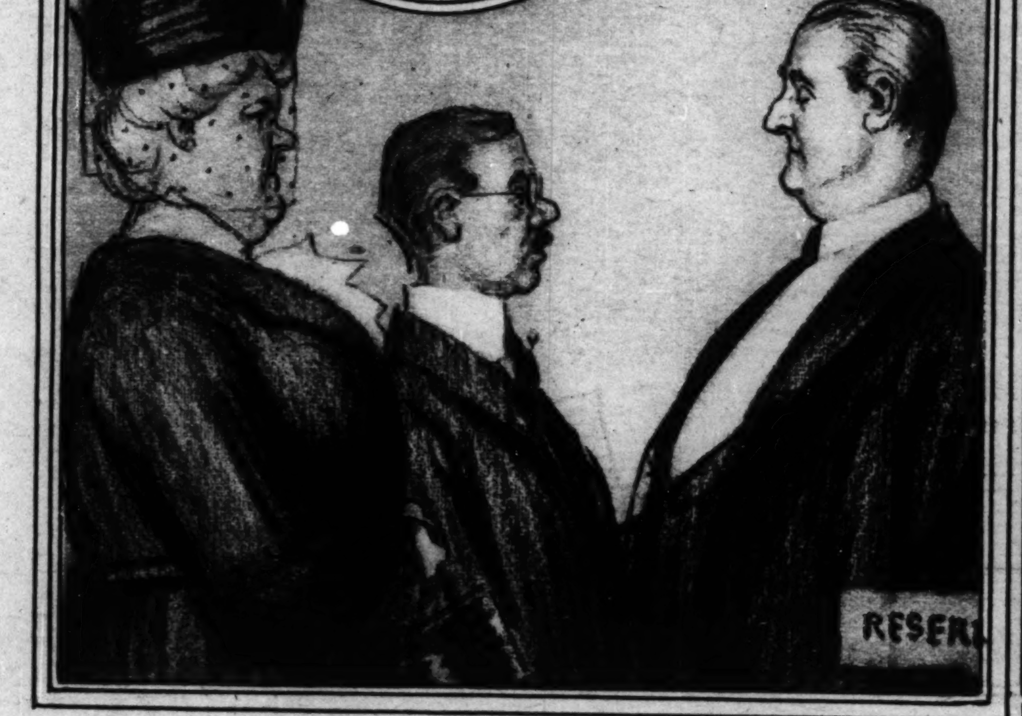
Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune

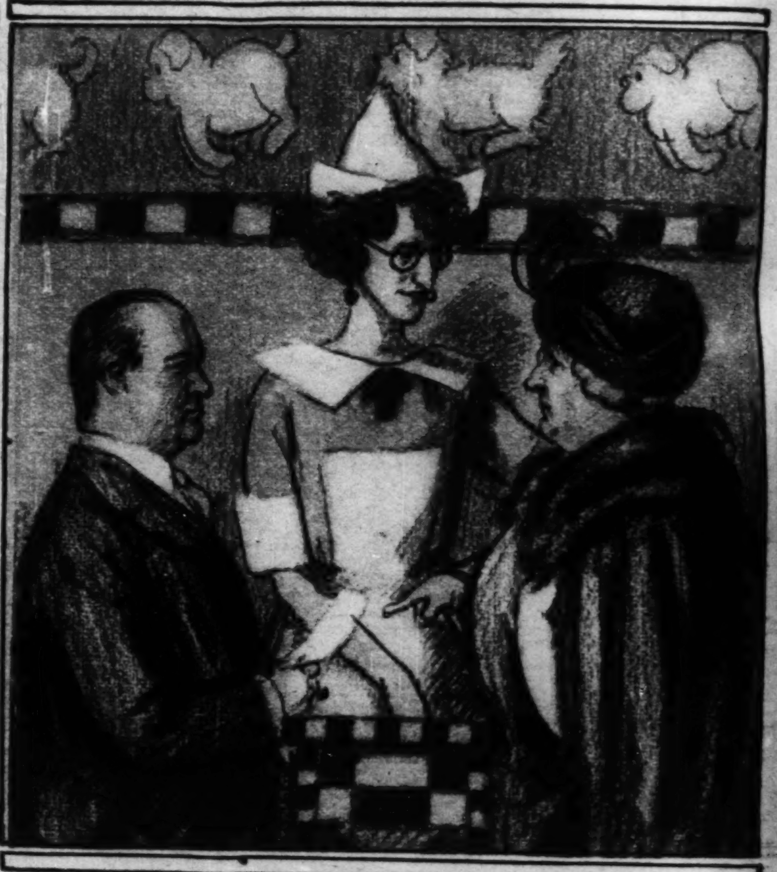




The piercing glance that is passed from husband to wife—a glance which says plain as day, "You see! I was right—I didn't need to get into this dinner jacket!"

That terrible before dinner moment when the guests one and all are brought face to face with the fact that there are to be no cocktails before, and probably nothing to help break the ice during dinner.





Why is it that, when Mr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Sodaberg dine out of a spring evening, the head waiter, after the most casual of glances, leads them in and out, past the good empty tables to the far off table right slam up against the pantry door where all the bus boys brush past with the service plates and the used dishes?

The cook's night out. Fortunately there's a cute little tea room around the corner—the Teeny Weeny Tea Room, by name. Mr. and Mrs. Coakley are obviously not the right size for a little tea room The waitress is busy explaining that nothing is left but cold ham.

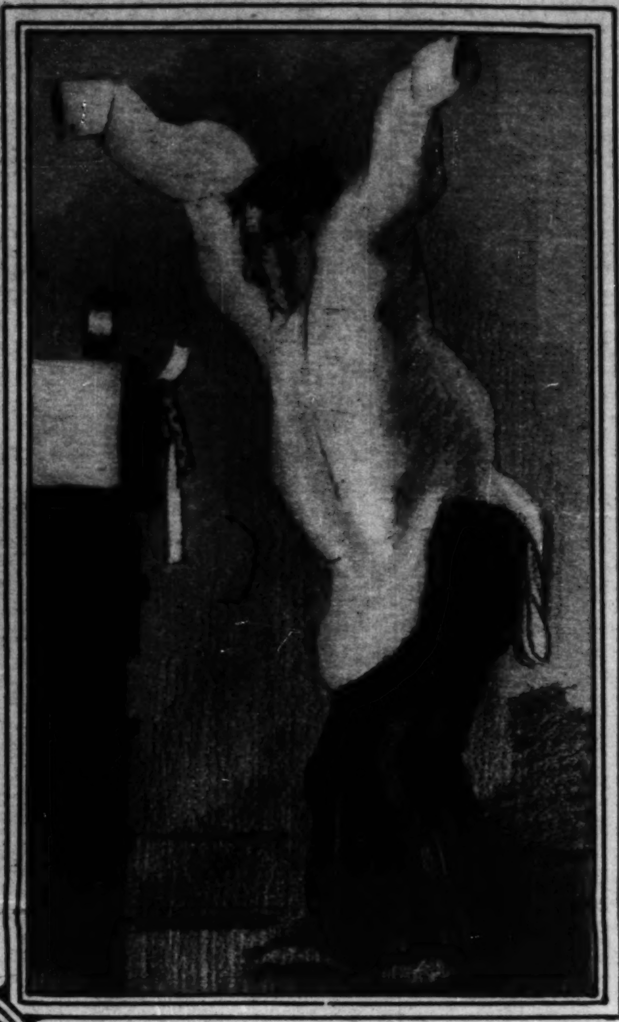
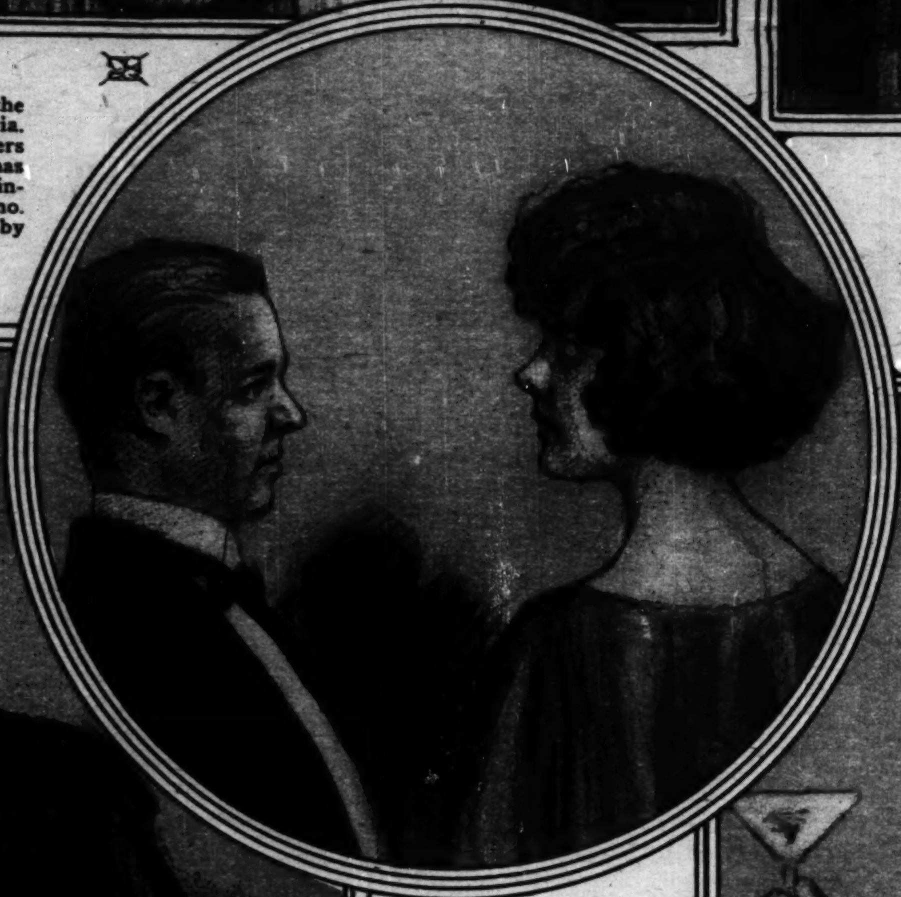
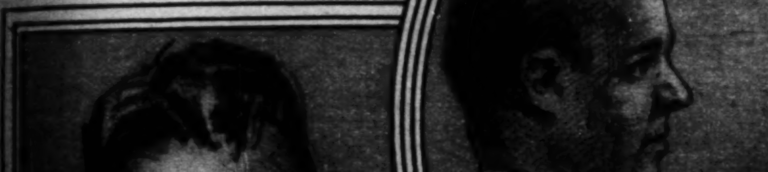
Saturday night diners out in the Volcano room of the Hotel Plastoria. For the entertainment of the diners and dancers, the management has fixed up the room just like the interior of the crater of a volcano. It's a great success as you can see by the crowded dance floor.



Portrait of a young man who is always late, dressing for an early dinner party. He'll never make it. The only clean shirt —and even that has the imprint of a shoe tree across the bosom—is one of those good old over the head garments.



The girl with the snappy conversational line trying out on the bashful young man: "The minute you came into the room," the snappy girl is saying, "I thought, 'Now that's the type I could fall in love with,' now you tell me what you thought when you saw me." The bashful young man would sell his soul to think of a neat comeback, but he can't. Besides, he lunched frugally, and the cocktail has gone headwards and his speech is thickening.



Joel is wining and dining friends in a restaurant—the sunken Grecian garden room of the Hotel Slam Bang to be exact—and that terrible sensation is upon him that comes to every man just before looking at the check. Suppose it should be five hundred dollars? Or a thousand dollars? Or suppose his wallet has been rifled?

The genial host. It's up to him to do the honors when the cocktails are raised on high. Of course the old fashioned way is to say, "Here's how," and let it go at that. The comic host, however, likes to vary the formula with, "Here's to crime," or "Here's to the days that was."

RASPUTIN

By Griffin Barry.

Part I.

Rasputin's First Steps.

ON a gray March day six years ago a committee from the provisional government of Russia entered the apartment of their ex-majesties in the palace at Tsarskoe Selo. The czar had just abdicated. Outside, Russia heaved in revolution.

It was the pale empress who admitted her captors; Nicholas II. was not entirely sober. It was Alexandra who swore on behalf of her husband and herself, of the 13 year old czarevitch, ill in bed with his hereditary disease, and of his four sisters to observe the limits of the few rooms left to them and the walled garden. All of the empress' belongings were taken away, save the jewels she wore and a change of clothes. First of all, her private papers were seized.

Eighteen months later it was she, the strong willed, who in a damp house cellar in Siberia was the first to fall before the firing squad.

Meanwhile the waves of revolution drove beyond Russia. Thrones cracked to the south and west. Millions died.

Who was responsible?

No one person, merely. Not the incompetent czar, nor his bewitched consort; not the man who bewitched her. It was not a one person revolution.

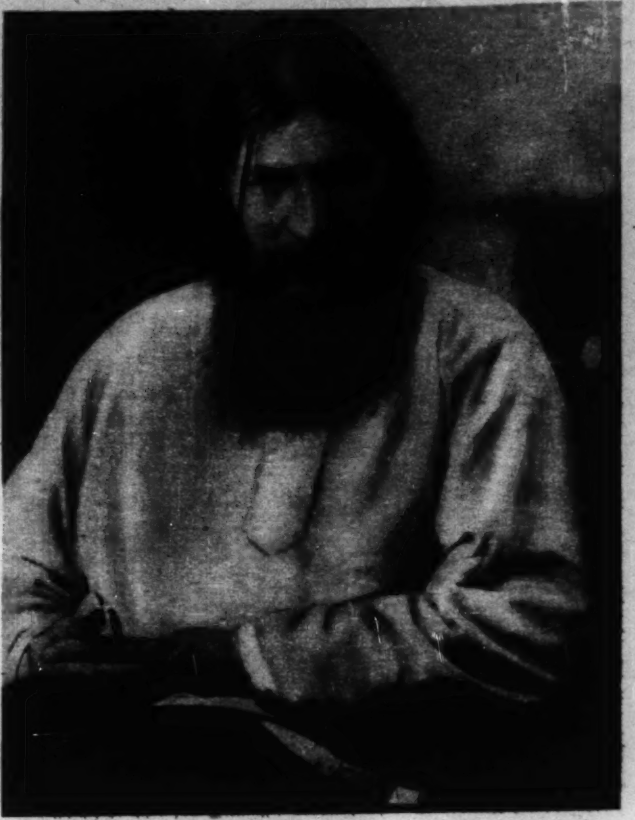
Yet for two years all of Russia and half Europe had watched an illiterate, sex ridden Tobolsk peasant stride like a king through the decaying upper strata of Russian society, the magic of the empress' favor forever on him, making and unmaking ministers, generals, and high priests, beckoning the ruin that came. Armed with no native intellectual gifts, but only with peasant cunning, a tenacious will, and an extraordinary power over women, he pursued his personal ends and those of the fear infected woman he served until a dynasty fell.

His name—Rasputin—means literally in Russian "lewd one." History will not change the significance of the word.

So far no exact history has been possible of the man. Gossip has taken its place; the Rasputin legend is built upon that. It was known that the men who moved into the czar's palaces—frock coated and kid gloved at first, fresh from parliament, and later the fiercer men who still rule—had possessed themselves of certain papers. They were not made public. In the whirlwind that broke after Rasputin was removed the new occupants of the czar's palaces had enough to do to keep their places in them. The Rasputin data passed from the archives of one trembling government to another—first in Petrograd, then in Moscow.

Only now, when the worst of the storm is over, has the soviet government at Moscow released for publication one sheaf of papers, wholly in the handwriting of the empress, relating to Rasputin. It was taken, together with the photographs here reproduced, from Alexandra's little enameled writing desk on the day she admitted her jailers to Tsarskoe Selo.

One part is a copybook of ordinary size—probably caught up from the schoolroom of the imperial children—in which Alexandra copied telegrams from Rasputin to the reigning family sent through twelve years. She has written "Journal," in English, at the beginning and "Alexandra," her signature, on the flyleaf. She has drawn a small cross at the top of every page, to show the holy character of the text.



Photograph of Rasputin taken for the Empress Alexandra three months before he was murdered.

The second part is Rasputin's own life story, copied by the empress at the priest's dictation. Rasputin himself knew how to scrawl only a few words. From internal evidence, the document appears to have been written during the abortive revolution of 1905-'06. Together, the manuscripts record the steps by which this amazing reincarnation of the fifth century rose to power.

Rasputin appeared in St. Petersburg in the summer of 1904—a barefoot, vermin ridden lay preacher from Tobolsk. He had walked from Siberia to the capital, believing that he had communicated directly with God on the way. He dreamed of a church he was to build with money to be obtained he knew not how.

For a year or more Rasputin worked in labor gangs along the banks of the Neva. His first recorded act in the capital was to send an ikon to the czar.

The empress has copied, under date of Nov. 5, 1905, the humble message to the sovereign that accompanied the gift.

"To the Little Father: Arriving here from Siberia, I present you with an ikon of St. Simon of Verkotur, the Miracle Worker, who is greatly admired among us. I beg you to accept it in the belief that the saint will help you all your life, for the benefit of your subjects.

"GREGORY EFIMOVITCH RASPUTIN."

Such a gift from the pious—generally a bid for money from imperial largesse—was common enough in prerevolutionary Russia. Rasputin's offering was unheeded, however. Then the young mystic was inspired to take the step that made him.

At the gate of the Alexandrevki Priests' seminary he asked to see the bishop. The porter, in view of his ill smelling rags, promptly knocked him down. Rasputin rose and blessed him. The astonished guardian—overwhelmed with pity after an act of brutality, in true Russian fashion—took him to see the prelate.

Shrewd Bishop Sergius, mentor of the student priests, is still remembered by those who knew the St. Petersburg of eighteen years ago. A politically minded man, he had interests to press at court. The astonishing hypnotic eyes of the vagabond and the good looks beneath his dirt, his sensual vanity and the will that drove him to flay it, the illiterate monastic jargon that gave him a strange prestige in half mediæval Russia, his peasant cunning, his soaring dreams, his courage, his very rags—what a combination! What an equipment for a court mystic!

Needing a protégé in the imperial group, Bishop Sergius had taken occasion to study the court atmosphere. On July 30, 1904, Alexis, the czarevitch, was born. Alexandra had presented the czar with four daughters; the fortunes of her house depended on the advent of a male heir. When the boy appeared the charlatans who had foretold his sex became made men.

Alexandra had for years consulted hosts of them. Count Witte—at that time negotiating peace between Russia and Japan in Portsmouth, N. H., and later Russian premier—relates in his memoirs the exploits of a certain Dr. Phillipe, a French quack from Lyons. This man had, some years before, induced in Alexandra an "imaginary pregnancy." Under his influence Alexandra for months deceived the court—and, very possibly, herself—as to her condition. Not until she had been for weeks in bed was an examination insisted upon, and Dr. Ott, the court accoucheur, destroyed any hope of a birth at that period.

From then on the mystery mongering set in that never left the court of Alexandra. Fashionable Russian society gave itself over to occultism, and the occultists turned from dabbling in the mysteries of sex to dabbling in politics, from "spiritualism" to sensuality.

Bishop Sergius made the necessary introductions, and Rasputin joined the "spiritual" groups. He was launched. What followed is clear from the second telegram in the record, as copied down by the empress. She has left it undated, but it was sent from Rasputin's native village of Pokrofskaia, province of Tobolsk.

"Pokrofskaia.

"My Golden Father and My Dear Little Mother: I am building a temple out of your money, but the columns are not yet covered with gold. When they are laid over with gold we shall rejoice greatly there. They will soon be all golden, and then your guardian saint will live in the temple.

"GREGORY EFIMOVITCH."

There is no record of the sum Rasputin got for his church, but it certainly was never built. A passage in his life story mentions the quarrels with the higher clergy that stood in his way—a long combat that was to endure throughout his life. But he did not walk back to Siberia; he was able to pay his fare back on the railroad.

Part II.

Rasputin and the Czarevitch.

A WORD as to Alexandra herself, without whom Rasputin would never have been heard of. She was the granddaughter of Victoria of England. Her voluminous letters to her husband are written in the English she learned in the royal schoolroom at Buckingham palace. Her father, the Duke of

FROM HOVEL TO PALACE.

RASPUTIN appeared in St. Petersburg in the spring of 1904—a barefoot, vermin ridden lay preacher from Tobolsk.

He fascinated women extraordinarily; he climbed almost entirely through them; the nature of his relations with many women of the highest Russian society is unquestionable.

Alexandra had been a beautiful girl, but a wild one. When her marriage to the future czar was first proposed the Russian chargé d'affaires at Darmstadt turned in an unsatisfactory report on her girlhood.

One virtue Alexandra did not lack—she was a loving mother. Through that quality alone, in the beginning, Rasputin won her. He became the playmate of her children.

He had an attractive peasant strength that was new to the anæmic imperial children.

For two years all of Russia and half Europe watched an illiterate peasant stride like a king through the decaying upper strata of Russian society, the magic of the empress' favor forever on him, making and unmaking ministers, generals, and high priests, beckoning the ruin that came.

Armed with no native intellectual gifts, but only with peasant cunning, a tenacious will, and an extraordinary power over women, he pursued his personal ends and those of the fear infected woman he served until the dynasty fell.

His name—Rasputin—means literally in Russian "lewd one." History will not change the significance of the word. He tried, unsuccessfully, to rid himself of the associations that clung to the literal meaning of his name.

A True and Documentary Story of the Last Czarina's Evil Genius

Hesse-Darmstadt, was a North German prince second only to the kaiser in his support of the divine right of kings.

Alexandra had been a beautiful girl, but a wild one. "She was not liked," writes Count Witte of her first visit to St. Petersburg, when her candidature to share the prospects of the heir to Alexander III. was proposed. Nor had the Russian chargé d'affaires at Darmstadt turned in a satisfactory report of her girlhood. The project lapsed. Then, unmated, the czarevitch abandoned himself to dissipation. Suddenly it was deemed necessary to choose his wife immediately, and Nicholas, of infirm will himself, had been drawn to the headstrong German-English princess. Eventually he was dispatched to Darmstadt to ask the hand of the Princess Alix.

Alexandra immediately consented and immediately changed her religion from the Lutheran to the Greek Orthodox church. The step was necessary, but eventually it altered the history of Russia. For the eastern church, encrusted with ceremony and superstition, drew out the medievalism lurking in the young woman. Thrust quickly into a position of enormous power, and dominating Nicholas easily, she became the open enemy of modern influences in a country that needed them sorely. In two wars—the Russo-Japanese and the great war—she fought bitterly such of the grand dukes as were "westernized," above all the Grand Duke Nikolai Nikolaivitch, ablest of her husband's cousins.

Later, through a whole decade, Rasputin was to feed on her credulity.

Count Witte dared to write while his sovereign was still on the throne: "Having embraced orthodoxy, Alexandra seems to have succeeded in convincing herself that it was the only true religion known to mankind. Of course, the essence of orthodoxy still is and will always be a sealed book to her, but she is spellbound by the external forms of the ritual, such as captivate the eye. . . . It is easy to see how the religion of such a woman, who lives in the morbid atmosphere of oriental luxury, and is surrounded by a legion of perpetually cringing retainers, was bound to degenerate into a crude mysticism, unrelieved by loving kindness."

One virtue, however, Alexandra did not lack: she was a loving mother. Through that quality alone, in the beginning, Rasputin won her. He became the playmate of her children. The young man must have been welcome in the nursery. He had an attractive peasant strength that was new to the anæmic imperial children; his knack of telling stories was remembered in scores of Russian labor camps and monasteries. Little Alexis, born of a spent race, proved a weakling. His disease was hæmophilia, an hereditary malady passing only through the male line, showing itself in dangerous effusions of blood at slight cuts.

To this wan heir of all the Russias Rasputin wrote messages that are delightful.

Alexandra

Alexandra's signature on flyleaf of copybook in which she copied the Rasputin telegrams.

The empress has copied them down lovingly, noting only the year in which they were written.

"1907.

"To Aloysha (the czarevitch's 'little name']: My little one, I am with you as I eat my Eastertide eggs. We shall soon see each other, and then it will be as gay as it was in Kieff. Your Friend."

"February, 1909.

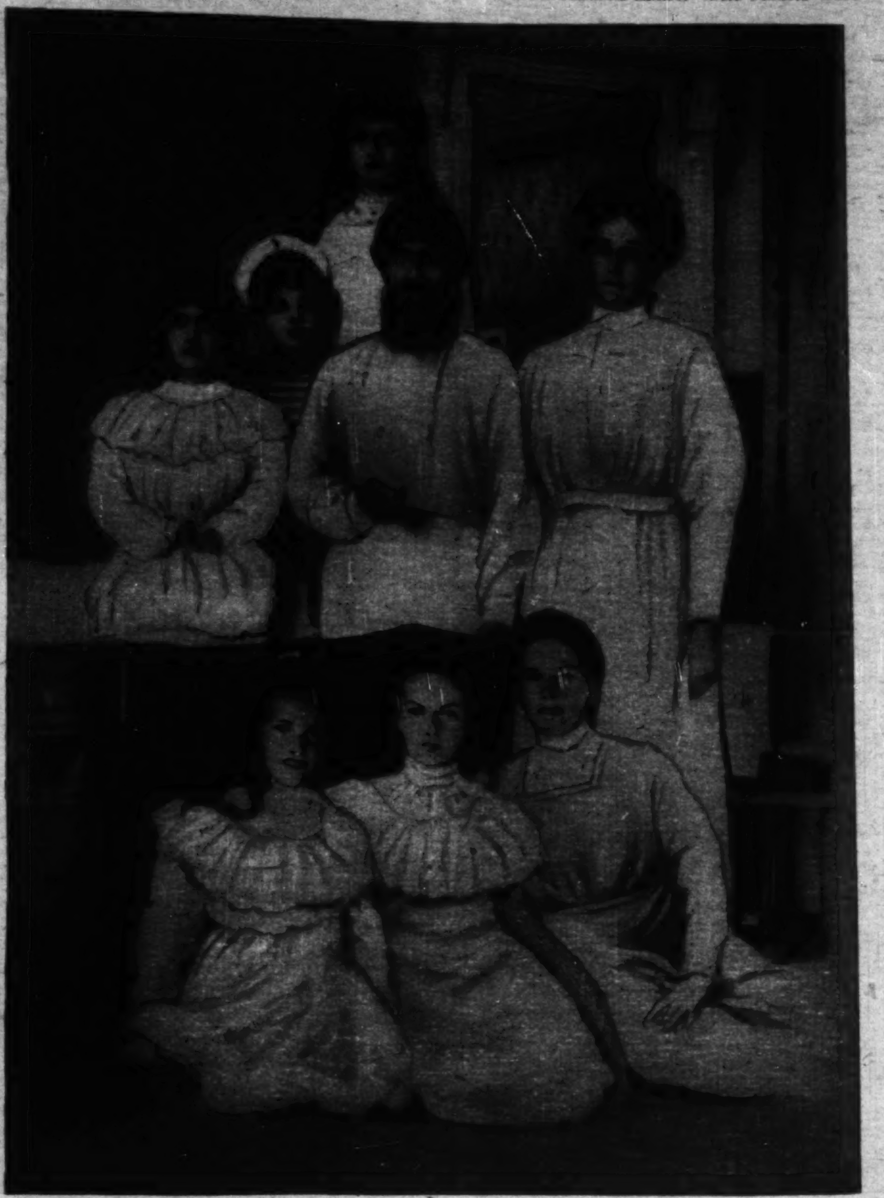
"My Sweet Children: Spring is coming, and the flowers are showing themselves. Our souls are growing in the same way. When you go out for a walk God looks down with a merry eye upon you. You don't see God, but he is with you on your walk. That is why you are so happy. Your Friend."

Undated.

"My Golden Children and Especially Dear Aloysha: My memory often goes back to the time when we romped on the floor together. I will soon come back to you. I would come now, but I must take an ikon to your Uncle Nikolasha [Grand Duke Nikolai Nikolaivitch]. Father Gregory."

"To the Czarevitch on May 6, 1909, his baptismal day.

"We are sharing in your happiness today. There have been signs from above before in history. There was a prophecy before the birth of the Savior, and now the same signs appear, because in Russia there is an autocrat annointed by Christ. Gregory."



This photograph was found in the empress' writing desk. It shows the four grand duchesses, the little czarevitch and his governess, the empress and her evil genius, Rasputin.

Undated.

"To the Czarevitch: Olya [another pet name for the little boy] will conquer because Olya will learn from example and because Olya is not created like other people. There was never such another little lad, and there never will be. He looks like Peter the Great. Peter was very wise, though sometimes his actions were bad. Olya does not permit himself to be tempted. That is right, for God himself said, 'Of him that hath much, much shall be asked.' Here are my sweets; eat them and be blessed. Alexis is always in my heart. Let him grow like the cedar of Lebanon and bear fruit of which Russia shall eat. Father Gregory."

Part III.

Rasputin as Don Juan.

RASPUTIN tried—unsuccessfully—to rid himself of the associations that clung to the literal meaning of his name ("lewd one") when he arrived at power. The empress aided him loyally. Early in his career at court the czar, at the request of the empress, ordered the name changed legally to the Russian word meaning "new."

A passage in the czarina's letter to her husband of Jan. 9, 1916, censures Commander Sablin, the emperor's naval aid, for still referring to "Rasputin." In the multitude of references to him in the empress' letters, Rasputin is only "Our Friend," or "Gregory," or simply "Grishka." In addition, Alexandra capitalizes, in New Testament fashion, the personal pronoun referring to him.

Alexandra's efforts were in vain. "Rasputin" he was to Russia and the world; "Rasputin" he will remain.

As to his origin, no one particularly cared until he came within the white light that beat upon the throne. Then various interested persons looked him up, aided by his father's uncommon name. The results were meager. Old Tobolsk police records showed merely that his parent, a stage driver usually out of work, had often been arrested for drunkenness and small theft.

Primarily, of course, the drunken stage driver's son ruled through physical magnetism. "Thanks to your character," cried the distinguished parliamentarian before he shot him in 1916, "stories are going about not only of your relations to the empress but to her daughters as well!"

How far was that particular charge true? The record left by the empress, naïve in so many respects and, therefore, revealing, fails to support it. Rasputin's own interest, indeed, lay in another direction: in maintaining Alexandra's illusion that he had been sent to the czar and herself from God directly. And Rasputin never forgot his own interests.

The empress' letters tell much concerning the lay preacher's character as it appeared to herself. In a letter to the czar on April 6, 1916, when Rasputin's debauchery in public had alarmed the czar's ministers, she wrote:

"I have been thinking so much of Our Friend—how the bookworms and Pharisees persecuted Christ, pretending to be such perfections, and how far they are from it now. Yes, indeed, a prophet is never acknowledged in his own country. And how much we have to be grateful for; how many of His prayers were heard! Where there is such a Servant of God the evil crops up around Him and tries to do harm and drag Him away. If they but knew the harm they do! Why, He but lives for his sovereigns and Russia and bears all the slanders for our sakes. How glad I am that we all went to holy communion with Him the first week in Lent!"

In general, Rasputin's amazing sexual career is substantiated by this record. He fascinated women extraordinarily; he climbed almost entirely through them; the nature of his relations with many women of the highest Russian society is unquestionable. His charm was increased by his internal struggle. Presumably, certainly in his early career, a strong will fought the demon of lust within him. "Everything attracted me, bad as well as good," he writes of the long vagabondage that occupied his early life. He describes the devils who brought unholy passions to him, sending him forth on the roads at night to escape. According to rumor, he had been a member of the flagellants, a religious sect in ill repute in Russia because they disturbed the peace of village communities. Rasputin denied this in his life story, and it is not proven.

When he first appeared in Petrograd society he believed, apparently, that his mission was to purge the aristocracy of immorality. An authentic incident, showing a compound of peasant fervor and peasant cunning, survives of this phase.

Countess Ignatieva was then the hostess of one group of St. Petersburg "spirituals." In her house the friends of the empress met to discuss spiritualism, religion, politics. Rasputin was introduced. Before the painting of a nude by an Italian master, which hung in the drawing room, the man of God stopped dramatically. He begged the countess to leave him alone to pray.

When the guests returned Rasputin's manner had changed. "Take the picture down!" he thundered. "Only sinners live in the sight of a naked woman. Woman is not a nude, base thing. A woman was the mother of Christ. She was made from Adam's rib. Down with the picture!"

Solemnly, Rasputin made the sign of a cross before the painting. As a servant removed the picture it flapped apart on the sacred lines his fingers had drawn.

Such is his first recorded "miracle." The record gives it without comment, omitting to state that a small penknife, carried in Rasputin's pocket, and used when alone, would have been a substantial aid to a miracle worker with a reputation to make.

No more is heard of Rasputin as a thunderer against the lusts of the flesh after his meeting with Mme. Ania Vyroubova, lady in waiting to the empress. This personage, who belonged to an official family, is described in Count Witte's memoirs as "a common, ignorant Petrograd miss." She was, however, the intimate friend of the czar, through whom she received her position at court. She was the occupant of a small house reserved for her within the palace inclosure at Tsarskoe Selo, and from there a friendship with the czarina, apparently as close as that with the czar, grew swiftly. The empress' letters constantly refer to her as "Ania," her own and Rasputin's and the emperor's most intimate friend.

Early in his career Rasputin had "miraculously" cured Ania of the effects of a railway accident. From then on she became his ally at court. Many of his telegrams are addressed to her; many to the empress were forwarded through her. When Rasputin was killed the empress writes in agony to the czar that she fears "they" (the executioners) will come for Ania next.

In the empress' collection two telegrams concern Mme. Vyroubova alone. They were sent when the lady-in-waiting accompanied their majesties on a trip to the Crimea in the spring of 1916 and are in a tender vein:

"Pokrofskaia, March 21, 1916.

"Ania, doubt nothing. Mother Nature will heal all, and you will be warmed after distress. Grishka."

"Pokrofskaia, April 10, 1916.

"We are far from each other, but the night makes me believe that we are close to one another. Let us embrace closer.

"Grishka."

The greatest bugbear in women's lives—now robbed of all its annoying after-effects

Dishwashing no longer leaves its tell-tale traces on your hands

It's the one household task every woman hates. Always associated with roughened skin, with hands that never seemed quite smooth and well cared for—dishwashing just couldn't help being the greatest of all household bugbears.

And now—think of finding a way to wash dishes that changes all this—a way that keeps your hands smooth and soft to the touch!

Just by using Lux for washing dishes! Lux that you always have in the house; that you use for washing all the things you care the most about.

Rids your hands of that in-the-dishpan look

Even though your hands are in the dishpan an hour and a half every day—Lux won't roughen them. It won't dry those important oils your hands depend on for their good looks.

Nature didn't provide against harsh kitchen soap when she supplied these natural oils. She secreted more in the hands than anywhere else—just because the hands need more. But even this abundant supply can't stand the attacks of strong soap.

Use strong soap three times a day in your dishpan and the tiny oil sacs of your hands are drained completely dry. Your skin, no longer sufficiently nourished, becomes rough and scratchy—your hands show unmistakable signs of the dishpan.

Lux helps to keep the supply of these beautifying oils constant. Even if your hands are especially sensitive, these gentle flakes won't roughen or redden them. Lux rids your hands for good of that in-the-dishpan look.

54 dishwashings in a single package

54 dishwashings—that's all the dishes morning, noon and night for nearly three weeks! It seems incredible that a single package of Lux will go so far, but just try it out.

All you need to a dishpan is one teaspoonful. One teaspoonful for the breakfast or lunch dishes; for the dinner dishes, perhaps you will need two teaspoonfuls. Even so, a single package will do at least 54 dishwashings.

No dull spots—not a trace of soapy film

So quick and easy—and yet so thorough! Silverware, glasses, china—not a dull spot, not even a trace of soapy film on the whole shining array. Your dishes have never been brighter or prettier—never so quickly and pleasantly washed. Just a swish of your dish-mop in these feathery suds—and out come your dishes clean and lustrous.

Keep a package of Lux handy on your kitchen shelf. Use it for the dishes always. Don't let dishwashing be a bugbear any longer. Begin washing today's dishes with Lux and rid your hands for good of that in-the-dishpan look. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Manufacturers of fine fabrics know that a single careless washing ruins lovely weaves and fades colors beyond recognition.

For their own protection the manufacturers listed above had thorough washing tests made by a famous university. Garments were washed not once but fifty times in Lux without loss of color, coarsening of texture or shrinking even of woolens. As a result these manufacturers are urging women to wash fine fabrics in Lux.

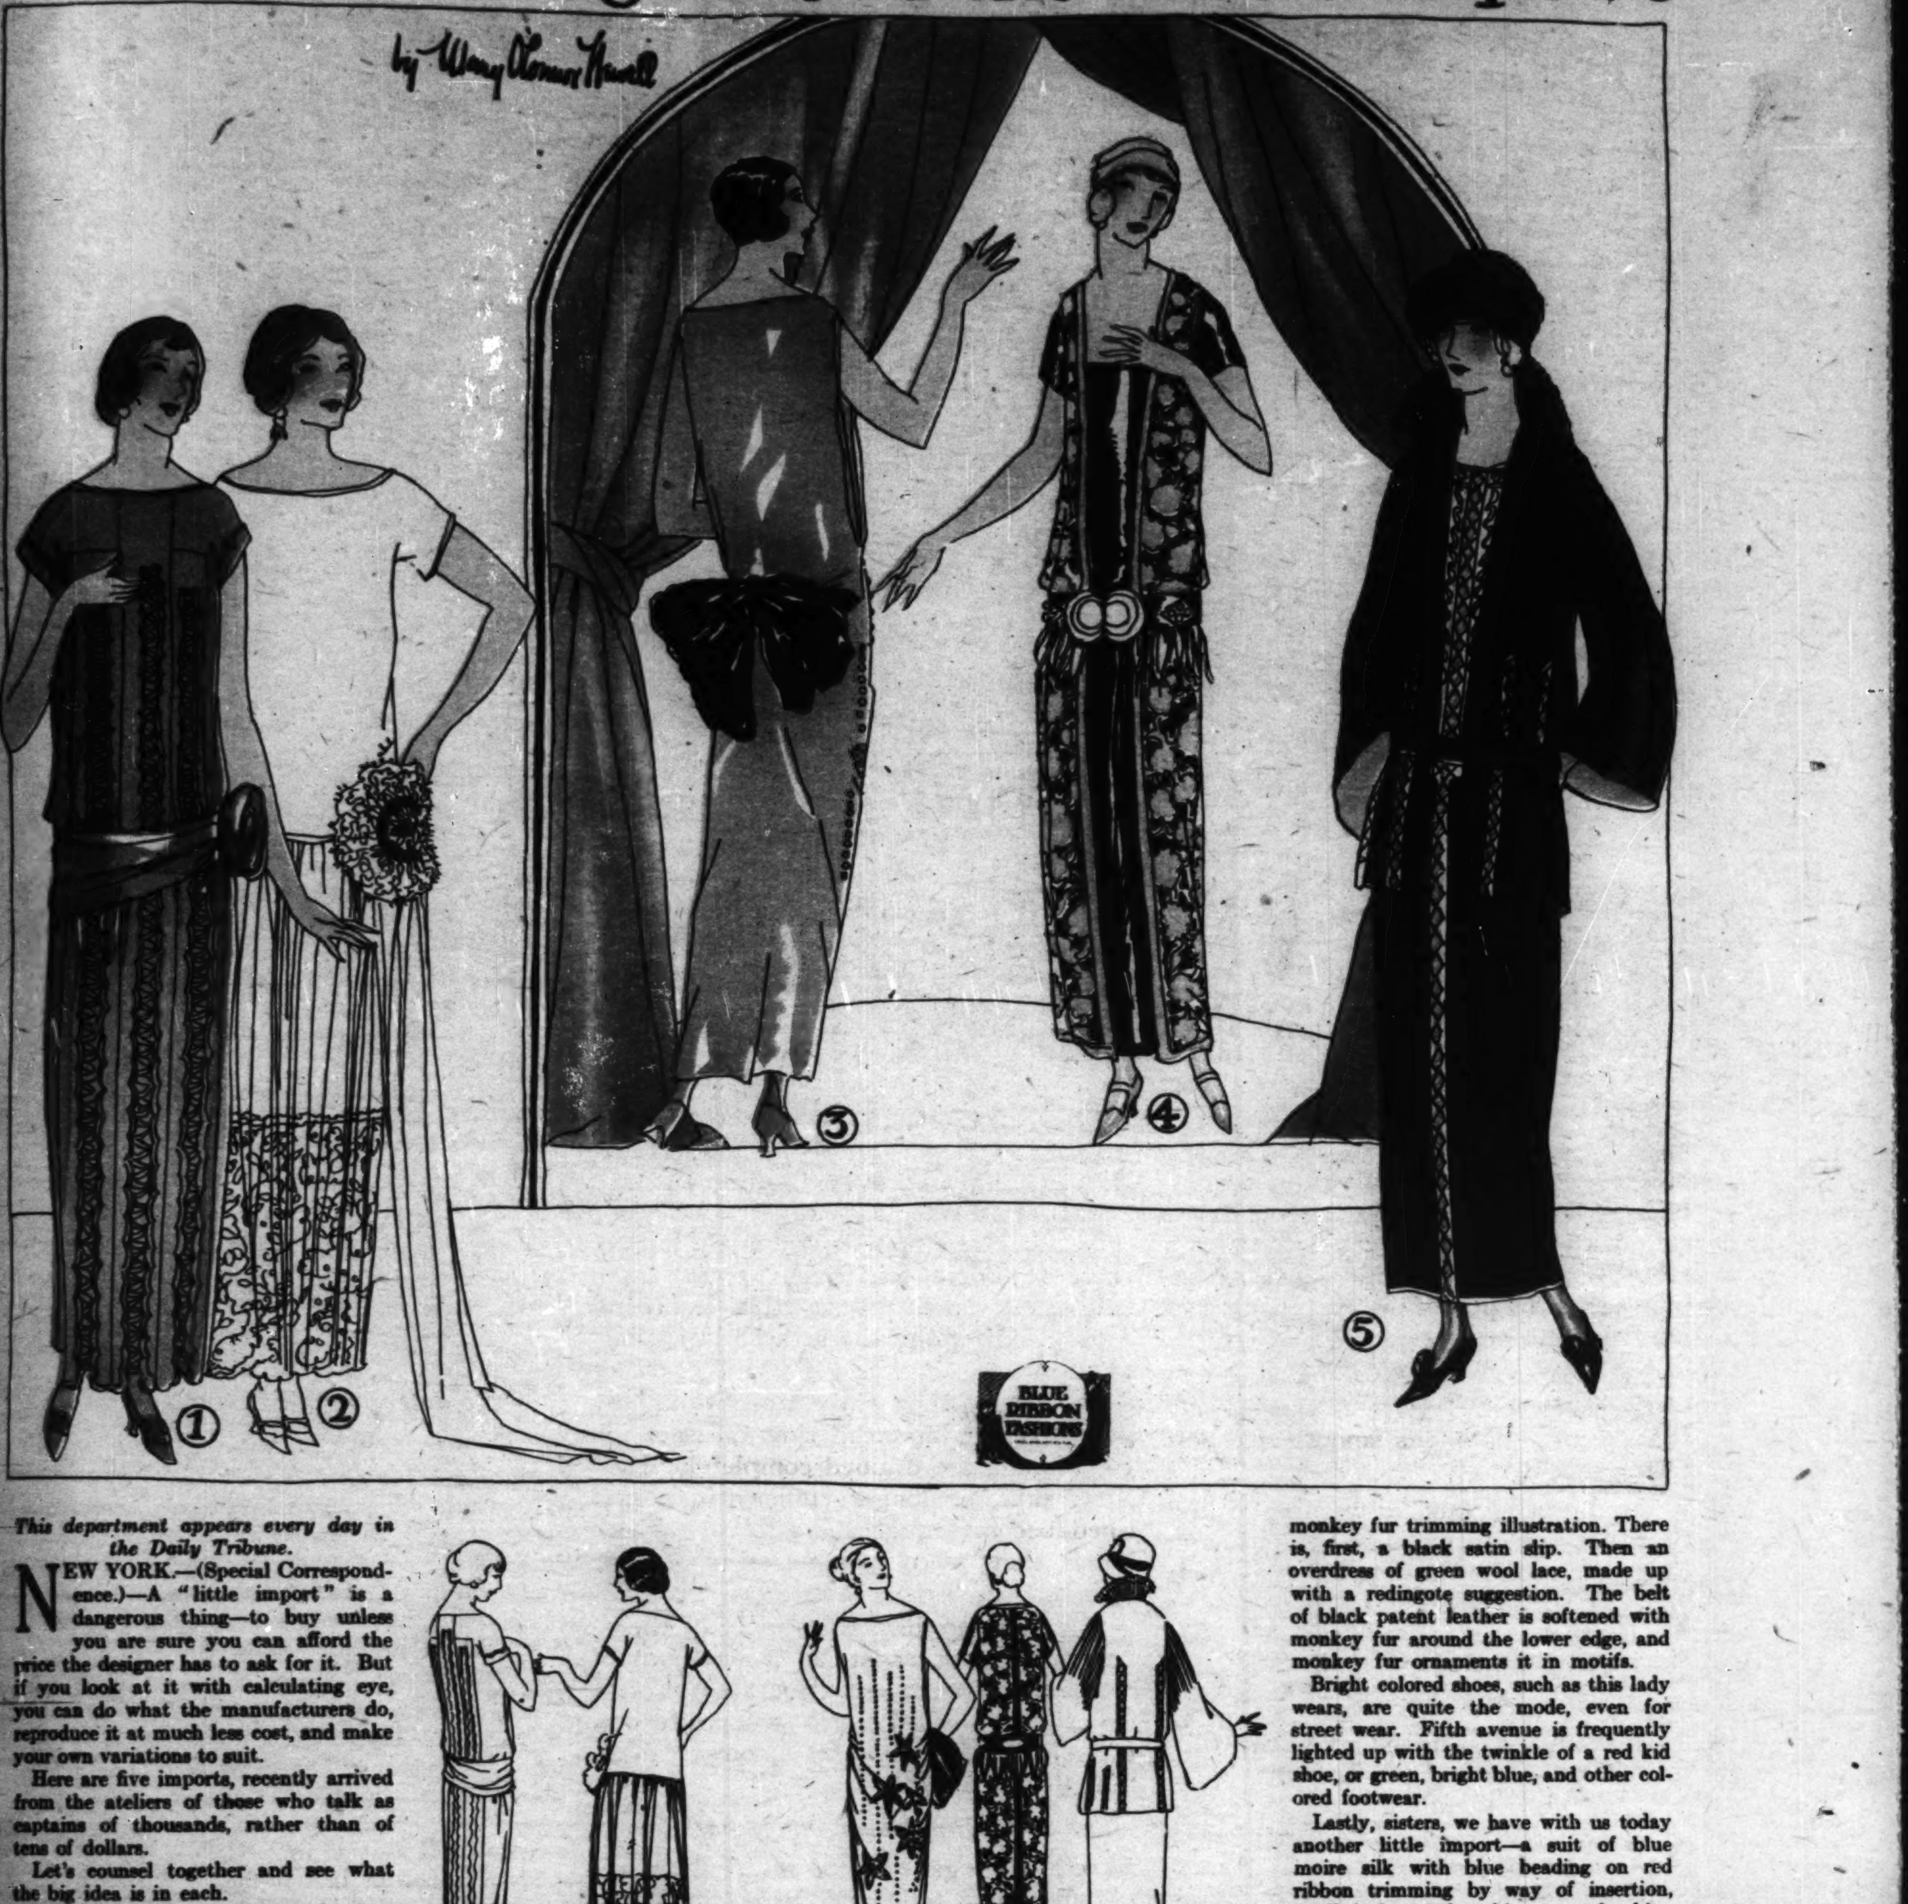
Detecting the "Big Idea" of the "Little Import"

by Mary O'Connor Newell



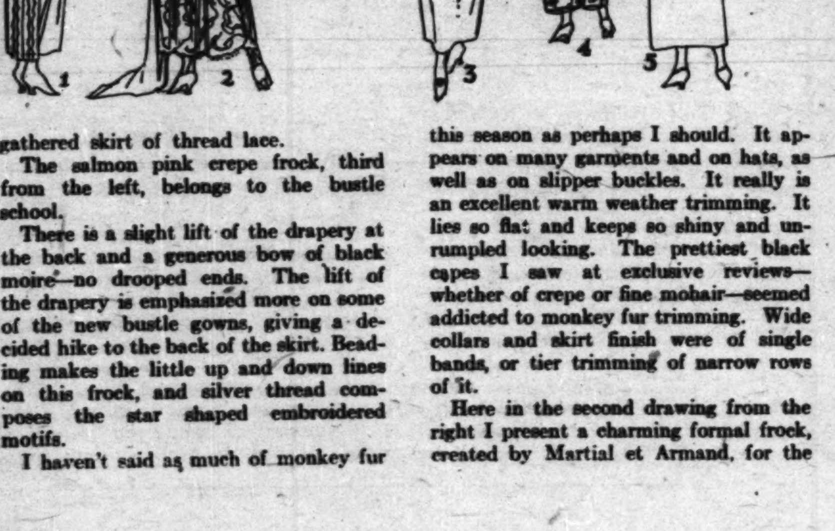
This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—A "little import" is a dangerous thing—to buy unless you are sure you can afford the price the designer has to ask for it. But if you look at it with calculating eye, you can do what the manufacturers do, reproduce it at much less cost, and make your own variations to suit.

Here are five imports, recently arrived from the ateliers of those who talk as captains of thousands, rather than of tens of dollars.

Let's counsel together and see what the big idea is in each.

For the first figure to the left it is laying three plaits boxwise down the front and cutting a piece out of the top of each, as one would do with bread for an oyster loaf. But instead of putting the piece back, as one does with the oyster loaf, these edges are laced together with ribbon. You wouldn't scallop the edges of the loaf, but here the plait line is scalloped. Rose crepe is used. Nothing more remains to do to make the dress quite luscious but to lay a soft girdle of the fabric around the figure, and fasten it with a soft rose of the same. Do you recognize the Renee chic? She is fascinated with up and down lines.



As for the second dress to the left, from Patou, the great sunburst of lace, centered with coral beads and sequins, and the train thereof constitute its particular claim to distinction. Otherwise it's a hip line model of cream satin, with a gathered skirt of thread lace.

The salmon pink crepe frock, third from the left, belongs to the bustle school.

There is a slight lift of the drapery at the back and a generous bow of black moire—no drooped ends. The lift of the drapery is emphasized more on some of the new bustle gowns, giving a decided hike to the back of the skirt. Beading makes the little up and down lines on this frock, and silver thread composes the star shaped embroidered motifs.

I haven't said as much of monkey fur this season as perhaps I should. It appears on many garments and on hats, as well as on slipper buckles. It really is an excellent warm weather trimming. It lies so flat and keeps so shiny and unrumpled looking. The prettiest black capes I saw at exclusive reviews—whether of crepe or fine mohair—seemed addicted to monkey fur trimming. Wide collars and skirt finish were of single bands, or tier trimming of narrow rows of it.

Here in the second drawing from the right I present a charming formal frock, created by Martial et Armand, for the monkey fur trimming illustration. There is, first, a black satin slip. Then an overdress of green wool lace, made up with a redingote suggestion. The belt of black patent leather is softened with monkey fur around the lower edge, and monkey fur ornaments it in motifs.

Bright colored shoes, such as this lady wears, are quite the mode, even for street wear. Fifth avenue is frequently lighted up with the twinkle of a red kid shoe, or green, bright blue, and other colored footwear.

Lastly, sisters, we have with us today another little import—a suit of blue moire silk with blue beading on red ribbon trimming by way of insertion, applied also to the white crepe de chine blouse.

Note with carefully appraising eye that the sleeve is plaited at the top, and that the whole of the back of the collar also is solidly plaited, and, too, its ribbon heading. Verily, of the making of plaits there is no cessation in any corner of fashion's kingdom.

A great wide bow tied on the hip, tied on the hat, tied anywhere, is always present with a springtime costume. It frequently constitutes the only trimming of a dance frock. It need not necessarily, or even incidentally, be of ribbon. Using up the frock material in that way is a popular dressmaking diversion. As with a bustle gown of white moire worn at a recent club dance—a huge bow of plaited moire with long ends was its only trimming.

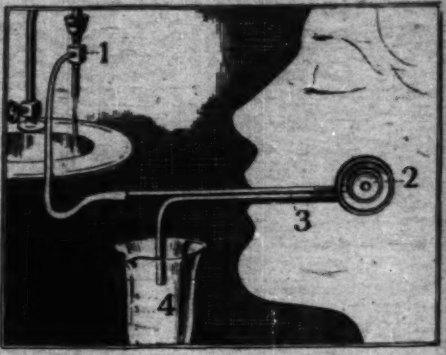
The strange effect six tiny glands have upon our teeth

Startling new facts made known by the medical profession



The Sialometer—

a new instrument physicians use to study the glands of the mouth

A small air pump[1] sucks the body of the instrument[2] tightly against the inside of the cheek, directly over the opening of the gland. The saliva passes from this chamber through a silver tube[3] to a measuring flask[4]. The instrument can be worn while talking and eating. (See Journal of Experimental Psychology, Vol. 1, p. 462.)

Experiments with this sialometer have shown the reason why our salivary glands no longer flow normally. Our diet today is so soft and easily swallowed compared to the food Nature intended us to eat that chewing has become almost unnecessary. And it is this chewing that makes the glands work. The sialometer shows they are 20 times more active when we chew.

Primitive man had practically perfect teeth. Chewing hard, tough foods kept his mouth glands working.

Six tiny glands in the mouth are slowly drying up, scientists say.

Experiments have shown that they no longer pour forth sufficient fluids to neutralize and wash away the acids of the mouth.

If these glands could be kept in a normal condition it is apparent that tooth decay would be checked. The acids that cause tooth decay would be neutralized and the food particles which cause them washed away as fast as they collect.

Pebeco Tooth Paste was first prepared by a famous specialist for this purpose. He discovered a substance which gently restored the natural continuous flow of the mouth glands.

He found that as his patients rubbed this substance on their gums, the general condition of their mouths improved and tooth decay was checked.

Realizing the importance of this discovery, he gave his product to a chemical house to develop as a tooth paste—the now famous Pebeco Tooth Paste. Like so many scientists, he received no return for his discovery.

The peculiar effect of Pebeco

Pebeco Tooth Paste has a peculiar effect upon the salivary glands. The moment it enters the mouth it causes the glands to pour out a copious flow of alkaline saliva. This continues for a long time. The acids are neutralized and washed away as fast as they form.

Pebeco is neither acid nor alkaline. It does not attempt to change the quality of the saliva; that is regulated by Nature. It merely increases it to the normal amount.

In addition to restoring the mouth glands to normal action, Pebeco cleans and polishes the surface of the teeth without injuring the enamel or edge of the gums.

Take home a tube tonight and note its invigorating taste. Notice how moist and clean your mouth feels. 50c at all druggists. Manufactured only by Lehn & Fink, Inc.

HERE'S A RARE PICTURE, if we do say it ourselves. King George of England and all his four boys leaving Windsor Park for a morning canter. Riding beside the king is the Prince of Wales. In the rear, left to right, are the Duke of York, Prince George, and Prince Henry. This photograph would stir the hearts of loyal Britishers. What is the first question your doctor asks you?

Health and life itself may depend on the answer

Men, women and children are its victims. It tears down strong constitutions—generates diseases—wrecks health. It has become a national menace!

That is why doctors everywhere are fighting constipation as a deadly enemy.

The body (like any other machine) is constantly throwing off a great quantity of waste. Unless this waste is got rid of regularly and completely every day, it generates deadly poisons that escape into the blood and flood your whole system. The body in such a state falls an easy prey to disease.

That is why doctors say that nearly all ailments can be traced back to constipation. That is why the first and most important thing your doctor wants to know is—

Are you regularly getting rid of the poisons that gather in the intestines?

Medical science knows that drugs and cathartics offer only temporary relief—and that in time they actually weaken the intestinal muscles so that they cannot act by themselves at all.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants which soften and increase the bulk of the waste matter. This greater bulk gently encourages the intestinal muscles to act, and at the same time strengthens them by offering just the resistance they need.

Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast—yeast in its natural fresh form. Recent experiments have shown that yeast corrects constipation only when its cells are alive and active—that it loses its laxative effect when these cells are "killed" and dried.

Eat two or three cakes a day—plain or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night. If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

Send for free booklet, "The New Found Value of Fleischmann's Yeast in Building Health." The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"And now I never need laxatives"

"I was run-down and badly constipated," writes a business girl, "and had one boil after another. For several months I added 2 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast to my diet every day. The boils disappeared after the first week and now I never need laxatives."

It does feel good just to Breathe!

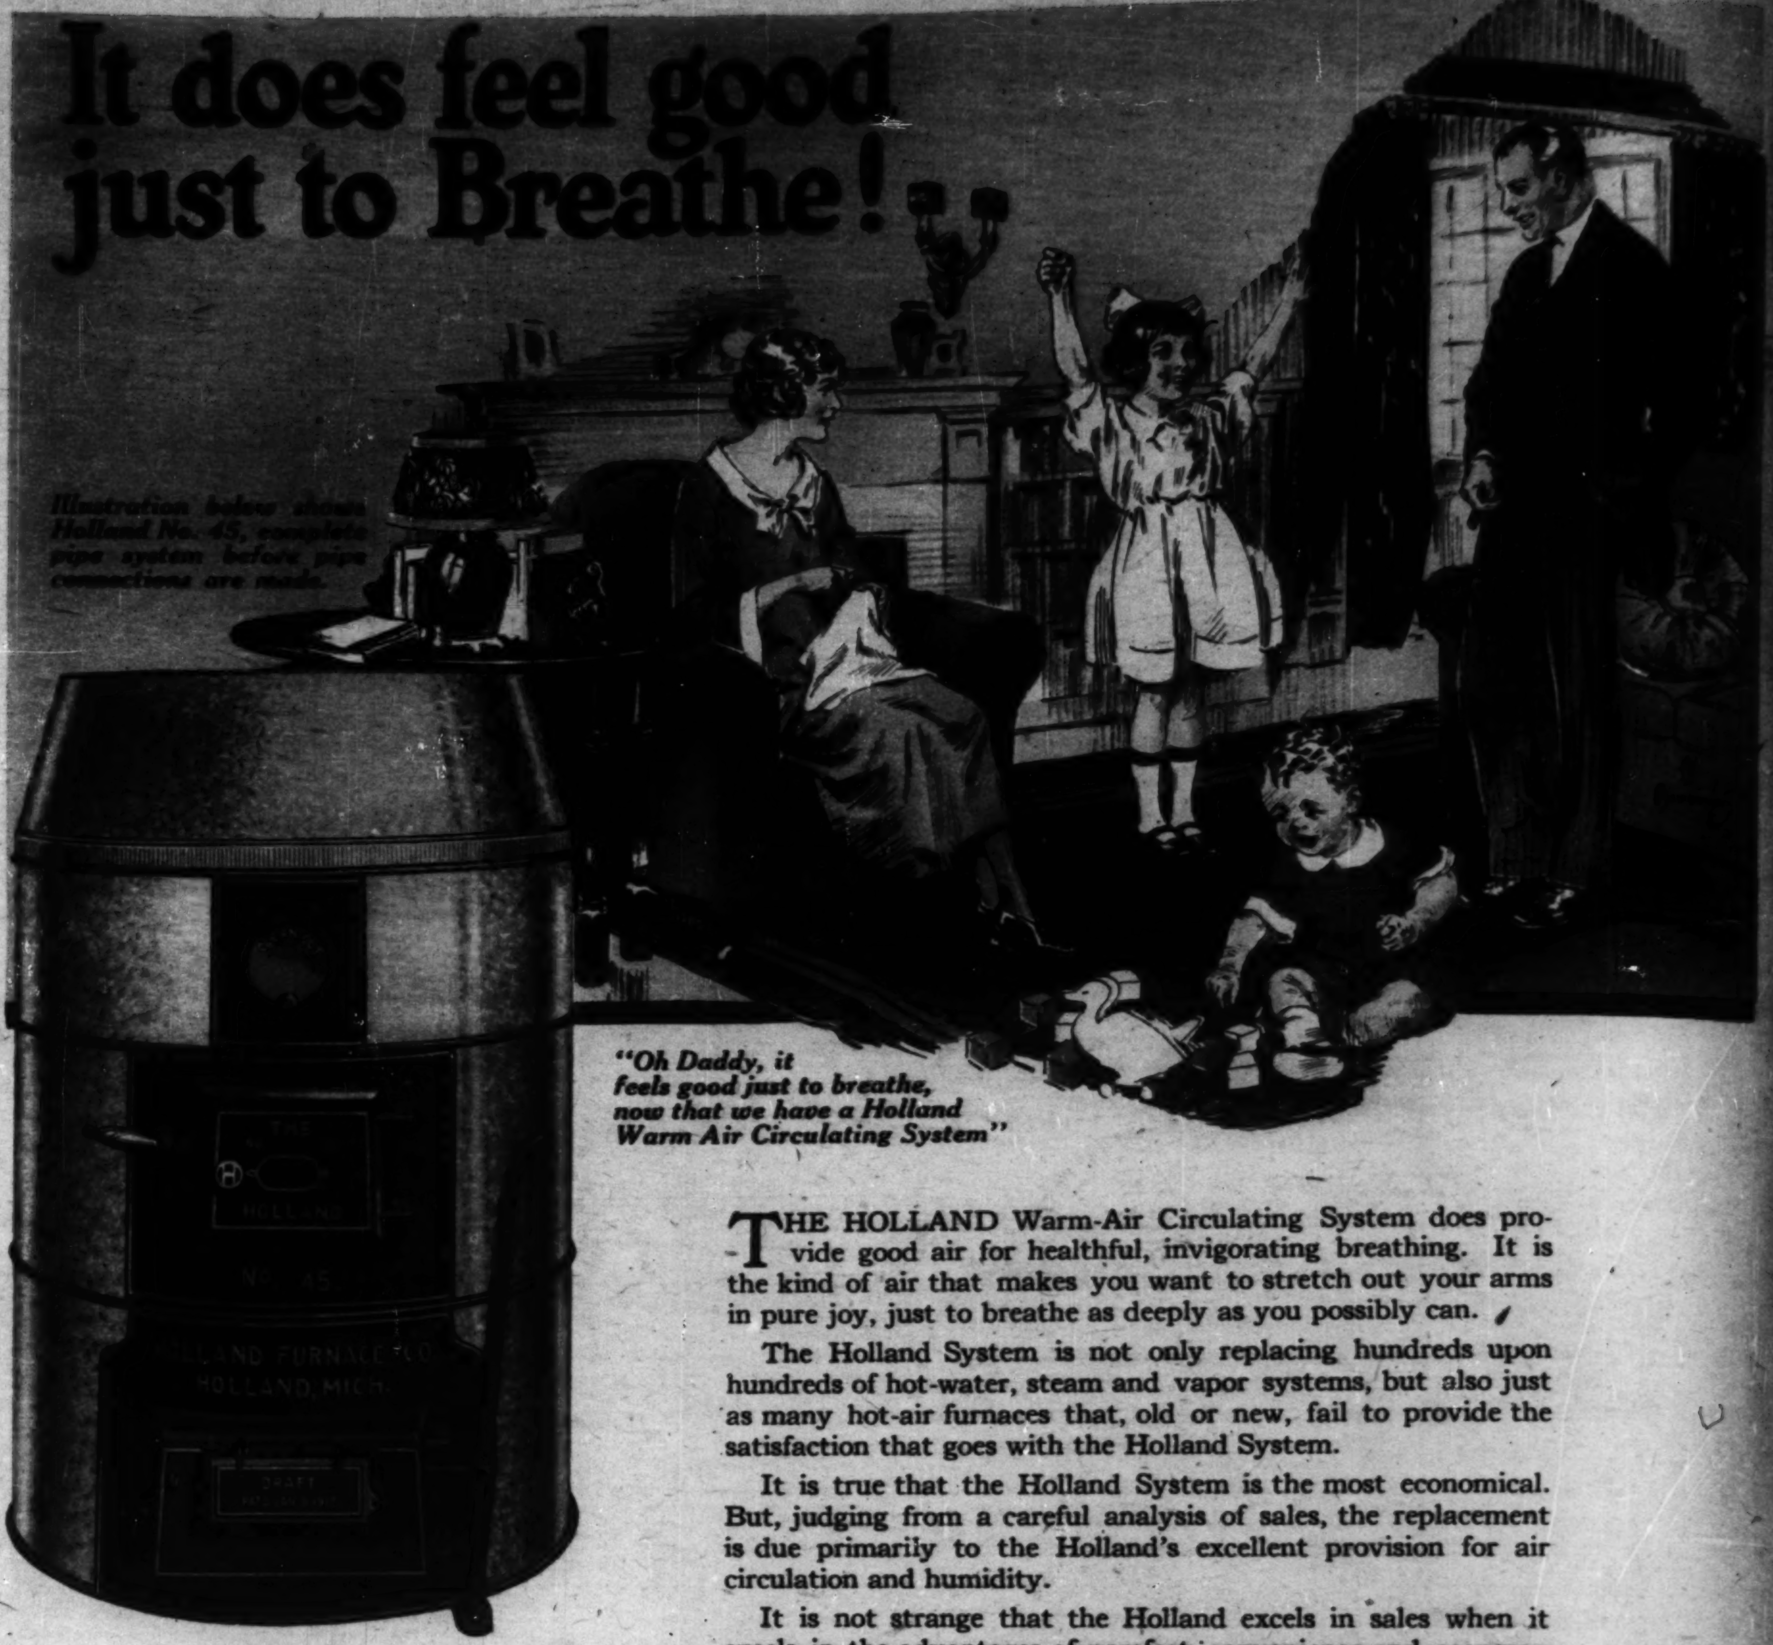

Illustration below shows Holland No. 45, complete pipe system before pipe connections are made.

"Oh Daddy, it feels good just to breathe, now that we have a Holland Warm Air Circulating System"

THE HOLLAND Warm-Air Circulating System does provide good air for healthful, invigorating breathing. It is the kind of air that makes you want to stretch out your arms in pure joy, just to breathe as deeply as you possibly can.

The Holland System is not only replacing hundreds upon hundreds of hot-water, steam and vapor systems, but also just as many hot-air furnaces that, old or new, fail to provide the satisfaction that goes with the Holland System.

It is true that the Holland System is the most economical. But, judging from a careful analysis of sales, the replacement is due primarily to the Holland's excellent provision for air circulation and humidity.

It is not strange that the Holland excels in sales when it excels in the advantages of comfort, convenience and economy—the very things that the home-owner pays for when he buys a heating system.

There is one right way to buy a heating system for your home. Buy it yourself! And if your home is already built, buy it in your home. Buy from a representative of a proven concern; one able to shoulder all the responsibility. And get the factory price!

Holland men are not only heating experts. They are gentlemen; the kind of men whom folks like to meet in their homes.

Right now—before house-cleaning—is a good time to take care of your furnace problem. No one else is permitted to install the Holland. Make sure of your installation by calling up a Holland Branch today, or writing the General Office. Asking for information will not obligate you in the least.
